White House Asks 3-Ply Act to Ban Gold Clause Suits

Move Seen as Clearing Way to Take Part in Stabilization.

U. S. to Offer Par, New Bonds for Old

Message Hits Court Use to Sabotage Effort for Recovery.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Closing out the door on further gold clause suits against the Government, urging on Congress yesterday by President Roosevelt, was regarded as clearing away another obstacle to this country's participation in an agreement for international stabilization of currencies.

There were no indications yesterday, beyond this development, that a currency stabilization agreement is imminent, but for several months the trend of the Roosevelt Administration has been to look with friendly and favorable eyes on stabilization proposals. This was most clearly indicated in a recent speech by Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., asserting this country was ready to discuss stabilization proposals.

Justice Harlan F. Stone, in an opinion dissenting from the damage theory set up by the Supreme Court in its decision on validity of the resolution abrogating the gold clause in Government bonds, was the first to point out that the high tribunal's opinion might operate "to interpose a serious obstacle to the adoption of measures for the stabilization of the dollar."

Stone Suggested Course.

Indeed, in that connection Justice Stone suggested the action—withdrawing the privilege of suits on gold clause obligations—which the President yesterday urged on Congress. From the day the Supreme Court handed down its epochal gold clause decisions Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, other Government legal advisers and the President have pondered taking such action and it is known that more than one of those studying the problem regarded Justice Stone's observation as containing substance.

The President in his message to Congress made no reference to currency stabilization, but he contended that the legislation he proposed was necessary to remove the power of "a few to harass and embarrass sovereign action by the Government when taken for the benefit of all."

Mr. Roosevelt contended that unless the right to sue under the gold clause is withdrawn "the continuing possibility of actions by litigious persons leaves open the continuing possibility of speculation" and that there is no public interest in permitting "a handful of private litigants to exploit the general public in the hope of wholly speculative profit."

In conclusion he contended that "not only justice to the holders of our currency and our securities who support and rely on our policy of equal and uniform treatment to all, but also the interests of our entire people require that the Government of the United States make it clear that it can not and will not consent to the use of its courts in aid of efforts to sabotage the operations of the Government or in aid of private speculation."

"This proposal reasserts and makes definite the control of the Congress over the securities and money issued by the United States of America," he added.

In this general language, with repeated emphasis on the "interests of our entire people" and reference to the control of Congress over the country's money, the President was thought by some to be referring in a veiled manner to the effect of the Supreme Court decision on future monetary moves, including stabilization.

Three Specific Provisions.

The President asked for the action on his proposals before this session of Congress ended. His proposals, though closely related, were divided into three specific provisions, as follow:

1. Authority to the Secretary of the Treasury on request of holders of gold clause securities of the Government to redeem them in cash, dollar for dollar with accrued interest, or at the holder's election to exchange such securities for non-gold clause securities with the same interest rate or maturity.

2. Termination of any consent which the Government may have voluntarily given to be sued on its securities, coins or currencies.

3. Reaffirmation of the fixed policy to make payment to all holders of Government securities, on "an equal and uniform dollar for dollar basis" and "on this basis alone."

Bitter Debate Expected.

Although some of the conservative element in Congress privately snorted at this program, contending it was "piling repudiation on top of repudiation," the President's message was received on Capitol Hill without arousing any immediate comment. Consideration of the proposal is expected, however, to call forth another extended, and per-

Paris Is Cool To Eden's Talk On New Pact

Britain's Envoy Explains Signing of Treaty With Nazis.

By the United Press.

Paris, June 27.—Anthony Eden, British statesman, left by airplane for London tonight, only mildly successful in explaining Great Britain's lone action in signing a naval accord with Germany restoring the Reich as a sea power.

("The whole thing is on the knees of the gods," Eden said upon his arrival in London, according to dispatches from England.)

Eden's two visits to Paris and conversations in Rome with Premier Mussolini were surrounded by secrecy and the few, brief, vaguely worded communiques issued in both capitals gave little clew to the results of the British efforts.

Eden told Premier Pierre Laval, for example, that London is favorable to proposals for speedy negotiations on all outstanding problems as yet unsettled which were outlined in the Anglo-French communique of last February.

Among these issues is the proposed aerial accord among Italy, France, Britain, Belgium and presumably Germany. Italy and France have indicated they are still in favor of that, and presumably told Eden so in his talks during the past ten days on the Continent. The Germans are favorable, so it seems, now that this accord shortly may be arranged with all five nations participating rather than one or the other proceeding to sign an aerial aid pact with another.

Meanwhile, however, bilateral negotiations for aerial aid pacts among any two of these States possibly will proceed—all eventually to be bound together in the major western air aid accord.

These and other problems and how to treat them were believed discussed, and the French communique prior to Eden's departure even admitted that he had mentioned the Italian-Abyssinian dispute to Laval—but what he said officially remains another of these secrets.

The communique said:

"M. Eden, following his return from Rome, explained his conversations with Premier Mussolini there. We discussed within the basis of the February 3 communique how

Eva Coo Dies With Scarnici In N.Y. Chair

Blonde Slayer Goes to Her Electrocution With Composure.

Photographs Banned at Scene; Police Killer Second in Death.

By the United Press.

Ossining, N. Y., June 27.—As calmly as though she were presiding at her dinner table, Mrs. Eva Coo sat in the Sing Sing Prison electric chair late tonight and was executed for the insurance murder of crippled Harvey Wright, her roadhouse handy man. Leonard Scarnici, police murderer, followed her to the chair and was pronounced dead at 11:13 o'clock.

The 43-year-old murderess walked coolly into the execution chamber and was swiftly strapped into the same "death chair" in which Mrs. Ruth Snyder was electrocuted.

Her tranquil demeanor was in marked contrast to the near hysteria with which she waited in vain in the death house for the reprieve message from Gov. Lehman. It never came.

Died at 11:07 P. M.

Executioner Elliott threw the concealed switch and the erstwhile "Little Eva" stiffened as the current snuffed out life. She was pronounced dead a few moments later at 11:07 p. m.

Scarnici's attorneys failed today in a last-minute move to save his life, although he was taken into New York under heavy guard and soaked up sunshine stingrily in the first time he had been out of the death house for nearly two years.

Mrs. Coo had been held for ten months, during which time she faded from a buxom blonde to a scrawny, disheveled, gray-headed woman. She lost 40 pounds since a rural jury convicted her in the $12,000 insurance slaying of the crippled Wright.

Mrs. Coo was led into the death chamber clutching a handkerchief in one hand, calmly surveying the 30 witnesses and newspapermen assembled in the brightly-lit room.

Tells Matron Good-bye.

"Good-bye, darling," she said in a low voice to the matron, Mrs. Carrie Stevens, one of the prison officials who stood in front of her.

Her pudgy hands did not tremble in the slightest as attendants buckled the strap.

One of the straps was fastened too tightly and the former roadhouse queen muttered an involuntary moan.

"Little Eva" wore a blue crepe dress, trimmed with red and white flowers and a red trimming at the neck and cuffs.

Her dark brown hair, once golden blonde, was streaked with gray, but neatly combed. She wore black pumps, well worn, and beige stockings.

Mrs. Coo, fifth woman to die executed in New York State, sat behind a human chain of prison officials who screened the chair to frustrate efforts to photograph the execution.

She had verged on collapse as the fatal hour drew near and no word came from Gov. Lehman, who declined to intervene.

Faces Death Nonchalantly.

The swarthy Scarnici swaggered into the execution chamber chewing gum and smoking a cigarette.

"Don't make it too tight, boys," he grinned to the prison attendants who placed him in the chair.

"Is that O. K., warden?" Scarnici asked Warden Lewis E. Lawes, indicating the cigarette.

The warden nodded.

"All I want to say," continued the murderer, "is to give out a message to them people up in Albany—them double-crossers.

"I'm a better man than they are. And I thank you, warden. I'm all set.

"O. K. father," said Scarnici to the priest who attended him, as he touched the crucifix for the last time.

Only ten minutes elapsed from the time Mrs. Coo entered the death chamber until Scarnici's body was taken out of the electric chair and wheeled into the nearby morgue.

Brothers Set World Endurance Flight Mark of 24 Days in Air

Mississippi Pair Still Aloft as 5-Year-Old Record Falls at 3:13 P. M.; Crowd Cheers as They Fly Low Over Field, Grinning Broadly.

By the Associated Press.

Municipal Airport, Meridian, Miss., June 27.—The airplane Ole Miss, piloted by two grimy but hilariously happy brothers, Fred and Al Key, set a new world's endurance flight record at 3:13½ p. m. today, after 24 days in the air.

As the official timer's watch ticked the 554th hour, forty-first minute and thirtieth second that the little silvef-coated monoplane has been aloft since it left the runway at Municipal Airport here June 4, a huge crowd roared its congratulations.

"Boy, are we happy," were the first words from the brothers as they exceeded the five-year-old record established by another brother team, Kenneth and John Hunter, at Chicago in July, 1930.

With Fred, younger of the brothers, at the controls, the oil-besmirched plane dipped low over the airport and the brothers, wearing broad grins plainly visible to the ground, waved to the crowd.

Straw hats were tossed in the air from the crowd. Bands played and a ringing cheer went up.

While there was little doubt the new mark will be accepted by officials of the National Aeronautical Association, flight records must await the indorsement of that organization.

J. D. Sellers, directing official for the N. A. A. in charge of checking the official time on the flight, tonight wired the association's headquarters at Washington the following:

"Al and Fred Key established a new endurance record at 3:13:30 p. m. and intend staying in the air until they are forced down."

Sellers said the barograph, sealed aboard the "Ole Miss" before she took off, will be sent to Washington when the flight terminates. Inspection of this instrument, he said, will determine whether the record will be recognized as official.

"We are going to keep her in the air just as long as she keeps perking," Fred said. Indications are the "Ole Miss" will soar for many more hours.

The brothers' immediate goal now is the 647-hour unofficial mark, which is not recognized by the N. A. A., set by Dale Jackson and Forest O'Brine at St. Louis in 1930. If the Keys remain aloft that mark will be surpassed Monday afternoon.

Few Families Ready to Quit Alaska Colony

Settlers Who Protested at Conditions Now Are 'Satisfied.'

By the Associated Press.

Palmer, Alaska, June 27.—Six families of the 200 Middle West farm groups brought here for the Matanuska Valley colonization project "signed up" today to return to the United States, officials disclosed, while a large group insisted emphatically that they would remain in the valley.

Two leaders of between 40 and 50 colonists who messaged protests to Washington last week, bringing about a call for a Federal relief administration report to the Senate, said they were becoming better satisfied.

"I'm going back to my '40' and homestead it like other settlers have done," said Pat Hemmer. "I want to get away from all this brickering."

Mrs. I. M. Sandvik, had joined Hemmer in signing the protest, said:

"I'm having the time of my life. I've never been in so much excitement before."

The intention of the six families to leave Palmer shortly soon was noised about and it appeared a few more families might join them.

The attitude of many of the colonists was shown, however, when the report reached here that it had proposed to Congress to take all the families out of the valley and return them to the States.

One colonist promptly said he and and his family "would go hide in

Rescue and Re-Rescue: A Lady Prefers Water to Cameramen

Girl Pulled Out 2d Time After Dive to Dodge Lens; Man Hunted Hour Proves Traffic Violator; Heat Continues Today, Tomorrow.

Like a midsummer's dream were the fantasies life played on the waterways of Washington yesterday while the sun shone bright and the day match the year's heat record of 95.

The Potomac flowed strong and murky when a sudden gust of wind caught a little catboat near Arlington Memorial Bridge late in the afternoon. It capsized. A cabin cruiser pulled the crew of two, a young man and a younger woman, dripping, from the water. Then the young lady saw photographers awaiting her on shore. She didn't want to face the flashlights, wet and bedraggled as she was.

Overboard she jumped and again she had to be saved.

Swamps border the Anacostia River's Eastern branch in Northeast Washington. There at twilight, firemen, policemen and the seagoing cops of the harbor police hunted a man his swimming companions thought drowned.

An hour they searched and dived, and then they found him—in his underwear, green shorts and a white jersey, up to his widriff in the bulrushes. He had been napping.

To the Ninth Precinct Police Station to get some clothes, they took him, riding royally in a scout car. Then Lieut. Frank A. Varney spied him.

"Where have you been?" Varney shouted. "We've been looking for you for two months on a reckless-driving charge."

"Oh, I've been around," nonchalantly responded the erstwhile swimmer, Charles W. Turner, 35, of the 300 block of Eleventh street southwest.

"Evidently," commented Station Clerk Bruce Black, booking him on Private Raymond D. Padgett's warrant.

In a cell Turner spent the night.

And the city sizzled, and up to 95 at 3:45 p. m. went the temperature, equaling the record set at 3:10 p. m. June 18.

Not until a sudden driving shower, dropping .05 inch of rain of rain on home-going Washingtonians, hit the town at 5:30 p. m. did the heat

Hughes' Kin Found Slain, Money Gone

Lawyer Had Large Sum; Woman Leaves Brief Case at Hotel.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, June 27.—Howard Carter Dickinson, New York attorney and a nephew of Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, was found shot to death in Rouge Park here today. Police said they believed Dickinson, here on a business trip, had been slain by holdup men.

After Police Inspector John L. Navarre had completed identification of the body through a telephone conversation with Charles E. Hughes, jr., two Detroit attorneys, Archibald Broomfield and George Krapfel, viewed the body and verified the identification.

Detectives who searched Dickinson's room at a hotel said they found no trace of a large sum of money they said they were informed Dickinson carried. In a telegram sent his wife at Tarrytown, N. Y., Tuesday, he had advised her he was carrying "a large amount of money."

Police reported tonight that an unidentified woman had deposited a brief case belonging to Dickinson in the hotel checkroom late this afternoon. The case contained an assortment of legal papers, but no significance was immediately attached to it.

Thrown From Car.

The body had been thrown from a moving car into soft earth along a deserted park road, the officers said. It bore two bullet wounds, one in the head and another through the chest. Both had been fired at close range. There were powder marks on the clothing. Dickinson was fully clad except for coat and hat.

Krapfel said he and Broomfield had conferred with Dickinson Wednesday afternoon, and that he had driven Dickinson to his hotel Wednesday afternoon, first stopping at a photographic shop where the New York attorney had left negatives of pictures of his wife and son, to be printed.

"That was the last I saw of him," Krapfel said. "We don't know what he did last night, and hadn't any idea of his plans. He was supposed to meet me this morning, and when he didn't we went to the police."

The attorneys told Police Commissioner Heinrich A. Pickert they became alarmed after reading a newspaper account of the slaying, since the description checked with Dickinson.

Time of Crime Fixed.

Police said they were certain the body had been placed in the park after 1 a. m. since the clothing was dry. It had rained heavily until after midnight. Park attendants found the body at 5:30 a. m.

Although members of Dickinson's office staff in New York declined to discuss his business here, Inspector Navarre said he determined that the attorney had been in Detroit as attorney for the estate of the late William H. Yawkey, millionaire lumberman, in connection with a $40,000,000 claim made against the estate by Arthur Carmichael, Detroit attorney, on behalf of his foster sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Carmichael Witherspoon. Carmichael declined to comment.

Dickinson, police said, had checked the claim in association with Charles E. Hughes, jr.

The body was sent tonight to Hartford, Conn., for funeral services and burial.

Charges on Luke Lea Quashed in Tennessee

Knoxville, Tenn., June 27 (AP).—Federal Judge George Taylor today freed Luke Lea, former Nashville publisher now in prison in North Carolina, of a charge of aiding and abetting in the alleged misapplication of funds of the closed Holston-Union National Bank of Knoxville.

Lea, imprisoned on conviction of North Carolina banking law violations, has petitioned for a pardon. His petition now is being considered by the North Carolina Governor.

The Knoxville charges have been pending since 1931.

Tax Shift Blame Forced on Senate, Hastings Charges

Slain on Business Trip

HOWARD C. DICKINSON.

Accusation Is Countered by Harrison, Defending President.

Country Deceived, Delawarean Says

Finance Body's Head Praised for 'Taking It on Chin.'

By Robert C. Albright.

President Roosevelt was bluntly accused in the Senate yesterday of forcing his Senate leaders to take the blame for the sudden decision not to rush through his "share-the-wealth" tax program in a few days.

The charge was made by Senator Daniel O. Hastings (Republican), Delaware, in a "defense" of Senate Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson, and Senator Pat Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

Senator Harrison immediately countered with a lengthy defense of the President.

"Whatever erroneous impression may have gone out to the country," pleaded the Mississippian, "do not blame it on the President. I take it on my shoulders. So let's close this page and not talk any more about it."

Concur in Report.

The skirmish came after both House and Senate had concurred in a conference report on the Administration bill extending some $500,000,000 in nuisance taxes for two years. The House originally had asked for a two-year extension, and the Senate for one.

It was as a rider on this resolution, rushed to enactment this week to prevent heavy losses in revenue resulting from otherwise expiring nuisance levies, that Harrison and Robinson, following a White House conference, originally proposed to attach the President's "share the wealth" proposals.

That course was abandoned Wednesday after the President told newspapermen it was never his intention that the new tax program he hurried to enactment in five days.

Hearings Next Week.

Experts for the House Ways and Means Committee, meanwhile, are laying the groundwork for opening hearings Monday, July 8, on the supplementary tax program. This date was fixed at a conference yesterday between Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, tax experts, and Ways and Means Committee Democrats.

Speaker Byrns predicted a series of "three-day recesses" by the House, once it catches up with its "must" legislation early in July, to give the committee time to work out details of the so-called "share-the-wealth levies. He thinks it will take Congress at least two months to enact the proposals.

A week's delay in opening hearings was decided on because of a heavy legislative load already carried by the Ways and Means Committee, it was said. Representative Samuel B. Hill, of Washington, chairman of the special tax subcommittee, which will conduct the hearings, is now directing subcommittee revision of the Guffey coal bill.

Tentative Rates Talked.

For more than three hours, Democrats on the tax sub-committee conferred with Secretary Morgenthau, Herman Oliphant, Treasury counsel, and Commissioner of Internal Revenue Guy T. Helvering, discussing tentative rate schedules. Later, Representative Robert L. Doughton, of North Carolina, Ways and Means Committee chairman, announced the hearings postponement. Doughton left on a week-end trip to his home State last night.

Senator Hastings, a minority member of the Senate Finance Committee, said he had never known a Senator "to make a false statement with respect to what the President wanted."

"I stand here now," he said, "to defend the Senator from Mississippi in his statement on the floor of the Senate that the President wanted this new tax program

House Passes Ship Subsidies By Eight Votes

Administration Measure Goes Through, 194 to 186, After Filibuster.

By a scant margin of eight votes, the Administration's ship subsidy bill, authorizing a broad system of direct subsidies to foster and rebuild the American merchant marine, yesterday slipped through the House.

The vote was 194 to 186. It followed a three-day filibuster that slowed down House consideration and yesterday forced the Senate to lay aside its motion to call up a companion measure. The engrossed House bill now goes to the Senate, where further action this session is doubtful.

Maladministration Feared.

Assailed by a militant minority as "incapable of efficient administration and inviting maladministration," the House measure, which authorizes indefinite appropriations for the promotion of foreign commerce, was contested every inch of the way through the House.

A roll call was demanded after a standing vote showed 145 for the measure and 131 against. On the record count 55 Republicans joined with 139 Democrats for the bill, bill, while 40 Republicans, 3 Farmer Laborites and 7 Progressives shouted "no."

A filibuster led by Representative Thomas O'Malley (Democrat), Wisconsin, forced reading of the 71-page bill before the vote.

Not as President Asked.

Although the President asked merchant marine legislation in a message to Congress, the bill passed yesterday by the House conflicted with his recommendation in two important particulars. In the first place, the House insisted on continuing the lending of Government money for shipbuilding. Secondly, the House refused to transfer quasi-juridicial and quasi-legislative duties of the Shipping Board to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Joining with Representative O'Malley in the House filibuster were two other Democrats, Wearin, of Iowa, and Moran, of Maine. They deluged the House with amendments, most of them unsuccessful, hurling charges that the bill would throw Treasury coffers wide open to shipping interests without fixed safeguards to the taxpayer.

Childless 12 Years, McNarys Acquire Blue-Eyed Baby Girl

Senator and Mrs. Charles L. McNary revealed yesterday that they have acquired a plump, blue-eyed 5-weeks-old baby girl—Charlotte, by name. The baby came from Philadelphia, and the "blessed event" has been held secret for about two weeks.

The Republican leader of the Senate and Mrs. McNary have been childless during their 12-year marriage. Mrs. McNary, it was revealed, has always loved children.

The climax came five weeks ago when a friend of Mrs. McNary died in Philadelphia after giving birth to a baby girl. The father was unable to support the infant and Mrs. McNary heard about it.

She went up to Philadelphia, saw the baby and fell in love with it immediately. The father gave his consent. The Senator was willing. And back came the baby to the Hay-Adams house, where the McNarys live while in Washington.

Charlotte, the nearest the Senator's wife could get to Charles in a girl's name, was examined by Dr. Sterling Ruffin, noted specialist who attended Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, before the family finally decided to take her. He pronounced her, Miss Helen Kiefer, the Senator's secretary, said last night, "a perfect physical specimen."

The Senator, it was revealed, has not escaped some of the burdens of parentage. The first night of Charlotte's residence in the Capitol there was no nurse for her. She cried and the Senator had to spend a good part of the night walking the floor, testing effectiveness of different soothing devices. Since then Charlotte has acquired a nurse.

Baby's Noon Day Meal Results In Eviction From the House

By the United Press.

The House of Representatives paused in its deliberations yesterday to evict from the gallery Miss Hilda Jean Parker, 8 months old, who was having her noonday meal at her mother's breast.

Evert Parker, who said he and his family had hitch-hiked to Washington from Newport, Tenn., brought his wife and four children into the gallery. He wore overalls. The children—Kathleen, 6; Earl, 4; Bruce, 2, and Hilda Jean—were barefooted.

As Hilda Jean began to take her lunch, Representatives paused and looked up in astonishment at the unusual sight. For five minutes no one did anything, but then Joseph Sinnott, House doorkeeper, went up to the gallery and said to Mrs. Parker:

"Would you mind feeding the baby in the ladies' room?"

The Parkers left the gallery, and Sinnott returned to his post, shaking his head in a bewildered fashion.

"I have never seen anything like this happen in the 40 years I have been here," he said.

Parker had cards admitting him to the congressional galleries, signed by Senator Huey P. Long (Democrat), Louisiana, and Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), Virginia.

"We hitch-hiked up here," Parker said, "because the relief wouldn't do nothing for us down in Tennessee. We left home when Hilda Jean was only 3 weeks old. It took us a long time to get here."

New NRA Act May Be Needed, O'Neill Asserts

Administrator Says He Finds a Hitch in Law Governing Codes.

By Felix Brauer.

Additional NRA legislation at this session of Congress is "not impossible," James L. O'Neill, NRA administrator, said yesterday.

Following a series of conferences with members of the Federal Trade Commission, O'Neill said that present plans for voluntary codes can be only partially worked out under the present act. He declined to indicate the nature of possible legislation, adding that policies had not been completely determined.

Conferences with the Federal Trade Commission, O'Neill said, concerned principally "whether there will be a flexible approach toward fair trade practice provisions." He said that conditions have changed so much that trade practice provisions "based on 10-year-old decisions" would not be of much help. He added that NRA had kept pace with business.

Meanwhile, the NRA continued its policy of not encouraging submission of voluntary agreements. O'Neill said that this did not mean that agreements would not be considered but that business organizations should not go to any great expense until policies are decided upon.

Duties are Divided.

O'Neill announced definitely that the NRA and the Federal Trade Commission would work together in considering agreements and that the commission would be the final authority on trade practice provisions. It is expected that NRA will handle labor provisions as specified by the new law, covering wages, hours and child labor, and that the commission will handle trade agreements with a view to determining whether they come within the antitrust laws.

The NRA administrator hinted that there may be a joint organization of the NRA and Federal Trade Commission.

"We don't want to make it necessary for business organizations to go to two places with their agreements," he said.

An announcement defining policy and the manner in which agreements will be handled will be made within the next two or three days, he added.

O'Neill revealed that one of the questions under consideration was the manner in which retail business could be handled. He said that particular study is being given the question of competitive relationship between chain organizations and independent stores.

"We are not approaching the question, however, with the idea that we have much ground to go on," he said.

Agreements Suggested.

One of the suggestions given consideration, O'Neill revealed, is a revival of the President's re-employment agreements in use before the adoption of codes. As codes were adopted the agreements affecting business with codes were terminated, with the result that only a few businesses continued to operate under the agreements.

Asked whether there would be a drive for re-employment agreements similar to the one conducted at the beginning of the old NRA, O'Neill replied that "you must be sure that you have something to sell before you make a drive to sell it."

The whole spirit of the new NRA organization still is one of caution. Every foot of ground is being carefully examined before any steps are taken. Both the Federal Trade Commission and the Department of Justice will have a part in determining the legality of every move.

O'Neill said there had been no definite decision concerning the fate of the Blue Eagle, but he added that there had been discussion of adoption of a symbol, probably to be used only as a label on merchandise manufactured under approved agreements.

While insisting that there would be no form of coercion to force maintenance of hour, wage or other NRA provisions, O'Neill did indicate that the NRA expected to make public the names of employers who have cut wages or increased hours since the codes were outlawed.

Fries Watches Wages.

Investigation of reports of wage cutting and increasing of hours will be entrusted to the recently appointed committee headed by Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries. O'Neill said the NRA had the names and addresses of many firms reported to have cut wages and lengthened hours. He said some of these reports had been inspired by competitors and others had been exaggerated. He said the Fries committee would weigh the information and give out reports after the facts had been investigated.

"This is not a spying operation," O'Neill insisted. "There will be no attempt at coercion."

He said that its purpose was to protect the 90 per cent of business men who are maintaining the code standards against the 10 per cent who may not. He said that NRA had no legal right to take any action.

"There will be no attempt to exert any legal or illegal pressure," he concluded.

Corporate Analysis Studied.

Meanwhile, another report, prepared by the old Research and Planning Division of NRA, was being studied. This report, which followed another showing that labor had suffered more than stockholders in the depression, was designed to show the increase in corporate wealth.

The report said that 200 of the country's largest corporations had increased their control of all corporate wealth from 49.2 per cent in 1929 to 55 per cent in 1931.

The report declared 100 corporations control one-third of the country's corporate wealth.

"These 100 corporations now emerge from the depression stronger [illegible]," the report said.

Between You and Me

Wild Boys on Capitol Hill Stirring to Life; A Quick Clean-Up; New Deal Parade.

By Raymond Clapper

ON the theory that the devil finds work for idle hands, congressional leaders want to clean up legislative remnants in the next two weeks—pausing incongruously to observe Independence Day—and then take a series of recesses for several weeks while House and Senate committees draft the President's bill to tax wealth.

Up to now Mr. Roosevelt has kept Congress so busy with "must" legislation that the wild boys have had little opportunity to perform. But they are stirring to life again as Congress nears completion of its schedule. Bonus grabbers are lining up hoping to leap aboard the new tax bill. Inflationists have gathered signatures of almost a majority of the House to force a vote on the Lemke inflation bill, which calls for issue of $3,000,000,000 in printing press money to finance farm mortgages.

A few days ago the Senate rolled through the Bankhead farm home bill to distribute $1,000,000,000 in purchase of farms for tenant farmers. If the House finds any idle time it is apt to pass it. In an hour or two of free time in these days you can vote a billion dollars for anything. Chances of mischief in having Congress in session without any imperative work to do are too great for leaders to trifle with.

Congressional tasks are being cleaned up rapidly. The two-year fight over the Wagner labor disputes bill is over and the measure is ready to be signed and taken before the courts. The Eccles banking bill is being compromised with prospects of action shortly. Holding company legislation is near a final showdown.

Ship subsidy legislation is finished for the session also. The House passed the bill by a close vote, but simultaneously the Senate buried it for this session by sending it back to committee. It was found to contain gaps big enough to drive another Leviathan through. One Senator pointed out that a shipbuilder proposing to build a $10,000,000 ship, if he showed that the same ship could be built in Japan, say for $3,000,000, could draw on the Government for the $7,000,000 difference. In addition to that he could borrow from the Government, at low interest, 75 per cent of the $3,000,000, and thus put up only $750,000 of his own on a $10,000,000 operation. And in event of war the Government could take it over paying a "fair value," which some thought would mean under the language of the bill the total cost minus depreciation.

Next winter the Senate will try to tighten up the bill, to provide for a little less government in this particular business.

New Deal Parade: Democrats are selling the tax on wealth program around Congress by saying that 90 per cent of the increases will be paid in Wall Street, not out in the country. Nobody is interested in increasing taxes on the lower brackets where the big revenue possibilities are. It isn't good politics . . . Hugh Johnson took $25 per day expense money for his new New York works job instead of a salary so he wouldn't have to be confirmed by the Senate . . . The railroad pension act, thrown out by the Supreme Court, has now been broken into two bills. One bill grants the pension. The court can't throw that out because Congress has been voting pensions since the Government was founded. The other bill provides for taxes to finance the pensions. If that is thrown out it will be just too bad. Some other way of raising the money will have to be found or else borrow it. That's foxing the court . . . Leon Henderson, once one of the backstage powers in the old NRA, dropped from favor when he took his orders literally instead of reporting only the innocuous facts he had gathered. Now he is leaving the Government. On the other hand, a Government publicity agent is being released because he produced too little. He had been on the job six months, seen his boss three times, written one report which was not published. That's the kind of a man the Government ought to keep. In the Government it is not the things you don't do that cause trouble . . . The abortive effort to attach the tax on wealth to the nuisance tax resolution is now being referred to as the putsch that failed . . . Two hot weather rumors: One is that when Farley leaves the postoffice to run the 1936 campaign Roper will step in and John Dickinson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, will be promoted. The other is that Frank Walker, head of NEC, will land in the postoffice job.

Another instance of the disappearance of States' rights insofar as public expenditures are concerned is provided by the Federal Government's crackdown on Gov. Talmadge's State highway department.

Of a total of $25,500,000 which will be available for Georgia roads January 1, more than $19,000,000 will come from the Federal Government. This money will be given to Georgia only on strict conditions laid down by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace. He insists that Talmadge set up a new engineering organization which will be acceptable to Washington, that he revise salaries upward, that the State change its policy and allocate roads for the State as a whole and not for favored parts of the State. Contracts must be let and enforced without fear or favor. Secretary Wallace reserves the right to determine whether the steps taken by Talmadge are satisfactory.

It is a complete abolition of State rights in respect to road building and is made necessary by the fact that the Federal Government puts up most of the money.

States' rights statesmen tear their hair over expansion of Federal power, but scarcely a day goes by that they don't appropriate more money and thereby increase the responsibility of the Federal Government for supervising expenditures inside of State lines.

Administration Narrowly Wins Subsidy Fight

Democrats, a similar bitter attack forestalled consideration of the measure in the Senate. Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), New York, co-author of the measure, withdrew the bill in the face of the attack, but insisted the Senate would accept the legislation after studying it further. He said the American merchant marine is threatened with destruction without such encouragement.

Highlights of the bill are:

1. A United States maritime authority of five members, empowered to make shipping studies and investigations, and to report to Congress on scrapping of old tonnage, advisability of tramp shipping under American registry, construction of superliners, and the relative cost of construction or reconditioning in various coastal shipyards. Vests the new board with quasi-judicial and regulatory powers of Shipping Board Bureau.

2. Construction and differential subsidies, to be awarded by the authority. Construction differential subsidies allowed only where new or reconditioned vessel is needed to meet competitive conditions or to promote foreign commerce. Operating differential subsidies provide aid in operation of American vessels on an essential foreign service, where necessary to meet foreign competition. In addition, a so-called "fighting fund" to aid ship lines in trade promotion.

3. Transfer to the Maritime Authority of the Postmaster General's powers covering ocean mail contracts. Extends President's power to cancel ocean mail contracts already entered into. Authorizes the authority to negotiate for cancellation or modification of existing contracts, and substitution of a direct subsidy contract. Stipulates foreign mail be carried in vessels of American registry.

4. Administration of the construction loan fund transferred to the authority. Construction loans may be granted for ships to be used in coastwise trade. Minimum interest rate reduced to 4 per cent.

5. One year after passage of act, all crews of vessels receiving Government aid must be composed of American seamen, excepting passenger vessels, where 25 per cent of the steward's department may be aliens eligible for citizenship. Except in emergencies, eight-hour day required on vessels of more than 100 gross tons.

6. Joint Transportation Board, composed of the Secretary of Commerce and two members each of the Maritime Authority and the Interstate Commerce Commission to promote the development of both rail and water transportation, with the co-operation of both agencies.

Way Is Cleared For Works Plan Building Start

Roosevelt Gives Approval to 63 Projects Under PWA Supervision.

President Roosevelt cleared the way yesterday for construction of the first group of non-Federal projects under the works program. He approved a total of 63 such projects to cost $21,289,628. They will be constructed under supervision of the PWA.

All of the approvals were based on grants of 45 per cent of the cost to communities in which the work will be done. The remaining 55 per cent will be borrowed by the governmental subdivisions either from the PWA revolving fund or from commercial sources. In this way the cost to the Government in most instances is not expected to exceed the $1,143 per year per man average limitation set up by the President.

In each instance the work will be done by contract, with as many workers as possible drawn from relief rolls. The projects are scattered through nearly all the States. In many instances contracts are expected to be awarded as soon as legal formalities are disposed of and the work begun.

No One at Work Yet.

Meanwhile, more than ten weeks after signing of the works bill no one actually has been put to work except administrative and office workers and a few additional CCC men, although recruiting still is far from the 600,000 quota which ultimately is expected to be reached.

Heads of the three principal divisions of the works program—Secretary Ickes, head of PWA; Harry L. Hopkins, progress director, and Frank C. Walker, head of the Division of Applications and Information—conferred with President Roosevelt for an hour and a half yesterday. None of the three would discuss the conference except to say that they were considering matters of policy.

Secretary Ickes revealed that his $249,000,000 housing program was being held up pending approval of Comptroller General McCarl. He said the plans had been sent to McCarl by the Budget Bureau, but that he did not know why they were being questioned. The plans call for projects in 24 cities to cost $91,000,000.

Delay Unfortunate.

"The delay is unfortunate," he said, "because we ought to be under way. We are straining at the leash here."

Ickes said that there was no question of the right of the PWA to acquire land, as this right was specifically given under Title 2 of the Recovery Act, which has been extended. PWA is being handicapped, however, by the ruling of a Federal Court at Louisville, that it has no right of eminent domain. A decision from the Federal Court of Appeals at Cincinnati, on this question, is expected soon.

Secretary Ickes claimed credit on behalf of the Office of Education of the Interior Department for the youth program announced Wednesday by President Roosevelt. Secretary Perkins said yesterday that the plan had originated in the Children's Bureau of the Labor Department.

Coughlin Friends Jeer Park Board

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 27.—Superior Court Judge James J. Kelly today opened the door to legal determination of the dispute between the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, Detroit priest, and the Chicago Park Board over Soldier Field.

At a hearing in which local followers of the founder of the National Union for Social Justice booed counsel for the board, which has refused him use of the Lake Front Stadium, Judge Kelly overruled the board's demurrer to Father Coughlin's petition for a writ of mandamus.

He set July 2 as the date for hearing of the priest's plea that the board be compelled by court to grant him use of the stadium for an open-air mass meeting. The dispute then will be decided on its merits.

A dozen uniformed police were called in to help deputy sheriffs keep peace in the courtroom when some 500 adherents of the priest flocked to the courtroom as the case was called. Judge Kelly ordered the corridors cleared of a throng of others.

Up-to-Date Estimate Of U. S. Finances Made

By the Associated Press.

A new and up-to-the-minute estimate of Uncle Sam's financial outlook is being prepared by Daniel W. Bell, acting director of the budget.

Planned for publication when Congress adjourns, the statement will bring up to date the budget submitted by President Roosevelt to Congress in January for the financial year of 1936, which begins July 1.

It will modify those early figures to reflect any changes the economic situation may have made in estimated revenue; take into account any tax revisions made by Congress, such as the wealth-tax program, and summarize all appropriations and expenditure authorizations voted by Congress.

Such a revision may mean a sharp change, up or down, in the $4,528,000,000 deficit Mr. Roosevelt estimated for 1936.

Railroads Urged to Buy Carrier Device Patents

Hearings on the investigation into administration of the Virgin Islands will be resumed in Washington Tuesday, it was announced yesterday by Chairman Tydings of the committee.

He said eight chief witnesses had been summoned from the islands and more might be called later. Important documents are also on their way here, and he said the committee might decide to go to the islands later.

Refrigeration Part Of Low-Cost Housing

Low-cost housing constructed by the PWA will be equipped with electric refrigerators, Secretary Ickes said yesterday.

Ickes received a letter from Representative Chester C. Bolton (Republican), Ohio, complaining because automatic refrigerators had been installed in PWA-financed apartments in Cleveland.

"I think occupants of low-cost housing are entitled to refrigeration," Ickes said. "Maybe Mr. Bolton would have us leave out the plumbing, and maybe tallow dips could be used for lights."

Ickes pointed out that much of the electric refrigerator industry is in Ohio.

Tabloid Editor Hits Capitalism As Ignoring Art

Author Says Newspapers Need Aid to Cast Off Private Abuse.

The House Committee on Patents reopened its hearings on the bill for establishment of a Federal Department of Science, Art and Literature with appearance as a "witness" yesterday of Emile Gauvreau, New York tabloid newspaper editor and author.

Gauvreau read from a prepared statement that the committee chairman, Representative William I. Sirovich, of New York, said was intended to give a veteran newspaperman's view on the bill, which is a project for making the Federal Government the patron of United States art, science and letters.

The statement attacked newspaper publishers and the existing economic order with frequent references to years of experience as reporter and editor. It said, of publishers:

"Money comes first. Art columns, for instance, are not used . . . unless art dealers buy advertising. This also applies to music . . . Sex and money is the formula that rings the cash register and builds up great circulation . . . I have seen great plays ruined overnight by critics who wrote with poison pens simply to gratify their personal animosities . . .

"Journalism, as a profession, has a scientific as well as artistic function. It needs all the monetary encouragement a great Nation can bestow upon it in order to wrest it out of the hands of political privilege and private abuse so that it may grow as a servant rather than master of all the people of this great democracy."

As for the economic system, Gauvreau, in his statement, found that it encourages study in the "creative" fields of art, science and literature and then laughs at the student's efforts to create, applauding, instead, the "go-getter."

Gauvreau pictured the student as finding himself in "an alien world," where, if he dares "to struggle, he is considered Bohemian, an outcast, someone to be excused." He added that genius is "snuffed out by a caste arrangement which shuns the creator and chooses the go-getter, even if that go-getter happens to be a boy carrying messages."

At conclusion of Gauvreau's statements, the committee was shown for the first time an architect's drawing of the proposed "Temple of the Muses," a towered, cross-shaped building that would house a number of theaters and auditoriums as an adjunct of the "Department of Science, Art and Literature."

Coast Guard Aviator Sets Altitude Mark

Cape May, N. J., June 27 (AP).—Lieut. Richard L. Burke, in charge of the Coast Guard Air Station here, today set an unofficial world's altitude record for light amphibian planes with load by reaching the height of 18,100 feet in an hour and ten minute flight.

Lieut. Comdr. Edward M. Rounds, of the National Aeronautical Association, described the height as a new record. Lieut. Burke, flying the same Grumman plane of the scouting type in which he set a speed record earlier in the week, carried a load of 500 kilograms, or 1,102 pounds.

Raw Cotton Export Drops 38 Per Cent

By the Associated Press.

A $33,000,000 drop below 1934 exports of raw cotton during the first quarter of the present year was reported yesterday by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

The chamber said, however, this was virtually balanced by substantial increases in the shipment of manufactured products, leaf tobacco and petroleum so that export trade held to a steady level.

It said the 1,221,000 bales of cotton shipped represented a decline of 38 per cent below both the 1934 and the five-year average, and that one-third of the total went to Japan.

Court Quashes PWA Plot Case Against Seven

Adkins Cites Errors in Indictment Based on Texas Project.

Justice Jesse C. Adkins in the District Supreme Court yesterday dismissed charges against seven men indicted in connection with an alleged attempt to defraud the Government through the changing of plans and specifications for a Willacy County (Tex.) irrigation project.

One of the seven is Charles R. Olberg, formerly an engineer in the Public Works Administration, who bears a national reputation as an engineer.

Others are Perry W. Welty, an engineer associated with the Fort Worth (Tex.) office of the PWA; William A. Harding, described as an "influential and dominating factor" in the conduct of the Willacy County Water Control and Improvement District, No. 1; Leonard C. Hammond, Harry W. Cole, and James P. Barry, officers of the Hammond Lumber Co., of California, and Frank P. McElwrath, a private individual "interested in the application for the grant and loan."

Two Plots Charged in One Count.

Investigation of the project was launched when it was learned that the original plans, which called for an open gravity canal, were to be changed to a piping pressure system.

In dismissing the indictment Justice Adkins ruled that it charged two conspiracies in one count. One, he said, named all seven men and the other named at least six.

Even without that fault, the opinion continued, it was "very doubtful if either * * * of the separate charges sufficiently describes a conspiracy to defraud the Government." There was no showing that the alteration of the plans would make the $7,500,000 project, of which $4,853,000 was to have been advanced by the PWA, more costly, or that the board could not have lawfully caused the change.

U. S. Undecided on Course.

Justice Adkins pointed out that a proposition to employ Olberg at a salary double his Government pay was merely a "bait" dangled in his eyes and was not shown to have been done with intent to cause him to recommend a more costly construction.

Justice Adkins said that because of the defects in the indictment it was not necessary for him to pass on the constitutionality of the PWA nor any of the other constitutional questions involved. Government officials last night had not determined whether they would seek another indictment or let the matter drop.

3 Policemen to Quit July 1; 56 Vacancies

Maj. Ernest W. Brown yesterday announced retirement of three policemen, effective July 1.

They are Pvts. Frank E. Kenney, Sixth Precinct; W. C. Handley, Third Precinct, and C. W. Cine, Eleventh Precinct. After the three retirements, Maj. Brown said, there will be 56 vacancies in the department. The Civil Service Commission will be asked to certify 38 names from the list of recent applicants and 18 men will be chosen from the old register of those eligible for appointment, it was announced.

It is expected all vacancies will be filled by July 15.

Gas Company Discount Is Ordered Continued

The Public Utilities Commission yesterday ordered continued from July 1 to September 30 the 8½ per cent discount which has been in effect on Washington and Georgetown Gas Light companies' bills since August 1, 1932.

The discount has been continued by a series of extensions. Meanwhile the valuation of the gas companies has been fixed by the commission and the question of rates has been the subject of a hearing. The rate hearing has been recessed until the latter part of next month.

Bank Guaranty Law Extended For 2 Months

Senate, House Concur; Bill Sent to White House for Signature.

The present deposit insurance plan, guaranteeing deposits in full up to $5,000, yesterday was extended two months beyond the June 30 expiration date, by concurrent action of the House and Senate.

A joint resolution extending the law and paving the way for fuller consideration of the Administration's pending banks bill, was sped to the White House for signature, even as a Senate Banking subcommittee completed revision of the controverted Eccles bank measure.

Earlier in the day, the House had amended the Senate's deposit insurance bill, to provide for a two-month extension, insead of the one-year asked by the Senate.

Glass Speeds Action.

Unexpectedly the Senate concurred after Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), Virginia, arch foe of the original Eccles bill, made the following explanation:

"When the resolution was drafted, the Banking and Currency Committee of the Senate did not know and could not know when consideration of the banking bill could be completed, if at all.

"I am now happy to be able to state that the subcommittee has practically agreed on all major points involved in the bill, and has already informed the chairman of the full committee that the subcommittee expects to report to the full committee on Monday."

Title 2 Accord Seen.

Senator Glass, who moved Senate concurrence in the 60-day deposit insurance extension, expressed a hope that the completed Eccles bank bill, carrying deposit insurance features along with bank law revision and increased Federal Reserve Board powers, will be reported to the Senate shortly.

"That being so, there is no reason why the resolution should provide an extension for more than 60 days," he said.

Senate controversy over the Eccles bank bill has centered around Title 2, granting broader Federal Reserve Board control over currency and credit. Senator Glass declined to reveal what basis has been reached for accord.

But out of the maze of compromises put forward to break the Glass banking sub-committee's recent deadlock on the bill, speculation turned last night on one proposed major change in the law.

This proposal, it was said, would deny both the Secretary of the Treasury and the Comptroller of the Currency a seat on the board. Statutory membership on the board would be increased from six to seven. These seven members, serving with five Federal Reserve bank governors, would comprise the board's open market committee, controlling Reserve open market operations.

Extension of the present deposit insurance law beyond the June 20 deadline sidetracks indefinitely provisions of the so-called "permanent" plan, which otherwise would have gone into effect July 1, subjecting member banks to onerous assessments and graduated deposit insurance guarantees, beginning with 100 per cent of deposits up to $10,000.

Deposit insurance features of the Eccles bank bill, when and if that is passed, provide for full coverage of deposits only up to $5,000, as under the present law. Under the Senate draft, banks would be subject to a one-twelfth of 1 per cent assessment on insurable deposits. The House, which has passed the bill, proposed a one-eighth of 1 per cent assessment.

Roosevelt Pens 'Dear Bill' Note To Wm. Stanley

Cummings' Assistant Quits and Receives Friendly Letter of Regrets.

Another enrollment in the White House "Dear Bill Club" was disclosed yesterday.

William Stanley, two-fisted assistant to Attorney General Cummings, resigned to resume his law practice and at once received a letter of praise from President Roosevelt, headed "Dear Bill."

Observers recalled the list of members in the mythical organization, limited to New Dealers who quit and were addressed by their first names in White House notes, ranged from Gen. "Hugh" Johnson to "Don" Richberg, both former heads of the NRA.

The President wrote he accepted Stanley's resignation with "real regret" and complimented him on his "devoted service."

Before he went with the Administration in 1933 Stanley practiced law in Baltimore. Friends said he expected to reopen offices in Baltimore, Washington and New York. His home is in Laurel.

Cummings told reporters he was distressed over the resignation and would recommend appointment of a successor within a week or two. The resignation will be effective Sunday.

Stanley has been active in the handling of patronage distribution, the war on crime and in argument of cases before the Supreme Court.

As acting Attorney General last summer he supervised the search which resulted in the fatal shooting of notorious John Dillinger by Department of Justice agents in Chicago.

Several months ago Stanley represented the Government before the Supreme Court in a case which brought denial of a claim for an $18,000,000 income tax refund filed by Lord Astor. The Briton was represented by John W. Davis, former Democratic presidential nominee.

Stanley, in addition to his other duties, supervised the Bureau of Investigation, the Bureau of Prisons, war risk insurance matters, personnel, salaries and legislative studies.

Labor Measure Is Made Ready For Roosevelt

Hailed as 'Magna Carta,' Bill Certain to Be Contested in Courts.

The Wagner-Connery labor disputes bill, designed to protect the right of collective bargaining, was made ready for President Roosevelt's signature yesterday with adoption of a conference report by both the Senate and the House.

Taking the place of Section 7(a) of the old national industrial recovery act, the measure gives the Government more power over labor-employer relations than it ever had before.

Hailed by labor as a "Magna Charta," and by some business interests as certain to stir up labor disputes, the measure is certain to be contested in the courts. Many opponents of the bill have questioned its constitutionality.

Permits Direct Enforcement.

Under Section 7(a) the right of collective bargaining was guaranteed, but there was no definition of collective bargaining and enforcement was difficult. The new measure seeks to lay down rules for bargaining and permits direct enforcement by the courts.

The law will be administered by a labor board similar, if not identical, with the National Labor Relations Board, the functions of which terminated with the NRA decision.

The bill lists unfair labor practices which are outlawed and which the board is authorized to prevent. They are to interfere with, restrain or coerce employes in organizing or bargaining; to dominate or interfere with the formation of unions; to discriminate against workers for union members; to discharge or discriminate against an employe for filing charges against an employer; to refuse to bargain collectively with representatives of the employes.

Board to Be Independent.

The new labor board will consist of three members. It will have the power to appeal directly to the courts to enforce its findings. The board will be independent of any other Government organization.

Labor is given the right to bargain through "majority rule." In this way agreements binding on an entire group can be made by representatives selected by a majority in that group.

The board is given the power to decide whether representatives shall be selected by employer units, craft units or plant units. This provision has been one of the principal subjects of dispute in connection with consideration of the bill.

Hastings Hits The President On Tax Shift

tacked on to the joint resolution extending the nuisance taxes.

"No one here doubts that for a moment. No one doubts anything the Senator from Mississippi, Mr. Harrison, or the Senator from Arkansas, Mr. Robinson, says upon the floor.

"What irritates me is that the President of the United States, because of the loyalty of these two great men, should make them take the blame instead of taking it himself, when he finds that what he proposes is not meeting with the proper popular appeal which he thought it would receive. That is what I think is important to the country, and that is what I think is important to the Senate.

"No one in the Senate doubts where the insincerity lies, and if the country has been decieved, no one doubts who it was who deceived the country."

Hastings said the President "undertakes to escape this criticism and undertakes to show that he did not know anything about it or did not propose it at all by suggesting that there was no agreement that it should be passed by Saturday night."

Unanimous Agreement.

"Of course, the Senator from Arkanses did not say it should be passed by Saturday night, nor did the Senator from Mississippi say it should be passed by Saturday night," he continued.

"But undoubtedly there was unanimous agreement that it should be attached to the joint resolution providing for the extension of the nuisance taxes and that it should be passed this week if it were possible to pass it this week."

Hastings paid high tribute to the character of Senator Harrison, to his "popularity," and the "high regard" and "great love" members hold for him.

"Today our pity goes out for him," he said. "We are sorry for him and my only effort is to put the blame where it belongs and to compliment this great Senator from Mississippi in standing up boldly and taking it on the chin in order that he may relieve the great President whom he loves of an embarrassing position. * * *

"There are not many here who would do it, and I think it is to the great credit of the Senator from Mississippi that he is willing to do it."

The Delaware Republican said he would like to do something to make Harrison "a little easier and to make him unafraid to approach the reporters, because he has not any idea now whether he is going to be called upon to put the tax bill across next week or not." He said he hoped Harrison would have an "easier week unless he happens to be invited to the White House in the meantime."

"He does not know at all whether or not the President will withdraw it. He has not any more idea than I have. He has not any more idea than the President has, and the Lord knows that the President does not know what he is going to do," Hastings asserted.

Harrison Flushed.

Slightly flushed, Harrison arose to reply. He denied that the President's message, as charged by Hastings, "was a mere political gesture to combat 'share the wealth' propaganda."

"Nobody but the Senator from Delaware would believe the President is insincere. Has he ever made a political gesture since he has been President?"

He asked if the stock exchange bill, the social security bill, the unemployment relief bill, among others, were "mere gestures."

"The President was criticized then, but did he halt? No. He drove on through to enactment. Some of those who criticized him then are praising him now. The Senator from Delaware can not point to a single instance in a single message to Congress that was a mere political gesture, because no man has been more sincere, stronger in his convictions and more willing to carry through his program than the President of the United States."

The tall, gray Mississippian denied the President had made any "false" statement about what passed at the White House tax conference.

Wanted It Passed.

"The President wanted this legislation passed at this session of Congress, and whether it was first passed by the Senate or by the House didn't make any difference. He wanted it passed."

Harrison said he had urged that the tax message not be sent to Congress until the social security bill and the nuisance tax extension resolution had been approved, because he knew that "Senators like the Senator from Delaware" would seize the opportunity to oppose it.

At the White House, Harrison said, he expressed the hope that the House would originate the new tax legislation.

"The President was not opposed to that," Harrison insisted. "What he wanted was action. What the Senator from Arkansas said was absolutely what happened, and that was, if it was possible to attach the amendments to the nuisance tax resolution, that this be done. * * *

Snell Defiant.

"As one who sat in that conference, I say that nobody connected with the White House said the legislation had to be passed by Saturday night."

Harrison said he was willing "to assume the responsibility" for any other impression that went out. But he denied he said the action would be taken by Saturday night. That, he said, was what he sought to do, but it was "only a hope."

As experts laid the groundwork for basic hearings on the new tax program, House Minority Leader Bertrand H. Snell challenged the Democrats to bring out a bill that would "balance the budget" and check high Federal expenditures by touching the pocketbook nerve.

In other quarters there were threats to open up the whole nuisance tax schedule again and to repeal some of the more burdensome of these levies. This talk was offset by proposals to broaden the four-point tax program proposed by the President, by increasing suggested inheritance, gift and corporation levies, and dipping into the lower incomes. Ways and Means Chairman Doughton indicated, however, every effort will be made to adhere to the Administration's own outline. He said there was not time to work out a comprehensive tax bill.

The nuisance tax extension voted yesterday continues such levies as the 1-cent-a-gallon Federal tax on gasoline, the 3-cent postage rate and the 10 per cent toll on theater admissions. Opening up of tax schedules through the new bill will give force to efforts to eliminate the gasoline tax altogether, scale down the postage rate and revise existing taxes on so-called luxuries, ranging from chewing gum to automobiles, furs and jewelry.

Piquett, Lawyer For Dillinger, Draws 2 Years

Convicted by U. S. Jurors for Harboring Homer Van Meter.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 27.—The late John Dillinger's lawyer, Louis P. Piquett, whom Government prosecutors termed a "master criminal," was given the maximum penalty in Federal court today for harboring Homer Van Meter, Dillinger gangster.

Declaring Piquett, once a city prosecutor under former Mayor William Hale Thompson, did not "have the proper concept of the duties of a lawyer," Federal Judge Philip L. Sullivan, a long-time acquaintance of the convicted counselor, decreed he must serve two years in Leavenworth Prison and pay a fine of $10,000.

In contrast to his usual fiery outbursts when pleading for clients, the white haired Piquett was silent as sentence was imposed. He was convicted last Tuesday of arranging a "hide-out" for Van Meter and John Dillinger when the peace officers of the Nation were hunting them a year ago.

The Government, which regarded his case as a main objective in the campaign against what Attorney General Homer Cummings called "lawyer criminals," showed at Piquett's trial he made the plans for the "face lifting," operations the two criminals underwent in efforts to disguise themselves. Two surgeons testified the pair also had been operated on for obliteration of fingerprints.

Last January Piquett won acquittal on a Federal charge of harboring Dillinger. He contended then his actions were justifiable as part of the confidential relation between counsel and client. He agreed, however, in his last trial that he was not Van Meter's lawyer.

Piquett's own attorney vainly argued a motion for a new trial.

"The jury passed on this matter without interference from the court," was Judge Sullivan's reply. "It is very difficult to take a man's liberty, particularly the liberty of a man in one's own profession. I have known the defendant for more than 15 years. He is affable, amiable, but too easily led."

Piquett was allowed freedom on his previous bond of $12,500 until July 5 to permit an appeal.

Five Year Record Likely for Crops

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fincastle, Va., June 27.—The agricultural outlook in southwest Virginia is better than in five years, B. A. Warriner, district agricultural agent for southwest Virginia, said here on an official visit to W. H. Lyne, Botetourt County agent.

Mr. Warriner was emphatic in asserting that grass crops this year are the best he has ever known, with White Dutch clover prospects especially promising. This, he added, will mean much to livestock growers, since this clover is one of the best foods for fattening cattle. It is also a forecast of a more vigorous growth of blue grass next year, he said, since clover deposits nitrogen which is a great boom to blue grass.

Corn is the only crop for which prospects do not appear favorable, Mr. Warriner continued, this being largely due to the lack of warm weather. The outlook for burley tobacco, the bulk of which is grown in Washington, Russell, Lee and Scott Counties, is good, Mr. Warriner declared.

Tennis to Come Before a Duel, Says Borotra

Pistols Fired Into Air May Satisfy Honor of French Disputants.

By the Associated Press.

Wimbledon, England, June 27.—Tennis comes first, Jean Borotra decided today, and dueling second.

The 38-year-old "bounding Basque," who has officially accepted the challenge of Didier Poulain, Paris sports writer and expert swordsman, told All-England Club officials he would play out his scheduled appearances in the tournament here before returning to Paris to fight for his life.

"One must fight as a point of honor," the veteran internationalist remarked, "but I also am honor bound to play at Wimbledon, and that must come first."

Out of Singles.

Roderick Menzel eliminated Borotra from singles competition in five grueling sets yesterday, but he is entered for doubles play.

Because Poulain is as adept with the foils as Borotra is with the racquet, the latter—apparently the offended in their duel of words—indicated he would choose pistols. But his friends said the opponents' seconds were considering arrangements under which both would shoot into the air, thus satisfying the code.

Stands Packed.

Wimbledon was all a-dither over the spectacular Borotra's prospective battle and the stands were packed for his court battle with Menzel yesterday. But the Frenchman took the thing grinning, though serious, hinting it might ultimately prove to be "much ado about nothing."

The duel came about thus: Poulain charged Borotra let France down by declining to play singles in Davis Cup eliminations. Borotra replied, in the columns of Poulain's own newspaper. The writer decided he had been insulted, and challenged Borotra by registered mail. Borotra accepted, naming his old teammate, Rene LaCoste, and Gen. Pierre Alvin as seconds.

Suddenly Missing.

The girl saved on the Potomac was June Eaton, 18, of the 1600 block Fuller street northwest, and she was sailing with Isbel Jerry, 24, of the 1000 block Tenth street northwest.

When their catboat overturned, S. M. Nowlin and Frank Striplin, Memorial Bridge employes, sped up with a small boat, but it was George T. Zean, of the 300 block Eleventh street southwest, who finally saved the couple with his cabin cruiser, Gadabout I.

In northeast Washington, Turner had gone swimming with two companions, Frank Cady, of 1234 Thirty-fourth street northwest, and Leonard Herr, of Clinton, Md. All three are steamfitters, and they had been working on a Howard University job nearby.

After two hours, Cady and Herr found Turner missing and they summoned the police, and that led to the mass search and so to Turner's final tragic encounter with the warrant.

To add a serious touch, police reported two heat prostrations during the day. John Whaley, colored, 61, a laborer, of 204 Seaton court northeast, collapsed while working at Wisconsin avenue and O street northwest. Doctors at Emergency Hospital, where he was admitted, said his condition was not serious.

Robert Crosby, 40, also colored, of 1003 O street northwest, was overcome while at work at Twenty-fifth and Burns streets southeast. He was admitted to Casualty Hospital.

House Receives Bill Restricting TVA Yardstick

Military Affairs Committee Submits Measure and Advises Caution.

By the Associated Press.

The House Military Affairs Committee formally recommended a compromise TVA bill to the House yesterday, with an admonition that "Congress should be exceedingly and scrupulously careful to keep within constitutional limits."

The bill reported alters drastically the TVA amendments that passed the Senate and surrounds the Administration's vast power "yardstick" program in the Tennessee Basin with tighter restrictions.

Accompanying the majority report was another signed by the seven committee Republicans, asserting that "it is our opinion that further legislation is unnecessary." A separate report by Representative Kvale (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota, and Maverick (Democrat), Texas, also condemned the committee-approved legislation, but on different grounds. They contended it did not go far enough and that the purpose of TVA would be "largely defeated by enactment" of the measure, and the "hoped-for-TVA yardstick would be completely destroyed."

Meanwhile the opening of House debate on the hotly fought utilities holding company bill disclosed an Administration "cloakroom campaign" to re-insert the "death sentence" clause into the measure.

While the House listened to the opening speech by Chairman Rayburn (Democrat), Texas, of the Interstate Commerce Committee, 13 "campaign managers" were busy in the cloakrooms polling every member.

When those questioned showed leanings for the House compromise bill leaving holding companies' fate up to the Securities and Exchange Commission, a sales talk was made for the Senate-approved bill calling for abolition of all but "necessary" holding units by 1942.

One of those conducting the canvass, while declining to give figures on how the new House poll was going, said privately:

"It already shows we have more strength than we thought we had. We are certain that when the time comes to vote on the restoration of the Senate's holding company section we will have the votes to do it."

The Progressive bloc, composed of the Wisconsin Progressives and Minnesota Farmer-Laborites, has caucused on the matter and decided to support abolition solidly.

President Roosevelt has termed the measure too lax and Republican Representatives claimed it too stringent.

With eight hours of debate to follow the reading of the bill, and many amendments sure to be offered under the open rule, the leaders abandoned hope yesterday of getting the big bill through this week.

Britons Object To Early Action On Stabilizing

Paris Trade Parley Hopes, However, Delay Will Not Be Long.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, June 27.—Hope that the British government would not oppose currency stabilization indefinitely was expressed at the international chambers of commerce congress here today after British delegates accepted an American resolution urging steadier moneys.

Sir Alan Garrett Anderson, director of the Bank of England, headed the British group in the congress' stabilization committee which agreed to back the American gold stabilization resolution urging stabilization as an essential to trade recovery.

A few minor reservations were made by the British, Anderson managing to delete a demand for an "immediate conference" of interested powers.

Time for Study Advised.

His desire to lengthen the time element was echoed by Thomas J. Watson, head of the American delegation, who told the chamber in the only address by an American of the day's session:

"Trade barriers are not the only things that need attention if we are to stimulate trade.

"Stabilization of international currencies is equally important and should be analyzed carefully, but we should take enough time to study thoroughly this important question from the standpoint of fairness to all nations and permanent stability. We can not afford to take any chances by hasty action."

The Congress will vote Saturday on the resolution in which the British, American and French delegations concurred secretly yesterday. Its text will not be made public until then.

Easy on War Debts.

Watson, president of the International Business Machine Corporation, plunged full tilt into the delicate question of war debts, listing them along with trade barriers and erratic currencies as deterrents to world recovery.

Chiding the rest of the American delegation for treading cautiously in preparing its war debts resolution, Watson asserted the war debt question, until solved, would continue to be a "source of irritation in all countries involved."

"I hope this whole question can be settled on a basis that will be fair and considerate to the best interests of debtor and creditor alike," he said.

The Americans' war debts resolution, carefully worded, stated the present situation "should be re-examined and adjusted so as to meet practical possibilities," and it strongly dissented "from the argument that another war is unavoidable."

Wholesale Beef Drops; Retail Up

Cattle Price Decline Not Reflected in Stores.

By the Associated Press.

The Institute of American Meat Packers reported yesterday "substantial declines in the wholesale price of dressed beef during the past month."

"A study of current supply and price trends in the beef market," the institute said in a statement, "discloses that the wholesale prices of beef steer carcasses at both New York and Chicago on June 25 were from 11 to 22 per cent under the prices during the week ended May 18."

Figures compiled by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics showed, however, that while there had been a decline in cattle prices and wholesale beef in the past month the average retail beef price for May this year was 32.3 cents, compared with 23.3 in May, 1934, and 21.1 in May, 1933. The table showed the average retail pork price for May this year was 26.7 cents, compared with 17.1 cents in 1934, and 14.4 cents in 1933.

Woman's Death Probe Held Open by Coroner

Nyack, N. Y., June 27 (AP).—Inquiry into the death from a bullet wound of Mrs. Myrtle Bennett Best, estranged wife of a new York broker, was ordered held "open indefinitely" today by Dr. J. W. Giles, Rockland County coroner, after hearing a number of witnesses.

Mrs. Best's body was found June 17 in the home of her former husband, John Candelmo, proprietor of a roadhouse restaurant near Congers, N. Y.

Dr. Giles gave as his reason for not returning a verdict that he wished to hear testimony of Dr. William J. Ryan, who performed the autopsy. He said Dr. Ryan would not be back in Nyack until next week.

Firebug Held Insane In 12 Chicago Blazes

Chicago, June 27 (AP).—H. Carle Peterson, confessed firebug who said flames formed pictures of beautiful women in his mind, was adjudged insane today.

The 22-year-old youth, by the verdict of a criminal courts jury, thereby was saved from trial on murder by arson charges as the result of the death of an aged woman in one of the 12 fires he admitted setting in fashionable Rogers Park several weeks ago.

Judge Michael Feinberg ordered Peterson committed to the Illinois Security Hospital at Menard.

White House Asks Ban on Gold Clause Suits

Move Seen as Clearing Way to Take Part in Stabilization.

haps bitter, debate on the Roosevelt gold policy.

Chairman Duncan U. Fletcher, of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, said that group would undertake to effectuate the President's proposals promptly, but that no action would be taken for the next few days in order not to interpose any obstacles in the way of the Eccles banking bill, expected to be reported to that committee by the Glass sub-committee Monday.

Attorney General Cummings said the Department of Justice had submitted a comprehensive study of the questions involved to the White House, and would be glad to assist congressional committees in drafting the needed legislation. It was believed that a tentative bill had been drafted, but as is the custom, this was denied, Justice and Treasury officials asserting that formulation of the legislation would be left to Congress.

Agreement Imminent.

As the President's message was being read on Capitol Hill it was reported in State Department circles that an agreement between the United States and Panama over the disputed $500,000 rental due on the Panama Canal was imminent.

It was indicated that if Panama made certain concessions in a treaty defining the relations of the two countries, now being drafted, this Government would settle the $500,000 claim in gold of the former value, or at the rate of $1.69 for each dollar due.

Under a treaty in 1903 between Panama and the United States, the latter agreed to pay Panama $250,000 annually in gold of the value of that date as rental for the strip of land on which the Panama Canal is located. After devaluation of the gold dollar, Panama's agents in New York refused to accept a Treasury check for $250,000, contending that this sum was not the equivalent of $250,000 in gold of the value existing in 1903. A year later a second check under the same circumstances also was rejected.

Effect on Bondholders.

Effect of denying Government bondholders the right to sue under the gold clause contained in 21 issues of Treasury certificates totaling $10,136,570,340 outstanding at this time, would be to end all prospect that anyone might recover more than the face value of the securities, it was believed.

In the case finally decided by the Supreme Court, John M. Perry brought suit in the Court of Claims to collect $16,931.25 in payment for a $10,000 Fourth Liberty Loan 4¼ per cent gold bond, which had been called for redemption by the Treasury. Perry contended this sum was due to him under the gold clause in his bond because the Government had rdeuced the gold content of the dollar from 25.8 grains of gold nine-tenths fine to 15 5-21 grains, nine-tenths fine.

The court held that Congress had exceeded its authority in abrogating the gold clauses in Government bonds, but held that, while Perry had established a breach of contract, he had not shown he was damaged and that he was "not entitled to be enriched."

The court then went on to indicate that a bondholder who could demonstrate damages, through an increased price level, or the resumption of a free gold market whereby the metal, freed from existing restrictions, might be used with greater profit than currency, could recover more than the face value of the security.

Justice Stone agreed that Perry was not entitled to any sum in excess of the face value of his bond, but he assailed the reasoning by which the court arrived at that conclusion. He said he thought it "unnecessary and undesirable" for the court to hold that the gold clause imposed "restrictions upon the future exercise of the power to regulate the currency."

"I am not persuaded," he continued, "that we should needlessly intimate any opinion which implies that the obligation may so operate, for example, as to interpose a serious obstacle to the adoption of measures for the stabilization of the dollar, should Congress think it wise to accomplish that purpose by resumption of gold payments, in dollars of the present or any other gold content less than that specified in the gold clause, and by the re-establishment of a free market for gold and its free exportation.

Ban on Suits Suggested.

"There is no occasion now to resolve doubts, which I entertain, with respect to these questions. At present they are academic. Concededly they may be transferred wholly to the realm of speculation by the exercise of the undoubted power of the Government to withdraw the privilege of suit upon its gold clause obligations."

Since that time only one other suit has been filed in the Court of Claims, Robert A. Taft, son of the former President, on behalf of a company of which he is president, filed a suit to collect $1.07 as interest due on a called Liberty bond for three months following the call date.

His contention was that by breaching its contract in regard to the gold clause, the Government had forfeited the right to call its bonds prior to the maturity date, and that therefore the interest was due to him on the bond which he held. This case has been set down for the taking of testimony.

Jackson to Press Suits.

Robert Jackson, former secretary of the Democratic National Committee, is attorney for several clients who on June 15 attempted to pay their income taxes by presenting gold clause notes maturing on that date and claiming credit for them at $1.69 for each $1 of face value. Internal revenue collectors, under orders, declined to accept the notes under such conditions.

Another effort to get $1.69 for each $1 face value of the notes in this way will be tried in September. If the Government refuses, Jackson may advise his clients not to pay their taxes and let the Government sue. He said yesterday the action proposed by the President would not affect such suits, since it would throw the burden of suit on the Government.

He also contended that, even if his clients paid their taxes under protest, suits against the collectors to recover an over-payment would be valid, despite the proposed prohibition.

Text of Gold Suit Message

The text of the President's message to Congress on gold suits follows:

To the Congress of the United States:

Before the termination of this session of the Congress, I believe that it is important that definite action be taken to eliminate any uncertainty with respect to the right of holders of gold clause bonds of the Government to sue for payment either in gold or else in legal tender with an additional sum of 69 cents on every dollar.

To this end, I urge the withdrawal by the United States of its consent to be sued upon its currency or securities. The question of the effect of the so-called gold clause, in the light of the monetary legislation of the Seventy-third Congress, came before the Supreme Court at the term just closed. A suit for additional payment under existing circumstances, the court said, would "constitute not a recoupment of loss in any proper sense, but an unjustified enrichment." Bonds of the United States containing gold clauses—all of them issued, sold and payable wholly within the United States—have been continuously quoted on the exchanges at no higher prices than bonds not containing such clauses. But the continuing possibility of actions by litigious persons leaves open the continuing possibility of speculation. There is no public interest, under these conditions, in permitting a handful of private litigants to exploit the general public in the hope of a wholly speculative private profit.

Lasting Decision.

This conclusion will hold so long as the Congress adheres to its declared policy, now more than a third of a century old, to maintain the equal value of every dollar in the market.

I recommend, therefore, the enactment of legislation which will make clear that it is our fixed policy to continue to treat the bondholders of all our securities equally and uniformly, to afford any holder of any gold clause security, who thinks he could by any possibility sustain any loss in the future, an opportunity to put himself immediately in a position to avoid such future loss, and to remove all possibility of any suits designed to hamper the Government in administering the public debt and in financing its ordinary and emergency expenditures.

More specifically, I recommend the immediate enactment of legislation (1) that will authorize and direct the Secretary of the Treasury, at the request of the holders of gold clause securities of the United States, to make payment therefor in cash, dollar for dollar, with accrued interest, or at the holder's election, to exchange such securities for non-gold clause securities with the same interest rate and maturity; (2) that will terminate any consent which the United States may have voluntarily given to be sued on its securities, coins or currencies; and (3) that will re-affirm the fixed policy of the United States to make payment to all holders of its securities, coins and currencies on an equal and uniform dollar for dollar basis and will make appropriations available for payments on this basis and on this basis only.

Suits "Acts of Grace."

There is no constitutional or inherent right to sue the Government; on the contrary, the immunity of the sovereign from suit is an act of grace, which, with us, may be granted or withheld by the Congress. The courts, it is hardly necessary for me to add, will always be open to those who seek justice, but they were not established for use by a few to enrich themselves at the expense of the many, nor to enable a few to harass and embarrass sovereign action by the Government when taken for the benefit of all.

Not only justice to the holders of our currency and of our securities, who support and rely on our policy of equal and uniform treatment to all, but also the interests of our entire people require that the Government of the United States make it clear that it can not and will not consent to the use of its courts in aid of efforts to sabotage the operations of government or in aid of private speculation.

This proposal reasserts and makes definite the control of the Congress over the securities and money issued by the United States of America.

Securities Act Defied, Broker Moves for Test

J. E. Jones, N.Y. Oil Promoter, Refuses to Obey U. S. Subpena.

By the Associated Press.

The constitutionality of the securities act was attacked by J. Edward Jones, New York oil promoter, yesterday in refusing to obey a subpena served on him by the Securities Commission.

Already at odds with the Government over the commission's attempts to enjoin him from selling his securities, Jones last week caused the arrest of William Rabell, a former commission employe, on charges of seeking a bribe.

Yesterday a legal sparring match at a commission hearing brought the disclosure from Jones' counsel that he would move in the New York Circuit Court of Appeals to quash the subpena on ground it represented exercise of undelegated legislative power.

The clash was over an application by Jones to sell an issue of oil trust certificates. Through counsel, the New Yorker sought to withdraw the application when the commission began proceedings to issue a stop order against the issue. But the commission refused the withdrawal.

Last week Jones failed to answer a subpena sent him by mail and the commission then served him personally. He moved to quash this subpena yesterday.

The next step in what promises to be a long-drawn-out court fight will find Jones pressing his quash motion in New York, while the commission goes to a Federal district court to compel his appearance.

Jones' counsel hold that the commission in making rules was in effect legislating when only Congress has that power; Jones' business was intrastate and not interstate; the securities exchange act attempts to usurp State powers.

Banks Will Put Tangle on Debt Before Court

Commercial Receiver Sues to Record Claim Against Continental.

Differences between Robert C. Baldwin, receiver of the defunct Commercial National Bank, and John F. Moran, receiver of the Continental Trust Co., as to which bank was indebted to the other, and to what extent, will be thrashed out in the District Supreme Court, it was learned last night following the filing of a suit by the Commercial to establish its claim against the Continental.

The latter was absorbed by the Commercial in January, 1930, but it kept its corporate identity for the purpose of liquidating its assets. The suit alleges that at the time of the merger the Continental became indebted to the Commercial for $2,803,903.96, part of which has been paid. However, other disputed items, such as the payment of seven $15,000 dividends from Commercial funds to stockholders of the Continental and interest charges on the original indebtedness, raised the figure, Baldwin said, close to its original sum.

The Commercial stockholders have been assessed 100 per cent on their holdings, and the Continental stockholders have been notified they will be asked to pay an equal installment on their holdings so the Continental can meet its obligations to the head bank.

The suit is in the nature of a demand for an accounting by auditors of the differences betwen the banks so that the liability of each toward the other can be legally established. The law firm of Shirley, Faust & Wilson represented Baldwin.

Col. Wade H. Cooper, president of both banks, is under indictment for alleged misapplication of funds of the Commercial. He has made repeated attempts to get an early trial.

Denver Digs Up Camel Of 20,000 Years Ago

Denver, June 27 (AP).—Scientists said the skeleton of an animal uncovered today by workmen digging in the heart of Denver was that of a camel that roamed the hills 20,000 years ago.

Dr. Jesse D. Figgins, director of the Colorado Museum of Natural History, said the animal apparently was buried in the gravel bed of the Platte River when the stream was a mighty watercourse fed by melting glaciers at the end of the ice age.

Figgins said the leg and foot found in the pit are those of a huge beast, several feet taller than the present Asiatic animals. He ordered careful excavation so the entire skeleton can be recovered.

Lee in New Anthem, D. A. R. Likes the Old

By the Associated Press.

Boston, June 27.—Mixed sentiments were voiced by leaders of women's patriotic societies tonight regarding Nixon Waterman's proposed new national anthem, "The United States of America," which links Washington, Lincoln and Gen. Robert E. Lee as America's great heroes.

"A splendid thing," said Mrs Albert L. Rider, president of the Massachusetts Chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy. Waterman, 75-year-old farmer-poet, whose residence in both Florida and Massachusetts has made him eager to heal any lingering North-South "feelings," had sent Mrs. Rider a copy of his work.

Mrs. Frank L. Nason, State regent of the Daughters of the American Revolution, praised the spirit of the song and expressed deep admiration for Lee, but pointed out that the D. A. R. is "heartily satisfied" with "The Star-Spangled Banner."

Wheat Prices Cut in Virginia To Assist Mills

15 to 20 Cents Per Bushel Lopped From Quotations on Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, June 27.—W. David Saunders, secretary of the Richmond Grain Exchange, said today that when the first prices on new Virginia wheat are quoted on the Richmond exchange tomorrow the top quotation will be 65 to 70 cents a bushel, 15 to 20 cents lower than Old Dominion farmers have been receiving until recently.

This action, he explained, puts into effect a resolution of the Piedmont Millers Association, adopted at a recent meeting here, that Virginia farmers will have to be content with lower prices if millers here are to meet outside price competition.

Until recently, he explained, Virginia farmers enjoyed a price differential over growers of the Middle West, receiving Chicago quotations plus the cost of shipping Middle Western wheat into this State. This differential amounted to between 15 to 25 cents a bushel.

"Virginia millers, however, now have to face the competition of Seattle flour, delivered at Atlantic seaports at 85 cents to $1 a barrel less than the cost of their Virginia flour at the mill," Saunders said.

Independence Day Program Will Be on Sunday in Pohick Church.

WEST WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
307 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 323.

The Susan Riviere Heizel Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, will sponsor a pre-Independence Day program Sunday at 4 p. m. in historic Pohick Church. The service especially honors the memory of Dr. William Brown, physician general of the Army of the United States.

Historic Pohick Church, famous for its association with the life of George Washington, is located on the Washington-Richmond highway about 15 miles south of Alexandria. Those taking part in the program Sunday include Miss Louella Chase, regent of the chapter; Mrs. George Bolden Grimes, State regent, D. A. R.; Mrs. C. A. S. Sinclair, national president of the C. A. R.; Mrs. Nancy Washington, Mrs. Bessie W. Gahn, Wade H. Ellis, of Ripon Lodge, Va.; Miss Lillian Chenoweth and Miss Margaret Moncure.

The services will close with a procession to the grave of Dr. Brown, where his two great-great-grandchildren will remove the flag and Miss Chase will read the inscription on the stone.

The colonial home of Dr. Brown is at 212 South Fairfax street.

John A. Lannon has been elected grand knight of the Fitzgerald Council, Knights of Columbus. Other officers elected include Frank Newland, deputy grand knight; J. Robert Carey, chancellor; R. L. Carne, recorder; T. J. McFarland, treasurer; W. A. De Vaughn, advocate; George Manger, trustee; F. X. Buckley, warden; T. J. O'Reilly, inside guard; R. S. Collum, outside guard, and William J. Grennan, financial secretary.

Delegates to the State convention are the order are John A. Lannon, D. and L. W. Corbett, with George W. Kimball and F. T. Quinn as alternates.

The Potomac View Playgrounds will conduct a pet show today at 4 o'clock on the playgrounds. Any child in the First Ward will be eligible to enter a pet. The pets will be judged according to the following points: Finest, the best trained and the oddest pets. Mrs. Maude Roberts will be in charge.

The Alexandria Playground Association has made plans for the annual swimming meet and the field meets. It was decided to hold the interplayground swimming meet on August 29 at the municipal pool. The dates of the track meet will be announced later.

The Playground Baseball League will open a series of games next Wednesday at Hayden's Field.

Carnival to Hold Spot Prize Contest

Satisfactory results were reported yesterday as the Laurel (Md.) Volunteer Fire Department completed the third night of its annual carnival.

The "spot prize contest" will be held tonight at 10 o'clock. The waltz contest will be held at 10 p. m. Monday, while Wednesday has been set aside by the town as "firemen's night."

A parade will be held that night by fire companies from every Prince Georges County town. It will begin at 7:30 p. m. On July 4, at 8:30 p. m. a grand celebration of fireworks will be given. Monday, July 8, a frog-jumping contest will be held. The owner of the frog reaching the goal first will receive $10. Tuesday, July 9, will be "ladies' night."

Montgomery County Decrees Prohibition for Policemen

Commissioners Adopt Drastic Regulation On or Off Duty.

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post, 1111 Oak Ave., Silver Spring, Md. Telephone Shepherd 2363.

Drastic regulations prohibiting drinking alcoholic liquors on or off duty by Montgomery County police were promulgated yesterday by the Montgomery County Commissioners.

The regulation provides that drinking of alcoholic liquor or being in an intoxicated condition will constitute sufficient cause for recommendation of dismissal.

The regulation follows a dispute between Chief of Police J. William Garrett and a member of the force. The chief had decided the man was intoxicated and wished to prefer charges against his, but the policeman was not on duty at the time he is alleged to have been intoxicated.

The commissioners announced they will meet Tuesday at 2:30 p. m. in Baltimore with members of the Maryland State Roads Commission to discuss the condition of the county road account.

The board directed sale at public auction of a parcel of ground containing 14,000 square feet at the intersection of Philadelphia and Saratoga avenues. The sale will be held on the property July 5 at 4 p. m.

Reinstatement of Wilson Stewart at $125 a month and appointment of Earl Griffith, of Takoma Park, at a salary of $100 a month to the office of the county auditor was ordered by the commissioners.

The board adopted a resolution directing the county treasurer, J. Forest Walker, to proceed to collect front-foot benefits on property in Miller's Addition to Bethesda for improvements on four streets.

The charges are to be based on the plan recommended by Harry B. Shaw, county engineer, and H. W. Routenberg, assistant division engineer of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad who made a survey to determine the fair cost of the improvements.

The improvements cost approximately $100,000. The property owners are to be assessed to pay for $42,661.26; the county will pay for the construction of a storm sewer which cost $13,623.94 and the remainder will be assessed against Charles F. Miller, developer of the subdivision.

The property owners will be assessed $8.6366 per lineal foot, except an area of 624.99 feet of Elm avenue where only one side of the street was improved and which will be assessed at the rate of $3.3183 per lineal foot. The charges are to be collected in ten annual instalments and will bear 6 pe rcent interest. The work was completed in 1928, but payment by the property owners has been delayed because of their charges that the cost was excessive.

The county commissioners voted to appropriate $1,800 to the Social Service League to pay for child welfare work for June. The money is payable in October, following filing of a report on the expenditures.

County Commissioner Robert D. Hagner (Democrat) yesterday revived the controversy over assessments in Montgomery County when he answered a charge of County Assessor William L. Aud, Fusion appointee, that property owned by Hagner had been unduly favored with a low assessment during the period Hagner was a county assessor.

The commissioner declared that he had refused to assess his own property while county assessor and had insisted that the assessment be made by other members of the assessment board. The assessment levied on his property, he declared, was identical with that on adjacent property owned by other persons.

"The property next to mine," Hagner said in a statement issued yesterday to the press, "owned by the late George Bradley, a very active and prominent anti-organization Democrat, is assessed at exactly the same rate per square foot as mine.

"All other properties in the immediate vicinity of my property are assessed on identically the same basis and at the same rate as my land."

Hagner reiterated his declaration that the county tax rate for 1935, recently announced at $1.50 per $100, which is 60 cents higher than last year, could have been considerably reduced had County Assessor Aud promptly assessed the new buildings erected during the first half of this year.

"The previous assessor put about $2,000,000 additional basis on the books each year," he declared, "and it is my opinion that $4,500,000 or $5,000,000 additional basis could have have been added this year if the work had been properly done by the present assessor, resulting in a tax rate much less than that which the Fusion commissioners have set.

"In further proof of my statement that all new properties have not been assessed, a number of home owners and even speculative builders have appeared at my office in the Western Suburban Building and stated that they have not received their assessment notices and that, to their knowledge, the assessor had not been on their property."

Highway improvements to serve residents of Kensington and vicinity were recommended for early construction at the final meeting of the Kensington Chamber of Commerce prior to summer recess.

The chamber went on record favoring improving the center of Connecticut avenue along the trolley right of way with landscaped parking as soon as the tracks are eliminated. Other improvements urged were widening of Connecticut avenue from Chevy Chase Lake to Kensington, and construction of a new road between Connecticut avenue and Garrett Park, in an effort to insure extension of the proposed Kensington bus line to connect Garrett Park.

The Chamber also adopted resolutions urging extension of Beach drive through three county units of Rock Creek Park and establishment of a main trunk line sewer from the East-West highway through Kensington to Garrett Park.

Plans for a charity horse show to be given fo rthe Montgomery County General Hospital on July 20 will be made tonight at a meeting of the Montgomery County Council of American Legion posts scheduled to be held at Warner Pumphrey's funeral home, Rockville.

Park Commissioner Lacy Shaw has extended the use of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission's horse show grounds in Rock Creek Park for the charity event.

August 16 to 24, inclusive, were the dates set for the annual carnival of the Rockville Volunteer Fire Department, at a meeting last night in the firehouse at Rockville, Md. W. Valentine Wilson has been named chairman of the committee arranging the carnival.

Plans are being made for a children's study hour at the Takoma Park (Md.) Library, 806 Jackson avenue, Takoma Park. The class scheduled to begin about the middle of July will be conducted once a week under the direction of Mrs. Frederick L. Pratt and Mrs. James Robertson.

Mrs. John B. Mertie, jjr., chairman of the Sligo Park Hills (Md.) auxiliary to the American Red Cross, announced yesterday that 5,860 surgical dressings and 76 hospital garments are completed since the auxiliary organized six months ago. These supplies will be used at the Montgomery County General Hospital at Sandy Spring, Md.

Charles E. Florence was elected president of the Indian Spring Park (Md.) Citizens Association at the annual meeting in Blair School. Other officers are Thomas T. Keller, vice president; Harry A. Bessing, secretary, and R. E. Buckley, treasurer. The association voted to continue its membership in the Montgomery County Civic Association.

Mrs. Erskine Miller, a member of the Silver Spring (Md.) Public Library staff, is attending the annual convention of the American Library Association in Denver this week. Mrs. Miller is one of three delegates appointed by the State of Maryland.

Mass Meeting To Hear Pleas For Power Line

Fairfax County Citizens to Draft Program Tonight at Courthouse.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 126-J.

A mass meeting of Fairfax County citizens interested in the extension of electric lines in the county will be held this evening at 8 o'clock in the courthouse at Fairfax. An effort will be made to form an organization to deal with the Federal and State rural electrification administration. The meeting has been called by the county agricultural agent, H. B. Derr, of Fairfax, at the request of Administrator Morris L. Cook, of the REA.

Agent Derr said that the distance between farmhouses is not the only controlling utility factor. The decision to build a certain line depends on the number of farms agreeing to take the service. He urged farmers along a given route to combine with their neighbors in the project. The REA proposes to make it possible for the rural consumer to pay for his house wiring and other necessary appliances over a long period of time at a low interest rate. Prominent speakers will expiain the plans at the mass meeting tonight.

Mrs. John S. Barbour has been elected president of the Garden Club of Fairfax. Other officers elected include Mrs. Frederick Dawson Richardson, first vice president; Miss Adelaide Lewis, second vice president; Mrs. Charles Poser, recording secretary; Mrs. Grace Earl, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Amos H. Chilcott, treasurer.

The third carnival of Vienna Council No. 12, Order of Fraternal Americans, for the benefit of the order's charity fund, opens Saturday evening and will continue through Saturday, July 6. The carnival will be held on the grounds opposite the Vienna School. There will be open-air dancing, with music furnished by Manveil's Vienna Syncopators, a free comedy show every evening, a Ferris wheel and 11 booths. Refreshments will be served each evening. The committee includes Charles E. Babcock, Howland Kenyon and Thomas R. Moreland.

Mrs. H. A. Fellows was re-elected president of Robert E. Lee Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy yesterday. Other officers chosen were Mrs. Spencer Thorne, vice president; Mrs. Mayo Herring, secretary; Mrs. A. H. Barbar treasurer, and Mrs. Albert Lester historian.

Mrs. Robert Kendrick was last night re-elected president of the Falls Church Fire Department Women's Auxiliary at the annual meeting in the engine house. Mrs. J. R. Royston was elected vice president; Mrs. W. S. Fisher, second vice president; Miss Katherine Husseins, secretary, and Mrs. Robert Harmon, treasurer. Mrs. Luther Elliott was elected chaplain.

The Stephen P. McGroarty Unit of the American Legion Auxiliary last night held its Fidac program on Belgium at the home of Capt. and Mrs. John Bethune. A large number of nonmembers attended as guests of the Falls Church members. The program included a Belgian cradle song, sung by a group of the junior auxiliary, dressed in Belgian costumes; a sketch, by members portraying England, France, Italy, America and Belgium; a talk on the royal family of Belgium, by Mme. Cantacuzene-Grant and the Belgium national anthem, sung by Mrs. Emma Seamans Smith, of Washington. Mrs. Bethune had arranged an exhibit of laces, glass and handicraft brought back by her from Belgium, and Capt. Bethune showed a series of moving pictures of Belgian scenes and events taken during his recent sojourn there as representative of the United States Tariff Commission.

The second annual field day celebration of the Franconia Volunteer Fire Deuartment will be held on the fair grounds at Franconia on July 4. A number of events have been scheduled for the day's program, including athletic and field events, a baseball game between the Franconia A. C. and Potters Hill and dancing in the afternoon and evening. An all-day picnic will also be a feature.

A three-day carnival under auspices of Occoquan Council No. 69, Jr. O. U. A. M., will open on the grounds at Pohick Hall, on the Richmond - Washington Highway, south of Pohick Church, July 4, and will continue until Saturday night, July 6.

The Herndon High School Future Farmers of America judging team, composed of Willie Cross, Wilson Smith, and John T. Vance and agricultural instructor W. R. Crabill, has returned from Blacksburg, Va., where they attended the annual convention of the Virginia Association of Future Farmers of America. This team was adwarded first honors in the competitive judging contest of dairy products in a class of 53 teams representing the different high schools in the State. Wilson Smith and Willie Cross won places on the team which makes them eligible to compete at the national convention in Kansas City in October.

County Names 6 to Compose Welfare Board

Prince Georges Officials Select 3 Republicans, 3 Democrats.

Personnel for Prince Georges County's new welfare board, set up under the board of State aids and charities, was named yesterday at a special meeting of county and State officials in Hyattsville.

The list of appointments, which includes three Democrats and three Republicans, was made by the Democratic board of commissioners. As prescribed by law, the commissioners also placed a member of their organization, Vinton D. Cockey, on the new board.

Other members are Mrs. J. Enos Ray, Democrat; Arthur C. Keefer, Republican; Irvin C. Main, Democrat; Boykin Watson, Republican; Ormond D. Phair, Democrat, and Mrs. William T. Davis, Republican. The personnel was selected from a list of 12 names submitted by the Republican State central committee.

Harry Greenstein, State relief administrator, and William L. Galvin and Maurice A. Rome, of the board of State aids and charities, who met with the commissioners, urged that politics not enter into so important appointments.

Greenstein pointed out the new board which was authorized by the recent session of the State Legislature, would function in the same manner and place as the old. The former board was headed by Mrs. J. Enos Ray.

The organization is expected to be prepared to take over the supervision of relief and old-age pensions in two or three months. Although no money has been appropriated in the county for old-age pensions, it is thought that funds listed for "outpensioners" and the almshouse fund may be available for this purpose since they serve practically the same purpose now.

The new board will meet in Hyattsville tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock to elect its chairman and vice chairman.

'Lion of Judah' Defies Italian Plan in Africa

Haile Selassie Won't Accept Officials Appointed by Mussolini.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Addis Ababa, Abyssinia, June 27. Emperor Haile Selassie I today bluntly challenged Italy's alleged plan to seize control of his nation and establish a protectorate over Abyssinia.

The "Lion of Judah" issued a sharp communique denouncing Rome's concentration of thousands of Italian troops in the colonies of Eritrea and Italian Somaliland, bordering on Abyssinia in East Africa.

The communique, apparently referring to Italy's alleged desire to control the Abyssinian government, warned:

"If the Ethiopian (Abyssinian) government needs foreign officials it will itself appoint them. It will not accept officials imposed upon it."

The emperor did not deny existence of slavery in this Christian empire, as charged by Italy in giving an excuse to the League of Nations for her campaign to "civilize" the Abyssinians, but added:

"Progress in freeing slaves, founding schools for the freed slaves and instituting reforms in other directions steadily continues."

The government called attention to the continuous dispatch of Italian troops to East Africa and declared the thousands of men already concentrated on the Abyssinian borders or nearby greatly exceeded all possible requirements for defense of the colonies.

It was emphasized that Abyssinia had not yet mobilized and even formally had declared if the arbitration award by a neutral commission investigating recurrent border clashes went against her, she would give "full satisfaction" to Italy.

The communique asserted that in view of Italy's activities Abyssinia would be fully justified in mobilizing, but—as foreign diplomats, journalists and other travelers could verify—actually had refrained from mobilizing.

Morever, Emperor Haile Selassie has repeatedly requested the league to send neutral observers to ascertain the facts about the border clashes between Italian native troops in Somaliland and the Abyssinian patrols in which scores have been killed.

Bookmaker to Seek Federal Court Rule

Hagerstown Man Contends Proceedings Illegal.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., June 27.—A petition for a rehearing of the suit by Harry D. Miggins, former bookmaker, in which he sought to restrain the State's attorney and sheriff from interfering with the operation of a bookmaking establishment here, having been denied by Chief Judge D. Lindley Sloan, counsel for Miggins announced today that he planned to carry the fight into Federal Court.

Monday, Judge Sloan dismissed a petition for an injunction against two officials, when he held the Washington County anti-bookmaking law passed by the 1935 General Assembly is constitutional.

The new petition will contend that Miggins is being deprived of his constitutional rights and that the enforcement of the anti-bookmaking law is a confiscation of property without due process of law.

Young Methodists Elect Van Dyck

500 at Lynchburg Session Sets Attendance Mark.

By the Associated Press.

Lynchburg, June 27.—The Virginia Methodist Conference Young People's organization elected Frank Van Dyck, of Portsmouth, president and enthusiastically agreed to a quota of 126 delegates to a church-wide gathering in Memphis at its annual business session this morning at Radolph-Macon Woman's College.

Charles Field, of Norfolk, was elected vice president and Miss Ida Woodson, of North Garden, secretary.

With an official enrollment of 500, the largest in history, the Young People's meeting will close at noon Friday.

Attempt at Robbery Sends Cousins to Jail

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., June 27. Shirley Donahue, 25, and Densil Donahue, 22, cousins, of McKinney's Run, near McWhorter, in default of bond of $1,500 are in the Harrison County Jail to await action of the November grand jury.

They are alleged to have attempted to rob Warren H. Douglas, 59, a Lost Creek business man, a few nights ago. Douglas was struck on the head by a blunt instrument.

Winchester Studying Insurance Complaints

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., June 27.—Penny insurance, according to City Manager Arthur M. Field, is due for official scrutiny in this city as a result of complaints which are being received from "beneficiaries" through welfare workers.

According to Field, high-pressure salesmen make extravagant claims for the policies and the purchasers are often left under misapprehension regarding the policies they have purchased. In some cases, it was said, difficulty has been experienced in collecting claims.

Christian Endeavor Body Opens State Convention at Clarendon

George M. Yeatman Makes Welcoming Address to 400 Delegates.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 399. Clarendon, Va.

The forty-first annual State convention of the Christian Endeavor Society opened yesterday evening at the Clarendon Baptist Church with more than 400 delegates in attendance.

The session began at 5:30 p. m. with a short prayer conducted by the Rev. Perry L. Mitchell, pastor of the Baptist Church, followed by a get-acquainted dinner in the Odd Fellows Hall at Clarendon. The address of welcome was delivered by the Rev. Parry L. Mitchell, with Miss Phyllis G. Brown, State president, presiding.

The evening session opened at 7:45 o'clock with the address of welcome delivered by George M. Yeatman, president of the Arlington County Chamber of Commerce. The response was by Sam M. Morris 3d, of Norfolk.

The address of the evening was delivered by Warren G. Hoopes, who took as his subject, "Christian Youth Building a Better World."

At 9:30 there was a reception for the delegates and their friends on the lawn of the Clarendon Baptist Church.

Members of the District of Columbia Union were guests of honor at the opening session.

Today, the morning session will open at 8:45 with W. Bernard Williams, State first vice president, presiding.

The program will include group meetings and reports from the committees and State officers.

At 12:15 there will be an assembly with George Earle Owen, State citizenship superintendent, presiding. There will be an oratorical contest, the subject being "Alcohol and My Generation."

At 1 o'clock luncheon will be served in the Odd Fellows Hall at Clarendon.

The afternoon session will open at 2 with district meetings. At 2:45 the delegates will leave in automobiles for sightseeing through Washington and vicinity.

There will be a picnic supper on the church lawn.

Saturday night there will be a banquet at the Mayflower Hotel in Washington, at which time the State officers will be elected.

The guest speaker will be Dr. William Hiram Foulkes, vice president of the World Union. The convention will conclude with an all-day program Sunday, when plans for 1935-1936 will be discussed. New officers will be installed and the convention will close with a buffet supper at 6:30 at the Clarendon Church.

Through the joint efforts of the Arlington County school board and the county board, playgrounds in the county will be open each day from 9 a. m. to 6 p. m., excepting Saturdays, when they will close at noon, according to an announcement yesterday by County Superintendent Fletcher Kemp. Miss Clara Wheeler, member of the faculty of the Washington-Lee High School, will supervise the activities of the girls, and William A. Richardson, also a member of the high school faculty, will supervise the activities of the boys.

The playgrounds will continue through July and August and will be located as follows: Nellie Custis School, at Aurora Hills; Patrick Henry School, at Arlington; Henry Clay School, at Lyon Park; Matthew Fontaine Maury School, at Clarendon; Thomas Nelson Page School, at Ballston; Washington-Lee High School, at Ballston; Cherrydale School; James Monroe School, at Aurora Heights; Stonewall Jackson School, at Mulhall; Kemper (colored) School, at Nauck; Hoffman-Boston (colored) School, at Johnsons Hill, and Langston (colored) School, at Halls Hill.

Superintendent Kemp announces that a competent staff of directors will be employed to conduct a program of activities ranging from simple ring games and story hour for the small children to organized leagues and tournaments for the large children.

Addressing a political rally held in the Firemen's Hall at Virginia Highlands Wednesday night, Sheriff Howard B. Fields, Democratic candidate for reelection, admitted that his force of men were active in politics. He stated the men were all citizens of Arlington County and had every right to work for the election of any candidate. "I will not make any attempt to stop them and I hope they are all working for my reelection," he said.

Sheriff Fields declared that he has the most efficient police force in the State and the only sheriff in the State that has a woman deputy sheriff on his force. There has not been a crime of any nature in the past ten years that has not been solved save the "Mary Baker murder," and that did not occur in the county, but was on Government property, he asserted.

H. J. Odenthal, who is opposing Fields, declared that if elected he would divorce the police force from politics.

He characterized the county police force as a band of "salesmen" selling Fields.

He also stated that he would require all men seeking positions on the force to take a competitive examination.

Emery N. Hosmer, candidate for Commonwealth's attorney, renewed his attack on the record of Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence W. Douglas, while Douglas stated that he stands on his record for re-election.

John Paul Jones who is also seeking the Democratic nomination for the office of Commonwealth's attorney, declared that he was not connected with any group in this campaign, that he was his own campaign manager. He stated that if elected he would try the county's cases.

The Young Democratic Club of Arlington County will sponsor a mass meeting in the auditorium of the Washington-Lee High School Tuesday night, July 23, at 8 o'clock, according to an announcement yesterday by Presidet John Paul Janes.

All candidates will speak, excepting those for the county board and those who ae unopposed.

Fredericksburg Jail Sets Visiting Hours

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., June 27.—A new sign was hung out at the city jail today.

It was placed at the instance of the "manager," City Sergeant J. Conway Chichester, to let the relatives and friends of "guests" in his "rooming house" know that henceforth the visiting hours are from 8 to 9 a. m. and from 5 to 6 p. m.

There was no such thing as a visiting-hour schedule before the advent of the sign yesterday.

11 Million Back Britains' Stay In the League

Unofficial Ballot Reveals Great Desire for Disarmament.

By the Associated Press.

London, June 27.—More than 11,000,000 Britons had voted tonight to have this country stay in the League of Nations.

An unofficial ballot conducted all over the British Isles during the last seven months, ended today and its results, officially announced this evening, showed overwhelming sentiment for continuance of league membership and international disarmament.

A mass meeting of peace enthusiasts at Albert Hall heard Viscount Cecil of Chelwood, "father" of the unique referendum, announce final results. It adopted his resolution calling on the government to follow strict peace policies based on the league.

The ballot—in which 37.9 per cent of all the voters over 18 in England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland cast votes—should not be regarded as "an end in itself," Lord Cecil said. "It is just a stage in the struggle for peace," he added.

Final results showed 11,090,387 favored continued adherence to the league, while 355,883 were opposed. The vote for international arms reduction was 10,470,489 to 862,775.

For all-around abolition of military and naval aircraft by international agreement, 9,553,558; against, 1,689,786.

For prohibition of the manufacture and sale of arms for private profit, 10,417,329; against, 775,415.

For economic sanctions against an aggressor, 10,027,608; against, 635,074.

For military sanctions, 6,784,368; against, 2,351,981.

The total vote cast represented 37.9 per cent of all the voters over 18 in England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland.

The ballot was sponsored by the League of Nations Union and nearly 40 other organizations.

Bristol Banks Reduce Deposit Interest to 2%

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Bristol, Va., June 27.—Interest rate on time deposits was reduced from 2½ to 2 per cent by the First National Bank of Bristol, at a meeting of its directors yesterday. The change is effective July 1, and applies to both certificates and savings deposits.

The reduction of one-half of 1 per cent in interest rate paid to depositors is in line with low rates prevailing all over the country. Knoxville, Tenn., banks some time ago reduced the rate to 2 per cent, while Richmond and Roanoke banks have reduced it to 1½ per cent. Roanoke banks will not take time deposits for less than a year and at 1½ per cent interest.

Druggists Vote Highest Office To Matheney

Cumberland Man Elected as Maryland and D. C. Convention Ends.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, June 27.—Harry W. Matheney, Cumberland, today was elected president of the Maryland and District of Columbia Pharmaceutical Association.

Other officers elected at the association's annual convention were A. E. Pearre, Frederick, honorary president; Melville Strasburger, Baltimore, first vice president; A. A. Dewing, Centerville, second vice president; A. N. Hewing, third vice president.

E. F. Kelly was re-elected as secretary; H. S. Harrison as treasurer, and R. L. Swain as editor of the association's publication, the Maryland Pharmacist.

Suggests Proper Experience.

Dr. W. Paul Briggs, dean of the school of pharmacy of George Washington University, suggested to the association that the year of drug store experience required of a student pharmacist before he is issued a certificate be made into one of "actual certified value."

"This so-called experience," Dr. Briggs said, "might be just waiting on the counter, making sodas and sundaes or running errands. The quantity of experience is stressed and not what that experience should be. In this way, the student receives but little training that supplements his school course."

Would Select Stores.

Dr. Briggs said that certain drug stores of a known high professional standard should be selected and students placed in them to assist the pharmacist and observe him filling prescriptions and compounding medicines. This type of experience would be of greater value to the student than the unsupervised type, he said, and would give him that professional point of view he would not get elsewhere.

Dr. W. Bruce Philip, secretary of the District of Columbia group and instructor of commercial pharmacy at George Washington University, also spoke. He discussed "winning trade back from the chain stores."

The association held its annual banquet tonight with a carnival dance as the closing feature.

Missionary Union Closes Session

First Woman Evangelist in China to Be Honored.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., June 27.—At the closing session of the thirty-fifth annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Union of the Albemarle Baptist Association in the First Baptist Church here, Miss Blanche Sydnor White, of Richmond, spoke of the centennial of the arrival of the first American woman missionary in China. The celebration will be held at Kilmarnock, Lancaster County, August 14.

In addition to this jubilee celebration, the Baptist women of the South, said Miss White, hope to send two additional missionaries to China; build a memorial chapel on the field served by Henrietta Shuck and her husband, J. Lewis Shuck, and send Dr. George W. Truett, of Dallas, Tex., on an evangelistic tour of China.

The Albemarle Union voted to meet next year at the Hillsboro Church, at Yancey Mills, and elected the following officers: Superintendent, Mrs. G. F. Spitzer, Charlottesville; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Guy F. Via, Charlottesville; young people's leader, Mrs. Alex Smith, Charlottesville; personal service chairman, Mrs. R. J. Mann, Red Hill; stewardship chairman, Mrs. W. B. Scribner, Charlottesville; mission study chairman, Mrs. W. A. Lewis, Red Hill.

Tax Dangers Ahead.

Congress is preparing to follow customary and constitutional procedure in formulating and passing upon a new tax bill. Unless the President changes his mind again, there seems to be no danger that a bill will be rushed through within a few days, without opportunity for study or public hearings.

Unfortunately, however, assurance that the procedure is to be orderly does not guarantee the emergence of a carefully thought-out, well-rounded program. Indeed, if the wishes of certain Senators and Representatives receive serious consideration, the new tax measure will be loaded down with a number of irrelevant and undesirable features. The irrepressible Mr. Patman, for instance, is already making plans to attach his cash bonus scheme as a rider to the tax bill. Other members of Congress, unmindful of the difference between tariff and taxation measures, are said to favor inclusion of new import duties upon various commodities.

Congress faces a doubly difficult task. It must not only be on its guard to exclude irrelevant proposals, but it should be prepared to recommend new taxes in order to expand the President's sketchy program. The House would not be fully discharging its responsibilities if it were content with a revenue measure restricted to taxes upon large incomes and inheritances and graduated corporation taxes. If there is to be new tax legislation at this session of Congress, there is no excuse for evading the issue presented by an annual deficit in excess of $3,000,000,000.

It is a challenge to the ingenuity of tax experts to devise ways and means of covering at least a substantial proportion of such huge outlays. That can not be accomplished by adding a few levies here and there to the existing tax structure. What is needed is a thorough-going overhauling of the entire system, with special attention to reforms in income taxation designed to spread its burden over a much larger portion of the population.

In The Planned Economy.

Regardless of how it came about, the extraordinary parliamentary muddle created by the President's tax program has placed the chairman of the Senate Finance Committee in a most invidious position.

When the message was first sent to Congress Senator Harrison properly commented that "the proposed tax legislation will, of course, originate in the House." Then, by some confusion on which Mr. Roosevelt has shed no light, the Senator got the idea that this "must" legislation should be jammed through in the form of amendments to the nuisance tax resolution. Now that midsummer madness is happily dispelled and the program is to be taken up in orderly fashion by the Ways and Means Committee of the House. All's well that ends well—except for those who are unjustly made to look silly in the process.

Another curious example of the consummate ease with which false impressions are created in Washington now traces to Secretary Morgenthau. On June 24, when asked about the preparation of the tax program, he observed that "we have had our home work done for several weeks." On June 26 it developed that while the Treasury tax experts had worked all the night before, they did not have ready for the Senate Finance Committee their computations of the probable effect of the proposed tax changes.

Nearly everyone has laughed at the embarrassment of the volunteer who submits himself to the dexterity of a sleight-of-hand artist. It is funny to see rabbits pulled from the necks of sober citizens who did not realize with what ease the quickness of the hand deceives the eye. Everybody laughs at the victim in such circumstances. But none blame him if, in confidence, he has an observation or two to make about the magician afterward.

Division By Secret Ballot?

According to report, private polls of the House show that a substantial majority of its members are opposed to the so-called "death sentence" provision of the holding company bill. Yet the President was balked in his efforts to secure a roll-call vote on this one issue that would have put the members on record for or against it.

Legislative cowardice is here shown at its worst, because the majority group which opposes the "death sentence" has nothing to be ashamed of. On the contrary, its members are in a position to make a most convincing fight against the unreasonably harsh provisions of the bill. Yet they are unwilling to take an open stand against a measure indorsed by the President.

If legislative pusillanimity is carried to much greater extremes, there will be only one way of securing an uncoerced expression of opinion from cowed Congressmen. It will become necessary to resort to secret balloting on critical issues. The country might in that case escape certain rash or hastily devised legislative experiments decreed by the executive arm of government. But Congress would have to surrender the pretense of being a representative deliberative body, with a membership free to express and vote reasoned convictions on matters of public policy.

Belated Follow-Up.

In the famous gold clause cases the United States Supreme Court decided that Congress has no constitutional right to alter the terms of a contract between the Federal Government and the holders of its obligations. As the court emphasized the fact that plaintiffs had not shown nor attempted to show losses resulting from abrogation of the gold clause, a good many commentators inferred that claims for damages might be established if circumstances should arise under which losses could be proved. In urging Congress to withdraw its consent to suits by holders of gold clause bonds, therefore, the President is simply resolving existing uncertainties in favor of the Government.

There is no danger under the gold decision that a "handful of private litigants" could, as the President states, "exploit the general public in the hope of a purely speculative private profit." However, if the Government were to pursue an inflationary policy that resulted in seriously depreciating the purchasing power of the dollar, holders of bonds bearing the gold clause might perhaps be in a position to recover damages. At least, that is the belief of some careful interpreters of the Supreme Court decisions. Furthermore, if the United States were to enter into stabilization agreements with other countries, agreeing to remove the ban upon free movements of gold, foreign holders of United States gold bonds, who have unquestionably suffered losses through dollar devaluation, might seek to be indemnified.

It is probable, therefore, that the President's message will unloose a flood of speculation as to the purpose of asking Congress at this particular time to protect the Government against suits. That would have been a simple and understandable action had it been taken immediately following the decision in the gold clause cases. Then, however, the Government seemed inclined to minimize the possibility of suits of this sort.

Naturally it is a rather painful proceeding for a government to close its courts to those who believe that they have suffered injury at its hands. As President Roosevelt says, the "immunity of the sovereign from suit is a principle of universal acceptance, and permission to bring such suits is an act of grace." Nevertheless, the average American will not be disposed to agree with the President that the proposed ban upon suits is merely directed against those who plan to use the courts "to sabotage the operations of government or in aid of private speculation."

There are a great many conceivable conditions under which the holder of a gold bond might be able to prove that he had suffered loss through refusal of the Government to fulfill the terms of its contract. The knowledge that a sovereign State can not be held to observance of its promises does not alter the fact that arbitrary modification of Government contracts deals a severe blow to public confidence.

Boring From Without.

The senior Senator from Iowa is persuaded that Mr. H. S. Raushenbush, counsel for the Senate Munitions Investigating Committee, is "boring from within" to convert the United States Government into "various socialistic schemes."

The word "persuaded" is used advisedly. Members of the munitions committee who rose to the defense of their investigator produced a letter from William B. Shearer containing not only the same charges advanced by Senator Dickinson but also the same quotations from his earlier writings together with the same elisions. This could scarcely have been mere coincidence. Wittingly or not, Senator Dickinson has acted as a sounding board for a man whose record where armaments contracts are concerned is anything but objective. And only laughter is possible when Mr. Shearer denounces "boring from within."

Whatever the political views of Mr. Raushenbush, there is no question as to his efficiency and integrity as an investigating official for the Senate committee. Whether he be socialist or monarchist is immaterial to the issue. His prime qualification should be, and is, intellectual honesty.

In contrast, the man who is directing the attack against him is a lobbyist whose professional interest is to discredit the Senate probe. And Mr. Shearer is doing precisely what Mr. Raushenbush himself anticipated as far back as the time when he was first being interviewed for his present position. At that time he was reluctant to accept the assignment for fear his honestly-held political beliefs might later embarrass the committee. Now his fears are realized. Mr. Shearer, in a letter written to Senator Clark a month ago, charges that "Raushenbush differs from the Bolsheviks merely in that he believes in 'boring from within' rather than bloody revolution." And Senator Dickinson takes up the cry.

There are many grounds on which the Senate Munitions Committee may be criticized. But Mr. Shearer is not the man to do the criticizing. From him, in this field, every knock is a boost.

Shameful Performance.

If the performance of the House District Committee on Wednesday is followed by an influx of criminals, none need be surprised. For the committee has advertised, by its pusillanimous vote to reconsider the crime report, that politics are stronger than any mandate from the community to clean up disgraceful crime conditions.

The vote by which the committee's previous approval of the report was nullified is clearly a result of political pressure. Some one high in Administration circles cracked the whip and a number of weaklings—fearing the loss of patronage and favors under the work relief program—fell into line. Even so the political cat's-paws were able to upset the report only by throwing out the proxy votes of two members of the crime investigating sub-committee who were forced to be absent when the test came.

In these circumstances Representative Schulte's description of the maneuver as "parliamentary trickery" is altogether too weak. Rather it is an indefensible use of political power that will redound to the benefit of the underworld. The welfare of the District was rudely ignored. Apparently a majority of the committee members are willing to see crime flourish in the Capital City rather than risk the displeasure of unscrupulous bosses who have jobs and funds to distribute. Even the unfortunate effect of such a policy upon law enforcement in Washington is overshadowed by the implications of this betrayal of public trust in high official circles.

Some members of the committee who do not approve all the recommendations of the crime report nevertheless voted against reconsideration to avoid sabotage of the entire movement toward better law enforcement here. That courageous position was taken by Chairman Norton. "This is not," she said, "and should not be considered in any sense a political report. It is a nonpartisan service to the voteless District." But the opposition to it is chiefly political. Otherwise the committee could not possibly have reversed its previous stand by a vote of 10 to 8.

As matters stand the committee has really done nothing to change the strength of the original report. Not one iota of the evidence contained therein has been destroyed, nor has any new information or reasoning undermined its conclusions. The only new development is the undeniable evidence that patronage dispensers have bought off an honest effort in behalf of Washington.

NRA Tactics.

One of the chief arguments advanced in favor of provisional extension of the NRA was the desirability of encouraging organized industries to enter into voluntary agreements patterned after their abandoned codes. If that is the real reason for setting up a new recovery administration armed with limited powers to advise and approve, the attitude of those now in control of its policy is difficult to understand.

An order signed by the director of the Division of Business Co-operation instructs NRA officials to refrain from actively encouraging industries to submit formal applications for voluntary agreements. In explanation of this order it is stated that premature action has to be avoided until a clearly developed program has been decided upon. "Voluntary co-operation must not be handicapped, and perhaps destroyed, by action so rapid and unconsidered as to lead to continual and confusing revision."

If the new NRA were a permanent agency, caution and delay would be justified. But, in view of the fact that the agency was recreated as a stop-gap to tide over the next few months, it will either have to get busy promptly or else play the role of a purely passive and largely useless observer. Code authorities, in many cases, are fearful that delays will result in disintegration of organizations that might be held together with a little encouragement. And the NRA officials have it in their power to aid them if they choose.

If they insist upon marking time at this critical juncture they will be suspected of a desire to bring back the conditions of unregulated competition which antedated the code agreements. That might be a means of securing support for permanent NRA legislation of a stronger type. It certainly would not be playing fair with business, labor or the general public.

Whither Goes America?

From the Vancouver Sun.

In the most grandiloquent and startling address to Congress since the declaration of war in 1917, President Roosevelt outlined on Wednesday a program which he hopes will effect a "redistribution of wealth" in the United States.

Among the things he proposes are:

1. Inheritance, succession and legacy taxes in addition to those now levied on estates, and suitably higher gift taxes to prevent avoidance of the other levies.

2. A "definite increase" in present taxes on individual incomes above $1,000,000 a year.

3. Graduated corporation income taxes ranging from 10¾ to 16¾ per cent instead of the present flat 13¾ per cent.

4. "Elimination" of "unnecessary holding companies in all lines of business" through taxation.

5. A constitutional amendment permitting the Federal Government to tax future issues of State and local securities and allowing State and local governments to tax future Federal securities.

President Roosevelt should avoid falling into the idea of so many reformers that so long as you are kicking business men in the pants you are reforming something.

Certainly none of the above "reforms" seem to suggest how plant and soil production are going to be increased from their present output of 50 per cent up to 90 or even 95 per cent.

High living standards can only come from high production.

Youth Organizes.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

It seems to be assumed in the quarters of a recent contributor to your letter column that academic freedom is not academic freedom after all. It is rather a mandate to the teacher to uphold, defend and honor his State. Thus by a simple letter to the editor academic freedom is transformed into jingoism.

These defenders of America's Constitution, morals and business men are fearful of the influence of "Undemocratic" believers of "half-baked theories" on the future citizens of our country. Possibly they have reason to be.

The young people of the United States are seeking a way out. They are not especially interested in being sent to war that they may defend "democracy." They are not interested in being forced to submit to a continual denial of their rights. They still believe in the Bill of Rights and not the various sedition, syndicalism, and loyalty oath laws. They are not interested in the joblessness which faces them. Representatives of more than 2,000,000 American youths will meet in Detroit on July 4 at the Second American Youth Congress and will draw up a Declaration of the Rights of Youth.

In preparation for this congress there will be a Washington, D. C., Regional Youth Conference at the Phyllis Wheatley Y. W. C. A. on June 30. More than a thousand young people in 20 some organizations have indorsed the local youth congress. The unity of these young people and adults, of students and teachers, of Negro and white in defense of their rights, in defense of true academic freedom will send a tremor through the stanch "patriots" and jingoists.

Roma Rediviva.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Some 18 or 19 centuries ago, it was the custom in ancient Rome to take able-bodied slaves, captured in war, and line them up—the first line-up—before the emperor's box, where they were instructed and compelled by the police bureaucracy of the time, to say, "Ave, Caesar, morituri te salutamus"—"Hail, Caesar, we, about to die, salute thee!"

Now the remarkable thing about this as compared with the American House of Representatives is this phenomenon, that these Roman gladiators were forced to say these words and die the deaths they did, while our Representative peons, elected by the peonage of the United States citizenship as free representatives of a free people, voluntarily march up to the political guillotine in platoons and battalions to testify to their subserviency to the New Deal.

Thank God it isn't ancient Rome, nor medieval Rome nor modern Rome, but an intelligent if a neglectful people who can grasp the situation as it exists. Nothing in all history equals the asininity of the present House of Representatives and, to a large degree, of the present Senate. Just what are we doing to the civilization of the world in the broad light of the twentieth century? It is not necessary to suggest the answer.

But it won't work. The American people can neither be bought, bribed nor bludgeoned by $4,880,000,000.

If they can, then civilization is over.

More Old Churches.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I note a friendly controversy has been started by the publication of a statement that St. Paul's Church, Halifax, Nova Scotia, built in 1750, was the oldest Protestant church in North America.

I know of several Protestant churches in the United States that were built prior to 1750. I was informed by the late Right Rev. Leighton Coleman, Bishop of Delaware, several years ago that St. Luke's P. E. Church, Isle of Wight County, Va., was the oldest church in the United States. I have not at hand the date of its erection. St. John's P. E. Church, Hampton, Va., erected 1717, and Holy Trinity Church, Wilmington, Del., are the oldest churches in which regular services are held. The Rev. Raymond Wolvin, canon of the Cathedral and son-in-law of Bishop Freeman, was one-time vicar of Holy Trinity (Old Swede's) Church, Wilmington. I myself was superintendent of the Sunday school connected with the church several years ago. Gloria Dei Church, Philadelphia, also built by the Swedes, was erected in 1699.

In Philadelphia, Delaware County and Chester County, Pa., are some Friends meeting houses erected shortly after southeastern Pennsylvania was settled by William Penn and his followers.

I am confident that if we delve into the history of our churches along the Eastern section of the United States we will find many churches I have not listed that were erected prior to 1750.

Museum Directors' Comment.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I thought you might like to know that the article about the section of painting and sculpture by T. Milius, which appeared in the June 16 issue of The Sunday Post, was sent to our various field chairmen and received such comments as the following:

John Lee Clarke, jr., director of the Springfield Museum of Fine Arts, Springfield, Mass.: "I was very much interested in the article in The Post and wish to thank you for sending me a copy."

Walter H. Siple, director, the Cincinnati Art Museum, Cincinnati, Ohio: "Thanks a lot for the page from The Post describing the workings of the Washington office. It will be an extremely interesting article to have in our library, especially for the younger artists who use that part of our museum continually."

Fiske Kimball, director, Pennsylvania Museum of Art, Philadelphia: "Thanks very much for sending me the very attractive presentation of the work of your section. I wish we could always count on getting journalistic treatment as friendly and well written as this."

William M. Milliken, director, the Cleveland Museum of Art, Cleveland, Ohio: "Thank you so much for sending me the data about your work in Washington. The newspaper clippings were very interesting and I was glad to have them."

Well-Deserved Praise.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In your editorial columns of June 25 appeared a criticism on Senator King and Mrs. Norton for allegedly exceeding their powers in criticizing actions of various boards charged with administrative functions over this city.

The writer has found that without the help of Senator King or Mrs. Norton this city would be very badly off indeed. We have a fine Board of Commissioners, but with the best will in the world they are powerless to help in many cases.

Whatever criticism of local matters comes from either of these splendid persons on Capitol Hill be very sure that citizens of the city have requested their help.

Mrs. Norton is perfectly correct in her premises that local people should once in a while get a position in their own city. Also in the case in which you criticize Senator King, he was but voicing the views of a large mass of citizens who had looked in vain to the people's counsel for aid.

It would appear to the writer that The Post could find something of much more constructive merit to employ its efforts than to ever in any way reflect on either Senator King or Mrs. Norton, who have out of their crowded and busy lives given so much time and sympathy to the disenfranchised people who pay the taxes here in Washington with no voice in its management.

Without the aid of people of the caliber of Senator King and Mrs. Norton, God help us all here!

Delay In District Courts.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

On April 7 I became a disinterested witness for the District in a reckless driving case. Seven times the other witnesses and myself were subpenaed to appear at court, and had to spend much time sitting there before any action was taken on our case. Finally, on June 20, over two months after the defendant had violated the law, we were asked to give our testimony.

On the other six occasions our time was wasted in court that could have been used to better advantage at our places of employment. Apparently our case is not exceptional but typical. In two other instances the witnesses had been subpenaed 17 times and were still awaiting action when our case closed.

How does the District of Columbia expect to enforce its laws with such procrastination? Feeling my duty as a citizen, I willingly gave my name as a witness. Do you think I'll ever do it again? Not if I can help it! And I am not alone in this sentiment, as one may readily ascertain by talking with those who have passed through the experience of being one once.

Where does the trouble lie—in the courts themselves or in the lawyers? Undoubtedly both!

Certainly there is no good reason why the courts should permit cases to drag on indefinitely. Let's have more courts if necessary. We want justice moving rapidly. Furthermore, courts should not call witnesses until they are sure those witnesses will be used.

A reform is needed at once! If it does not come, most certainly this divine declaration will apply to our judicial system—"Judgment is turned away backward and justice standeth afar off; for truth is fallen in the street and equity can not enter." RALPH NESTLER.

The Post Impressionist

Revolutionizing The Screen.

Post Office, Friday.

"HOW they'll laugh!—Oh, how they'll laugh!" groaned Becky Sharp when her husband, having discovered the truth of her relations with the lover who had just repudiated her, rushed out of their house and left her to destruction.

"How they'll laugh! — Oh, how they'll laugh!" moaned Minnie Maddern Fiske, when her histrionic Rawdon quit her.

"How they'll laugh!—Oh, how they'll laugh!" sobs, today, Miriam Hopkins on the same occasion.

Thackeray's very own Becky uttered that revealing phrase, on the printed page, 87 years ago. The novel immediately marked its novelist for greatness and made its green-eyed vixen immortal. "In 'Vanity Fair,' writes Lord David Cecil today, "Thackeray invented a new and absolutely original form."

Minnie Maddern Davey Fiske's Becky appeared in the babyhood of the present century: the stage-version of the story—by Langdon Mitchell. It put Mrs. Fiske at the top of her profession. And of the playwright son of Dr. S. Weir Mitchell the critics wrote: "He has built a play which provides a novelty in drama."

Now comes Becky to the screen in 1935. Commentators declare that the piece promotes Miss Hopkins to the first rank among cinema players. And its practical perfection of technicolor seems likely to revolutionize the films as completely as the advent of the "talkies" revolutionized them.

* * *

The Post-Impressionist won't go quite so far for Miss Hopkins' Becky as some of this capable actress' admirers, although he will go a long way. The real Becky was a clever wolf to whom the rest of humankind were stupid lambs. Her failures were the result of no relenting within her: they were the effects of moral laws as unrelenting as Becky—and much stronger. Miss Hopkins' Becky appears to have retained a residuum of that virtue which, as Hardy pointed out, has usurped the generic term "Virtue," and she nurses a genuine love for Rawdon. The completely selfish Miss Sharp of Thackeray prized no such encumbrances.

Doubtless, however, the present Becky approaches as close to her original as the tolerance of contamporary cinemagoers will permit. Within those limits, it is a first-rate performance.

* * *

Not that we would have to strain our eyes and ears to detect some other faults—minor faults, perhaps—in scenario, cast, direction:

We should have enjoyed a flash at revolted Becky's courageous conquest of the bald and bleary Baronet—it was not the least of her maneuvers. We should have like that cunning master of the Great Gaunt Street House and Queen's Crawley, Hants, to meet Thackeray's description of him—"a man in drab breeches and gaiters, with a dirty old coat, a foul old neckcloth lashed around his bristly neck, a shining bald head, a leering red face."

We wanted: A young Pitt whose Eton form-mates really could have dubbed "Miss Crawley." A Steyne looking like either that profligate Marquis of Hertford whom Thomas Moore called "the hoary old sinner," or enough like Laurence's portrait of his successor to explain why Thackeray had to remove the first picture of Steyne from "Vanity Fair's" later editions. And a Dobbin not so much the twin of George Osborne as to keep one in constant fear of Amelia's mistaking her stoic admirer for her weakling spouse.

But the film is a remarkable film, anyhow. It is the best literary film since "David Copperfield." And its great significance is its demonstration of the triumph of technicolor, its revelation of what has been done with technicolor since 1914, and its suggestion of what technicolor is going to do—and probably with a swift wand—to the whole motion-picture world.

* * *

"A revolution" we called it—a revolution it is even if, unlike the coming of the "talkies," a bloodless one for the theater-owner. He need fit his theater with no new projection device; but the producers have turned to "new cameras, new chemical processes of taking, developing and printing the films." The entire technique of the directors is altered, the entire technique of the players, too.

Robert Edmond Jones, who dictated the harmonizing of color and its atmospherical uses in the costumes and sets of "Becky Sharp," has not put it too mildly:

"Color, properly selected and composed, can immeasurably enhance the dramatic value of the screen-story."

* * *

And what about those screen-stories as just stories?

It looks as if there would be a general change in them, also. After all, the chief end of color-photography is color—witness the otherwise undue stressing of the ballroom episode in this new version of "Becky Sharp"—and there is not much color in at least the costumes of the modern male.

So sing hey for more of the feminine element in the movies—where it was heretofore so notoriously lacking! And sing hey for more Dumas and Sabatini. And perhaps even for Sir Walter and—who knows?—Mr. G. P. R. James.

Detroit To A Socialist

By Ellen Wilkinson

Miss Wilkinson, a former Labor member of Parliament, has recently toured industrial United States and describes her impressions of the automobile center as follows in the Independent Labor Party's organ, the New Leader.

HERE, in this area, is monopoly capitalism gone mad—or forced to its logical conclusion, whichever you like. Having cut out all rivals, except the producers of specialized luxury cars, the three firms are engaged in a fierce competition among themselves. Result: the whole year's output has to be concentrated in seven or eight weeks' work.

The American Motor Show at New York is in January. Each of the firms has its spies watching for a hint of any new gadget its rival is going to bring out. They dare not start till the last second. Three years ago a small noncombine firm swept the market with the "Blue Streak"—the beginning of streamlining. That is the sort of nightmare that keeps executives awake for fear it may happen again.

In spite of the immense plant, this scramble method leads to a lot of work being put out to "small masters," who specialize on supplying particular parts. They are solely dependent on the big firms, who can therefore dictate their prices. The only way to make a profit at these prices is by insensate speeding-up the minute the word "go" comes through on the telephone.

• • • •

They dare not put their idle men on to making for stock because their part may be completely changed at the last minute, and they would have to stand the loss. So a quarter of a million men stand idle for months, living on the scraps of dole that is all these overburdened towns can afford, for they dare not tax the works for any adequate contribution toward the cost.

Then one day the executives feel they can wait no longer. Telegrams are sent out. The word is given, and the wheels begin to revolve. As they get into their stride, the pace becomes faster and faster.

I was taken to see the men who work in heavy rubber boots, rubbing down the bodies of the cars to get the smooth surface necessary for the highly finished coachwork. Gangs of 16 men had to turn out 30 per hour. The American cars are huge. Every bit had to be rubbed by hand. The order came through for another 1,000 bodies a day. The order, divided among the groups, meant such an increase in speed that the men dropped their heads on the tables and slept exhausted during their lunch hour. They propped themselves exhausted against the walls when the whistle blew before they could recover sufficient strength to go home.

• • • •

Bone and muscle had reached their limits. The men told the management they couldn't do it. They stopped work. They stopped the night shift. But the pressure of the army of unemployed outside was too strong. In police cars the strikebreakers were rushed through the gates. Production had to be slowed down, but the strikers were blacklisted.

The combines do everything they can to prevent the men organizing. They try to get as nearly a fresh staff as they can for each year's eight-week period of work. They send agents as far as Texas and Arizona to attract men with promises.

• • • •

The situation has become intolerable. Something will break, and break soon, in Michigan. In the year ending October, 1934, over $94,000,000 in sheer profits was taken out of the automobile industry, while the wages were cut and cut again. Even the hand-picked investigators from the Government have had to report that the speeding-up has reached a point where men can stand no more. Sabotage has begun in the works. Production was held up in the biggest of all motor factories because sand had been put in the bearings. If these men revolt as a mob, the results will be terrible. The need is for leadership—and the companies' thugs stand ready to smash the head of any that rises.

Too Proud For Slums

Quaker City Mayor Refuses Clearance Funds As Well As Tour Of Neighborhoods Known By Housing Experts To Embrace Other Than Dwellings Of People "Living Within Their Means."

By Eugene Pharo.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Philadelphia.

WHEN the last budget is balanced, and the last letter of the alphabet has been woven into the name of a new Government agency, Philadelphia will remain as she is—virtually perfect, and owing not a nickel to anyone. That is, all that will be true if that stanch old Republican functionary, Mayor Hampton L. Moore of the Quaker City, former busy Representative for his State at Washington, and perennial exponent of deeper waterways along the Atlantic seaboard, continues to have his way with things.

Unfortunately for the Mayor and those who think with him, there will be a primary election in the fall at which champions will be chosen for each party's vote at the following mayoralty election. Neither the Republicans nor the reforming cohorts of the Democrats give any sign of wanting to continue Mr. Moore in office.

In a way it will be a pity, for of recent months "Hampy," astringent old conservative that he is, has provided some of the most interesting copy for the local press that could be emitted by any mayor of a large American city, unless one should go back to the Middle Ages and resurrect someone to fill the role.

Lately the town has been talking because of a bit of verbal legerdemain whereby his honor sought, overnight, to rid the city of all its slums, without obligating the municipality to the Federal Government, and without contracting any obligations that might eventually irk its taxpayers.

• • • •

ARISING in all his pride of place and devotion to his native town at a meeting of a local post of the American Legion, Mr. Moore told his hearers:

"This city is too proud to have slums.

"Of course," he admitted, "there are cases of two or more families living in one house. There are houses fronting on alleys. There may be some dilapidated houses where windows are broken. But that does not constitute slums. People are merely living within their means . . ."

Inspiration for this denial of the existence of slums was in recent efforts by social welfare organizations to have the Moore administration cooperate with the Federal Government, to obtain funds for slum clearance. Mr. Moore has before this proved his determination not to cooperate with any government that remotely threatens Philadelphia with having to spend funds of its own.

"I have already rejected some of the projects for so-called slum clearance," the Mayor told the Legionnaires. "I may reject all of them. They call for tearing out whole sections of the city where self-respecting people live."

• • • •

THE social welfare forces were immensely interested the next day by his honor's attempt to eliminate by force of mouth, the slum areas that anyone can find by a ten-minute walk in either direction from lower Market street.

Samuel S. Fleisher, chairman of the Philadelphia advisory housing committee, perhaps the outstanding philanthropist of the city, founder and supporter of any number of enterprises for bringing cultural advantages to the poor, and winner of the Bok Award for service to Philadelphia, stepped to his dictophone almost as soon as he had read the newspapers.

Referring to the Mayor's statement that the city has no slums, Mr. Fleisher said, "I beg to differ with you, and would suggest that you collaborate with those who know the city and who have made a comprehensive study of our slum districts.

"There are large areas of slums, breeding places for crime and disease, lacking any kind of play facilities or character-building influences. Houses that are overcrowded, badly lighted, poorly ventilated, and, in the opinion of any fair-minded person, totally unfit for habitation . . .

"If the City of Philadelphia loses the $10,000,000 earmarked for slum clearance, due to apathy on the part of our Mayor and council, it would reflect a lasting disgrace on the city and the dominating Republican Party . . ."

• • • •

Upon receipt of this communication, and having no further Legion engagements on his calendar, Mayor Moore turned to his secretary and dictated a repetition of his statement that Philadelphia is not a city of slums. He added:

"You seem to have overlooked the relation of the taxpayers in Philadelphia to the agitation for new bureaus, new social worker outfits, new expenses, new jobs, contemplated by the 'better housing' agitators. It does not take long for one group of social workers dispensing public funds, to find 'need' for another group of social workers to dispense more public funds. Nor does it take long for those who find their well-intentioned philanthropic work becoming a burden to them individually, to seek to unload it upon the taxpayers.

"It is because I have witnessed this unloading process through easily attained legislation, both in Harrisburg and Washington, that I have exercised caution in assuming for the taxpayers of Philadelphia the cost of new activities which sooner or later must involve them in new and greater responsibilities."

Upon receipt of this letter, Mr. Fleisher, who in his first communication had offered to conduct Mayor Moore to various slum areas, so that he might know exactly how bad were the conditions he denied, decided to repeat his invitation. It evoked no response from city hall other than a statement from the Mayor's secretary that the Mayor was thoroughly acquainted with all of Philadelphia, and saw no need to go "slumming."

• • • •

IN his final invitation Mr. Fleisher had gone part way to meet the Mayor. He had admitted that there are "wide areas of convenient, comfortable homes, for which the city has long been celebrated. "But, he added, "I feel those living in its fine homes should be the ones to seek justification for the thousands who are compelled to live in cast-off houses, crowded in alleys and courts, surrounded by vandalized neighborhoods, in houses with windows and doors broken, living in rooms overcrowded beyond the danger point, and unfit in every way for habitation.

"It is these people for whom I am pleading and speaking, it is these people whom I would expect the Mayor to help, and it is for these people of Philadelphia that the Federal Government offers to step in and provide good housing.

"No one should stand in the way of such progress. I can only repeat my request to you, namely, that you take a trip through certain areas of Philadelphia and get at real facts . . ."

• • • •

THE approach to the Delaware River Bridge is specifically mentioned by Mr. Fleisher as one of several slum areas. He says nothing about the river itself, which is as much of a stench in the nostrils of residents and transients, when warm weather advertises the economical primitiveness of Philadelphia's sewage disposal, as even the worst of the downtown slum areas.

At present writing, both the Mayor's mind and the subject itself seem to be closed. It remains to be seen whether those who advise the Mayor, if there are any such, will have enough influence with him to lift him a little from the penny-pinching contentment that pervades his being as he prepares to reminisce by his own fireside over the emoluments and discomforts of a former active political career. In the meantime what everyone except the Mayor chooses to call slums remain.

Cecil Wood Is Named Jury Commissioner

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., June 27.—Cecil M. Wood, Hedgesville orchardist and banker, and a Republican, has been named by Judge D. H. Rodgers as a jury commissioner, succeeding John W. Smith, Republican, whose term has expired. He will serve with W. A. Roush, Democrat, and Circuit Clerk William C. Morton, member ex officio. The commissioners will meet in August and prepare a list of names from which grand and petit jurors will be selected.

Victor Hugo's Vitality

By Wm. Lyon Phelps.

WHEN Victor Hugo was more than 80 years of age, he had all his 32 teeth in perfect condition, and his bodily powers in all other ways seemed to be those of a man of 30.

When he ate an orange, he ate it the way a boy eats an apple; he chewed up skin and all, swallowing it with relish. When he ate a lobster, he ate and swallowed shell and all, as well as the meat; and as he crunched the hard shell with his strong teeth, he remarked that it was very good for the digestion.

Over 80, he traveled around Paris winter and summer, on the tops of the omnibuses, where people could see him. He relished his reputation and courted publicity.

• • • •

He was destitute of a sense of humor; this absence of humor deprived him of the power of self-criticism, so that he apparently did not know when he was sublime and when he was ridiculous. But if he had possessed a sense of humor, it is probable that he could not have written such magnificent poetry and prose; he let himself go, and humor is often a check on creative power. The man who is afraid of making a fool of himself often makes nothing.

Victor Hugo's conceit was as sublime as his genius; in fact, it was so colossal that one can not be either angry or disgusted. One can only stand still and behold the wonderful works of God. When he was old, his rooms were crowded every night with admirers; and if he seemed about to open his mouth, some one would say "Hush! the Master speaks!" He liked this.

One evening, an admirer said: "There ought to be an avenue named after him." Then another said: "An avenue, after this great man? The name of Paris should be changed, and the city called Victor Hugo!" Then a third: "A city? After such a genius? The name of France should be changed, and the whole country called Victor Hugo."

The poet had listened in profound silence. But now he opened his lips, and amid the awe-struck hush of the assembly, he said with quiet emphasis, "that will come in time."

Dante Gabriel Rossetti made two splendin translations of two of Victor Hugo's splendid songs in "The Burgraves." They illustrate the tremendous vitality of his genius, and his transporting power. I quote from memory.

Through the long winter the rough wind tears;
With their white garments the hills look wan.
Love on: who cares?
Who cares? Love on!

My mother is dead; God's patience wears;
It seems my chaplain will not have done.
Love on: who cares?
Who cares? Love on!

The devil, hobbling up the stairs,
Comes for me with his ugly throng.
Love on: who cares?
Who cares? Love on!
In the time of the civil broils
Our swords are stubborn things.
A fig for all the cities!
A fig for all the kings!

The Burgrave prospereth:
Men fear him more and more.
Barons, a fig for His Holiness!
A fig for the Emperor!

Right well we hold our own
With the brand and the iron rod,
A fig for Satan, Burgraves!
Burgraves, a fig for God!

Auto Accident Victim Files Suit for $10,000

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charles Town, W. Va., June 27.—Suit for $10,000 has been instituted in circuit court here by J. Lindsay Fairfax, Shenandoah Junction railroad employe, against William Larner and his mother, Mrs. Eygenia S. Larner, of Shepherdstown, for damages based on a collision between vehicles owned by Larner's mother and Fairfax.

The accident occurred on the Martinsburg road several weeks ago. Jack Brazier, of Charles Town, who was riding with Larner, was killed. Fairfax, his wife and his brother-in-law, who were in the other machine, were hurt.

Wheeler Is Forgotten County Of Oregon, Inventory Shows

Area Lacks State Police Office, Farm Station and Liquor Store.

By the United Press.

Salem, Oreg.—Wheeler is the forgotten county of Oregon.

It has no State police office, agricultural experiment station, State institution, liquor store or any of the dozen other items covered in a property control survey to be made by Budget Director D. O. Hood's office.

An inventory of State-owned property in every county has been planned as an economy measure. State departments will be expected to pool some resources and interchange them, thus saving the State from buying too many duplicates of seldom-used articles.

Every State-owned desk, chair, pencil, piece of paper, typewriter, automobile and piece of property down to the smallest paper clip will be counted in the inventory. SERA help may be employed, especially in Marion and Multnomah Counties where the greatest amount of State property is located and at State institutions and schools.

These places of business will be covered by the survey: All governmental offices, country agents' office, home demonstration agents' office, State police quarters, experiment station, forestry storerooms, liquid stores, agricultural department shipping point inspection service office, penal and charitable institutions, secretary of State branch offices, commissions, boards, highway department offices, University of Oregon, Oregon State College and the three normal schools.

But of all of these, forgotten Wheeler County has only highway department property, and it has already been enumerated. The county has two liquor agencies, but they will not be covered.

Lincoln's Site For Duel Goes Under Water

Dam in Mississippi to Erase Island Used Also as War Cemetery.

By the United Press.

St. Louis.—A Mississippi River island which once was chosen as a dueling ground for Abraham Lincoln and later was the cemetery for Confederate victims who died of smallpox while in the military prison at Alton during the Civil War is being removed piecemeal from the Missouri shore of the river to provide a base of operations for the Federal Government's work on a dam across the river at Alton.

About 40,000 cubic feet of earth has already been removed from the piece of ground. It is no longer an island in reality, having been joined to the Missouri mainland by the action of river currents. The earth is being removed from a point about 200 yeards from the dam.

Soldier His Opponent.

When Lincoln was supposed to have gone there for a duel the land was known as McPike's Island. It was chosen as the site of a duel between Lincoln, then a country lawyer, and James Shields, brigadier of the Mexican War. Shields challenged Lincoln after the latter wrote an article which offended him.

Tradition has it that Lincoln, given a choice of weapons, picked cavalry broadswords, a selection which his challenger did not particularly favor. The day of the duel, Lincoln "warmed up" by slicing off a small willow tree with his immense weapon, at which Shields burst out laughing. Before they returned to the Illinois shore their quarrel was made up, without the duel having been fought.

Known as Smallpox Island.

During the Civil War, its use as a cemetery followed an outbreak of smallpox at the prison camp at Alton, where numerous Confederate soldiers were confined. After that episode it was known as Smallpox Island.

The dam now under construction by the Government is one of many being built along the length of the river to control the effects of river currents and aid navigation.

Convict Band Stars Over the Air Lanes

Columbus, Ohio (U.P.).—You'll never hear of the "Rogues of Rhythm" playing at the famous dance spots of the country, but they make regular appearances over Ohio air lanes.

The convict band plays regularly each Sunday afternoon from the Ohio Penitentiary over a Columbus radio station.

The orchestra boasts of all modern arrangements despite the inability of members to contact other famous leaders for an exchange of "business tactics."

The musical organization also takes part in performances presented behind the walls for members of the institution.

No Debts to Worry County in Wyoming

Douglas, Wyo. (U.P.).—No debts and but a few back taxes have the county commissioners of Converse County to worry about. At their last meeting, the commissioners ordered County Treasurer Burgess to pay off the last $14,000 of indebtedness. At a previous meeting, $10,000 in debts was erased from the books. Back taxes owed the State of Wyoming will be taken care of gradually, the commissioners announced.

Montana Indian Tribe To Get Herd of Buffalo

Butte, Mont. (U.P.).—An experiment that may prove of far greater practical value than can now be foreseen—because of its sentiment—is under way on the Crow Indian reservation in southeastern Montana.

It is the establishment of a buffalo range along the Big Horn River, one of two such ranges authorized last April by Indian Commissioner John Collier. The other range is on the Pine Ridge Reservation in South Dakota.

A herd of 77 buffalo was given to the Crow Indians as a basis of the new herd. They are now being crated—singly because they cannot be shipped like domestic cattle—and shipped from Yellowstone Park by truck to their new home on the Big Horn.

New Officers Sought At Davis, Elkins College

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Elkins, W. Va., June 27.—The board of trustees of Davis and Elkins College is expected to meet tomorrow night to take action on the selection of a new president and a new coach made necessary by the election of Dr. James E. Allen to the presidency of Marshall College and appointment of Camden Henderson as athletic director of the same institution at Huntington.

Henderson will leave July 1 for his new post, while Dr. Allen will remain until July 21 to wind up his 25 years' administration here.

Chickens Hold Secret Of Gold Mine Location

St. Hyacinthe, Quebec (U.P.).—J. A. E. Morin, St. Joseph de Yamaska poultryman, is keeping a close watch on the movements of his chickens in the hope that they will lead him to a rich gold strike.

While preparing a fowl for the market, Morin found a gold nugget about the size of a bean in its gullet. He believes that if he follows his flocks long enough he will find out where the chicken picked up the gold.

Danville Bank Ready To Pay $6,000 Dividend

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., June 27.—The American National Bank has declared its usual 2 per cent semiannual dividend on the capital stock. A disbursement of $6,000 will take place Monday. Reports presented to the directors showed an increase in the number of deposits and an increase also in the surplus and undivided profits account.

The Industrial Bank of Danville will pay a dividend of 25 cents per share on the common stock on July 1, this amounting to $5,000.

Four Men Considered For High School Post

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., June 27.—Four men are under consideration of Supt. G. L. H. Johnson for appointment as principal of George Washington High School. They will come here presently for conferences. The names have not been made public. John D. Riddick recently resigned his post here to become principal of Jefferson High School in Roanoke.

Operator of Still Gets Two-Year Term

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Elkins, W. Va., June 27.—After he had confessed in Federal court here, Martin M. Bell, 61, of Lower Cheat, was sentenced by Judge William E. Baker to the penitentiary for two years for operating a moonshine still, and ordered to pay a fine of $1,000.

Denver Leary, jointly indicted with Martin, was given 12 months in the Harrison County Jail at Clarksburg.

"Do you mind driving slow until we finish this game?"

Venus stepped down from her pedestal at the Corcoran Art Gallery and sighed enviously. There was a wistful look in her eyes as she patted her hair back into place.

"You don't know what breaks these modern women get," she moaned. "Now, in my day, things were different."

We leaned against a glass case and listened to her plaintive tale.

"Why," she continued, "when I wanted vanishing cream or a new lipstick I had to send that flighty daughter-in-law of mine, Psyche, over to Proserpine's house across the River Styx to get it and, would you believe it, I tramped all the way from Olympus to the Parthenon without finding a single decent Beauty Shoppe! And you know how catty those Athenian newspapermen could be. That awful Aristophanes, who had that scurrilous column in the Daily Gazette, actually said that if I got another wrinkle my face would look like a prune skin.

"But these modern women have all their beauty and personality problems solved by Frances Mangum, of The Washington Post, and she knows ever so much more about beauty than I did." She smiled shyly. "But then, I had my moments. There was that dear boy, Praxiteles . . ."

Well, since Beauty is Truth, Venus was right: Miss Washington does get a break. All she has to do to keep her nose from being shiny or her chins from doubling is to follow Frances Mangum's advice in The Post. Frances knows her cosmetics, whether they're to be used to please a sweetheart, hold a husband, or make the blonde next door jealous. She tells you where to get 'em, how to apply 'em, and, when the date is over, how to peel 'em off. In short, Frances' column is the answer to a perplexed maiden's prayer.

And Handsome being what Handsome does, Frances also advises you on ways to develop your personality . . . how to acquire that charm which will make men want to shower you with attentions . . . and other women long to cut your throat. Even Madame de Stael could have profited from our Frances' column.

If you have wrinkles instead of dimples . . . circles instead of curves . . . girl-friends instead of boy-friends . . . let Miss Mangum tell you the reason why. Follow her advice and you'll have that movie-actress figure . . . that peaches-and-cream complexion . . . those come-hither eyes . . . and a lot more fun. Her column is found each Sunday on the Household Pages of Tax Dangers Ahead.

Congress is preparing to follow customary and constitutional procedure in formulating and passing upon a new tax bill. Unless the President changes his mind again, there seems to be no danger that a bill will be rushed through within a few days, without opportunity for study or public hearings.

Unfortunately, however, assurance that the procedure is to be orderly does not guarantee the emergence of a carefully thought-out, well-rounded program. Indeed, if the wishes of certain Senators and Representatives receive serious consideration, the new tax measure will be loaded down with a number of irrelevant and undesirable features. The irrepressible Mr. Patman, for instance, is already making plans to attach his cash bonus scheme as a rider to the tax bill. Other members of Congress, unmindful of the difference between tariff and taxation measures, are said to favor inclusion of new import duties upon various commodities.

Congress faces a doubly difficult task. It must not only be on its guard to exclude irrelevant proposals, but it should be prepared to recommend new taxes in order to expand the President's sketchy program. The House would not be fully discharging its responsibilities if it were content with a revenue measure restricted to taxes upon large incomes and inheritances and graduated corporation taxes. If there is to be new tax legislation at this session of Congress, there is no excuse for evading the issue presented by an annual deficit in excess of $3,000,000,000.

It is a challenge to the ingenuity of tax experts to devise ways and means of covering at least a substantial proportion of such huge outlays. That can not be accomplished by adding a few levies here and there to the existing tax structure. What is needed is a thorough-going overhauling of the entire system, with special attention to reforms in income taxation designed to spread its burden over a much larger portion of the population.

In The Planned Economy.

Regardless of how it came about, the extraordinary parliamentary muddle created by the President's tax program has placed the chairman of the Senate Finance Committee in a most invidious position.

When the message was first sent to Congress Senator Harrison properly commented that "the proposed tax legislation will, of course, originate in the House." Then, by some confusion on which Mr. Roosevelt has shed no light, the Senator got the idea that this "must" legislation should be jammed through in the form of amendments to the nuisance tax resolution. Now that midsummer madness is happily dispelled and the program is to be taken up in orderly fashion by the Ways and Means Committee of the House. All's well that ends well—except for those who are unjustly made to look silly in the process.

Another curious example of the consummate ease with which false impressions are created in Washington now traces to Secretary Morgenthau. On June 24, when asked about the preparation of the tax program, he observed that "we have had our home work done for several weeks." On June 26 it developed that while the Treasury tax experts had worked all the night before, they did not have ready for the Senate Finance Committee their computations of the probable effect of the proposed tax changes.

Nearly everyone has laughed at the embarrassment of the volunteer who submits himself to the dexterity of a sleight-of-hand artist. It is funny to see rabbits pulled from the necks of sober citizens who did not realize with what ease the quickness of the hand deceives the eye. Everybody laughs at the victim in such circumstances. But none blame him if, in confidence, he has an observation or two to make about the magician afterward.

Division By Secret Ballot?

According to report, private polls of the House show that a substantial majority of its members are opposed to the so-called "death sentence" provision of the holding company bill. Yet the President was balked in his efforts to secure a roll-call vote on this one issue that would have put the members on record for or against it.

Legislative cowardice is here shown at its worst, because the majority group which opposes the "death sentence" has nothing to be ashamed of. On the contrary, its members are in a position to make a most convincing fight against the unreasonably harsh provisions of the bill. Yet they are unwilling to take an open stand against a measure indorsed by the President.

If legislative pusillanimity is carried to much greater extremes, there will be only one way of securing an uncoerced expression of opinion from cowed Congressmen. It will become necessary to resort to secret balloting on critical issues. The country might in that case escape certain rash or hastily devised legislative experiments decreed by the executive arm of government. But Congress would have to surrender the pretense of being a representative deliberative body, with a membership free to express and vote reasoned convictions on matters of public policy.

Belated Follow-Up.

In the famous gold clause cases the United States Supreme Court decided that Congress has no constitutional right to alter the terms of a contract between the Federal Government and the holders of its obligations. As the court emphasized the fact that plaintiffs had not shown nor attempted to show losses resulting from abrogation of the gold clause, a good many commentators inferred that claims for damages might be established if circumstances should arise under which losses could be proved. In urging Congress to withdraw its consent to suits by holders of gold clause bonds, therefore, the President is simply resolving existing uncertainties in favor of the Government.

There is no danger under the gold decision that a "handful of private litigants" could, as the President states, "exploit the general public in the hope of a purely speculative private profit." However, if the Government were to pursue an inflationary policy that resulted in seriously depreciating the purchasing power of the dollar, holders of bonds bearing the gold clause might perhaps be in a position to recover damages. At least, that is the belief of some careful interpreters of the Supreme Court decisions. Furthermore, if the United States were to enter into stabilization agreements with other countries, agreeing to remove the ban upon free movements of gold, foreign holders of United States gold bonds, who have unquestionably suffered losses through dollar devaluation, might seek to be indemnified.

It is probable, therefore, that the President's message will unloose a flood of speculation as to the purpose of asking Congress at this particular time to protect the Government against suits. That would have been a simple and understandable action had it been taken immediately following the decision in the gold clause cases. Then, however, the Government seemed inclined to minimize the possibility of suits of this sort.

Naturally it is a rather painful proceeding for a government to close its courts to those who believe that they have suffered injury at its hands. As President Roosevelt says, the "immunity of the sovereign from suit is a principle of universal acceptance, and permission to bring such suits is an act of grace." Nevertheless, the average American will not be disposed to agree with the President that the proposed ban upon suits is merely directed against those who plan to use the courts "to sabotage the operations of government or in aid of private speculation."

There are a great many conceivable conditions under which the holder of a gold bond might be able to prove that he had suffered loss through refusal of the Government to fulfill the terms of its contract. The knowledge that a sovereign State can not be held to observance of its promises does not alter the fact that arbitrary modification of Government contracts deals a severe blow to public confidence.

Boring From Without.

The senior Senator from Iowa is persuaded that Mr. H. S. Raushenbush, counsel for the Senate Munitions Investigating Committee, is "boring from within" to convert the United States Government into "various socialistic schemes."

The word "persuaded" is used advisedly. Members of the munitions committee who rose to the defense of their investigator produced a letter from William B. Shearer containing not only the same charges advanced by Senator Dickinson but also the same quotations from his earlier writings together with the same elisions. This could scarcely have been mere coincidence. Wittingly or not, Senator Dickinson has acted as a sounding board for a man whose record where armaments contracts are concerned is anything but objective. And only laughter is possible when Mr. Shearer denounces "boring from within."

Whatever the political views of Mr. Raushenbush, there is no question as to his efficiency and integrity as an investigating official for the Senate committee. Whether he be socialist or monarchist is immaterial to the issue. His prime qualification should be, and is, intellectual honesty.

In contrast, the man who is directing the attack against him is a lobbyist whose professional interest is to discredit the Senate probe. And Mr. Shearer is doing precisely what Mr. Raushenbush himself anticipated as far back as the time when he was first being interviewed for his present position. At that time he was reluctant to accept the assignment for fear his honestly-held political beliefs might later embarrass the committee. Now his fears are realized. Mr. Shearer, in a letter written to Senator Clark a month ago, charges that "Raushenbush differs from the Bolsheviks merely in that he believes in 'boring from within' rather than bloody revolution." And Senator Dickinson takes up the cry.

There are many grounds on which the Senate Munitions Committee may be criticized. But Mr. Shearer is not the man to do the criticizing. From him, in this field, every knock is a boost.

Shameful Performance.

If the performance of the House District Committee on Wednesday is followed by an influx of criminals, none need be surprised. For the committee has advertised, by its pusillanimous vote to reconsider the crime report, that politics are stronger than any mandate from the community to clean up disgraceful crime conditions.

The vote by which the committee's previous approval of the report was nullified is clearly a result of political pressure. Some one high in Administration circles cracked the whip and a number of weaklings—fearing the loss of patronage and favors under the work relief program—fell into line. Even so the political cat's-paws were able to upset the report only by throwing out the proxy votes of two members of the crime investigating sub-committee who were forced to be absent when the test came.

In these circumstances Representative Schulte's description of the maneuver as "parliamentary trickery" is altogether too weak. Rather it is an indefensible use of political power that will redound to the benefit of the underworld. The welfare of the District was rudely ignored. Apparently a majority of the committee members are willing to see crime flourish in the Capital City rather than risk the displeasure of unscrupulous bosses who have jobs and funds to distribute. Even the unfortunate effect of such a policy upon law enforcement in Washington is overshadowed by the implications of this betrayal of public trust in high official circles.

Some members of the committee who do not approve all the recommendations of the crime report nevertheless voted against reconsideration to avoid sabotage of the entire movement toward better law enforcement here. That courageous position was taken by Chairman Norton. "This is not," she said, "and should not be considered in any sense a political report. It is a nonpartisan service to the voteless District." But the opposition to it is chiefly political. Otherwise the committee could not possibly have reversed its previous stand by a vote of 10 to 8.

As matters stand the committee has really done nothing to change the strength of the original report. Not one iota of the evidence contained therein has been destroyed, nor has any new information or reasoning undermined its conclusions. The only new development is the undeniable evidence that patronage dispensers have bought off an honest effort in behalf of Washington.

NRA Tactics.

One of the chief arguments advanced in favor of provisional extension of the NRA was the desirability of encouraging organized industries to enter into voluntary agreements patterned after their abandoned codes. If that is the real reason for setting up a new recovery administration armed with limited powers to advise and approve, the attitude of those now in control of its policy is difficult to understand.

An order signed by the director of the Division of Business Co-operation instructs NRA officials to refrain from actively encouraging industries to submit formal applications for voluntary agreements. In explanation of this order it is stated that premature action has to be avoided until a clearly developed program has been decided upon. "Voluntary co-operation must not be handicapped, and perhaps destroyed, by action so rapid and unconsidered as to lead to continual and confusing revision."

If the new NRA were a permanent agency, caution and delay would be justified. But, in view of the fact that the agency was recreated as a stop-gap to tide over the next few months, it will either have to get busy promptly or else play the role of a purely passive and largely useless observer. Code authorities, in many cases, are fearful that delays will result in disintegration of organizations that might be held together with a little encouragement. And the NRA officials have it in their power to aid them if they choose.

If they insist upon marking time at this critical juncture they will be suspected of a desire to bring back the conditions of unregulated competition which antedated the code agreements. That might be a means of securing support for permanent NRA legislation of a stronger type. It certainly would not be playing fair with business, labor or the general public.

Whither Goes America?

From the Vancouver Sun.

In the most grandiloquent and startling address to Congress since the declaration of war in 1917, President Roosevelt outlined on Wednesday a program which he hopes will effect a "redistribution of wealth" in the United States.

Among the things he proposes are:

1. Inheritance, succession and legacy taxes in addition to those now levied on estates, and suitably higher gift taxes to prevent avoidance of the other levies.

2. A "definite increase" in present taxes on individual incomes above $1,000,000 a year.

3. Graduated corporation income taxes ranging from 10¾ to 16¾ per cent instead of the present flat 13¾ per cent.

4. "Elimination" of "unnecessary holding companies in all lines of business" through taxation.

5. A constitutional amendment permitting the Federal Government to tax future issues of State and local securities and allowing State and local governments to tax future Federal securities.

President Roosevelt should avoid falling into the idea of so many reformers that so long as you are kicking business men in the pants you are reforming something.

Certainly none of the above "reforms" seem to suggest how plant and soil production are going to be increased from their present output of 50 per cent up to 90 or even 95 per cent.

High living standards can only come from high production.

Youth Organizes.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It seems to be assumed in the quarters of a recent contributor to your letter column that academic freedom is not academic freedom after all. It is rather a mandate to the teacher to uphold, defend and honor his State. Thus by a simple letter to the editor academic freedom is transformed into jingoism.

These defenders of America's Constitution, morals and business men are fearful of the influence of "Undemocratic" believers of "half-baked theories" on the future citizens of our country. Possibly they have reason to be.

The young people of the United States are seeking a way out. They are not especially interested in being sent to war that they may defend "democracy." They are not interested in being forced to submit to a continual denial of their rights. They still believe in the Bill of Rights and not the various sedition, syndicalism, and loyalty oath laws. They are not interested in the joblessness which faces them. Representatives of more than 2,000,000 American youths will meet in Detroit on July 4 at the Second American Youth Congress and will draw up a Declaration of the Rights of Youth.

In preparation for this congress there will be a Washington, D. C., Regional Youth Conference at the Phyllis Wheatley Y. W. C. A. on June 30. More than a thousand young people in 20 some organizations have indorsed the local youth congress. The unity of these young people and adults, of students and teachers, of Negro and white in defense of their rights, in defense of true academic freedom will send a tremor through the stanch "patriots" and jingoists.

Roma Rediviva.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Some 18 or 19 centuries ago, it was the custom in ancient Rome to take able-bodied slaves, captured in war, and line them up—the first line-up—before the emperor's box, where they were instructed and compelled by the police bureaucracy of the time, to say, "Ave, Caesar, morituri te salutamus"—"Hail, Caesar, we, about to die, salute thee!"

Now the remarkable thing about this as compared with the American House of Representatives is this phenomenon, that these Roman gladiators were forced to say these words and die the deaths they did, while our Representative peons, elected by the peonage of the United States citizenship as free representatives of a free people, voluntarily march up to the political guillotine in platoons and battalions to testify to their subserviency to the New Deal.

Thank God it isn't ancient Rome, nor medieval Rome nor modern Rome, but an intelligent if a neglectful people who can grasp the situation as it exists. Nothing in all history equals the asininity of the present House of Representatives and, to a large degree, of the present Senate. Just what are we doing to the civilization of the world in the broad light of the twentieth century? It is not necessary to suggest the answer.

But it won't work. The American people can neither be bought, bribed nor bludgeoned by $4,880,000,000.

If they can, then civilization is over.

More Old Churches.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I note a friendly controversy has been started by the publication of a statement that St. Paul's Church, Halifax, Nova Scotia, built in 1750, was the oldest Protestant church in North America.

I know of several Protestant churches in the United States that were built prior to 1750. I was informed by the late Right Rev. Leighton Coleman, Bishop of Delaware, several years ago that St. Luke's P. E. Church, Isle of Wight County, Va., was the oldest church in the United States. I have not at hand the date of its erection. St. John's P. E. Church, Hampton, Va., erected 1717, and Holy Trinity Church, Wilmington, Del., are the oldest churches in which regular services are held. The Rev. Raymond Wolvin, canon of the Cathedral and son-in-law of Bishop Freeman, was one-time vicar of Holy Trinity (Old Swede's) Church, Wilmington. I myself was superintendent of the Sunday school connected with the church several years ago. Gloria Dei Church, Philadelphia, also built by the Swedes, was erected in 1699.

In Philadelphia, Delaware County and Chester County, Pa., are some Friends meeting houses erected shortly after southeastern Pennsylvania was settled by William Penn and his followers.

I am confident that if we delve into the history of our churches along the Eastern section of the United States we will find many churches I have not listed that were erected prior to 1750.

Museum Directors' Comment.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I thought you might like to know that the article about the section of painting and sculpture by T. Milius, which appeared in the June 16 issue of The Sunday Post, was sent to our various field chairmen and received such comments as the following:

John Lee Clarke, jr., director of the Springfield Museum of Fine Arts, Springfield, Mass.: "I was very much interested in the article in The Post and wish to thank you for sending me a copy."

Walter H. Siple, director, the Cincinnati Art Museum, Cincinnati, Ohio: "Thanks a lot for the page from The Post describing the workings of the Washington office. It will be an extremely interesting article to have in our library, especially for the younger artists who use that part of our museum continually."

Fiske Kimball, director, Pennsylvania Museum of Art, Philadelphia: "Thanks very much for sending me the very attractive presentation of the work of your section. I wish we could always count on getting journalistic treatment as friendly and well written as this."

William M. Milliken, director, the Cleveland Museum of Art, Cleveland, Ohio: "Thank you so much for sending me the data about your work in Washington. The newspaper clippings were very interesting and I was glad to have them."

Well-Deserved Praise.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your editorial columns of June 25 appeared a criticism on Senator King and Mrs. Norton for allegedly exceeding their powers in criticizing actions of various boards charged with administrative functions over this city.

The writer has found that without the help of Senator King or Mrs. Norton this city would be very badly off indeed. We have a fine Board of Commissioners, but with the best will in the world they are powerless to help in many cases.

Whatever criticism of local matters comes from either of these splendid persons on Capitol Hill be very sure that citizens of the city have requested their help.

Mrs. Norton is perfectly correct in her premises that local people should once in a while get a position in their own city. Also in the case in which you criticize Senator King, he was but voicing the views of a large mass of citizens who had looked in vain to the people's counsel for aid.

It would appear to the writer that The Post could find something of much more constructive merit to employ its efforts than to ever in any way reflect on either Senator King or Mrs. Norton, who have out of their crowded and busy lives given so much time and sympathy to the disenfranchised people who pay the taxes here in Washington with no voice in its management.

Without the aid of people of the caliber of Senator King and Mrs. Norton, God help us all here!

Delay In District Courts.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On April 7 I became a disinterested witness for the District in a reckless driving case. Seven times the other witnesses and myself were subpenaed to appear at court, and had to spend much time sitting there before any action was taken on our case. Finally, on June 20, over two months after the defendant had violated the law, we were asked to give our testimony.

On the other six occasions our time was wasted in court that could have been used to better advantage at our places of employment. Apparently our case is not exceptional but typical. In two other instances the witnesses had been subpenaed 17 times and were still awaiting action when our case closed.

How does the District of Columbia expect to enforce its laws with such procrastination? Feeling my duty as a citizen, I willingly gave my name as a witness. Do you think I'll ever do it again? Not if I can help it! And I am not alone in this sentiment, as one may readily ascertain by talking with those who have passed through the experience of being one once.

Where does the trouble lie—in the courts themselves or in the lawyers? Undoubtedly both!

Certainly there is no good reason why the courts should permit cases to drag on indefinitely. Let's have more ecurts if necessary. We want justice moving rapidly. Furthermore, courts should not call witnesses until they are sure those witnesses will be used.

A reform is needed at once! If it does not come, most certainly this divine declaration will apply to our judicial system—"Judgment is turned away backward and justice standeth afar off; for truth is fallen in the street and equity can not enter." RALPH NESTLER.

The Post Impressionist

Revolutionizing The Screen.

Post Office, Friday.

"HOW they'll laugh!—Oh, how they'll laugh!" groaned Becky Sharp when her husband, having discovered the truth of her relations with the lover who had just repudiated her, rushed out of their house and left her to destruction.

"How they'll laugh! — Oh, how they'll laugh!" moaned Minnie Maddern Fiske, when her histrionic Rawdon quit her.

"How they'll laugh!—Oh, how they'll laugh!" sobs, today, Miriam Hopkins on the same occasion.

Thackeray's very own Becky uttered that revealing phrase, on the printed page, 87 years ago. The novel immediately marked its novelist for greatness and made its green-eyed vixen immortal. "In 'Vanity Fair,' writes Lord David Cecil today, "Thackeray invented a new and absolutely original form."

Minnie Maddern Davey Fiske's Becky appeared in the babyhood of the present century: the stage-version of the story—by Langdon Mitchell. It put Mrs. Fiske at the top of her profession. And of the playwright son of Dr. S. Weir Mitchell the critics wrote: "He has built a play which provides a novelty in drama."

Now comes Becky to the screen in 1935. Commentators declare that the piece promotes Miss Hopkins to the first rank among cinema players. And its practical perfection of technicolor seems likely to revolutionize the films as completely as the advent of the "talkies" revolutionized them.

* * *

The Post-Impressionist won't go quite so far for Miss Hopkins' Becky as some of this capable actress' admirers, although he will go a long way. The real Becky was a clever wolf to whom the rest of humankind were stupid lambs. Her failures were the result of no relenting within her: they were the effects of moral laws as unrelenting as Becky—and much stronger. Miss Hopkins' Becky appears to have retained a residuum of that virtue which, as Hardy pointed out, has usurped the generic term "Virtue," and she nurses a genuine love for Rawdon. The completely selfish Miss Sharp of Thackeray prized no such encumbrances.

Doubtless, however, the present Becky approaches as close to her original as the tolerance of contemporary cinemagoers will permit. Within those limits, it is a first-rate performance.

* * *

Not that we would have to strain our eyes and ears to detect some other faults—minor faults, perhaps—in scenario, cast, direction:

We should have enjoyed a flash at revolted Becky's courageous conquest of the bald and bleary Baronet—it was not the least of her maneuvers. We should have like that cunning master of the Great Gaunt Street House and Queen's Crawley, Hants, to meet Thackeray's description of him—"a man in drab breeches and gaiters, with a dirty old coat, a foul old neck-cloth lashed around his bristly neck, a shining bald head, a leering red face."

We wanted: A young Pitt whose Eton form-mates really could have dubbed "Miss Crawley." A Steyne looking like either that profligate Marquis of Hertford whom Thomas Moore called "the hoary old sinner," or enough like Laurence's portrait of his successor to explain why Thackeray had to remove the first picture of Steyne from "Vanity Fair's" later editions. And a Dobbin not so much the twin of George Osborne as to keep one in constant fear of Amelia's mistaking her stoic admirer for her weakling spouse.

* * *

But the film is a remarkable film, anyhow. It is the best literary film since "David Copperfield." And its great significance is its demonstration of the triumph of technicolor, its revelation of what has been done with technicolor since 1914, and its suggestion of what technicolor is going to do—and probably with a swift wand—to the whole motion-picture world.

* * *

"A revolution" we called it—a revolution it is even if, unlike the coming of the "talkies," a bloodless one for the theater-owner. He need fit his theater with no new projection device; but the producers have turned to "new cameras, new chemical processes of taking, developing and printing the films." The entire technique of the directors is altered, the entire technique of the players, too.

Robert Edmond Jones, who dictated the harmonizing of color and its atmospherical uses in the costumes and sets of "Becky Sharp," has not put it too mildly:

"Color, properly selected and composed, can immeasurably enhance the dramatic value of the screen-story."

* * *

And what about those screen-stories as just stories?

It looks as if there would be a general change in them, also. After all, the chief end of color-photography is color—witness the otherwise undue stressing of the ballroom episode in this new version of "Becky Sharp"—and there is not much color in at least the costumes of the modern male.

So hing hey for more of the feminine element in the movies—where it was heretofore so notoriously lacking! And sing hey for more Dumas and Sabatini. And perhaps even for Sir Walter and—who knows?—Mr. G. P. R. James.

Detroit To A Socialist

By Ellen Wilkinson

Miss Wilkinson, a former Labor member of Parliament, has recently toured industrial United States and describes her impressions of the automobile center as follows in the Independent Labor Party's organ, the New Leader.

HERE, in this area, is monopoly capitalism gone mad—or forced to its logical conclusion, whichever you like. Having cut out all rivals, except the producers of specialized luxury cars, the three firms are engaged in a fierce competition among themselves. Result: the whole year's output has to be concentrated in seven or eight weeks' work.

The American Motor Show at New York is in January. Each of the firms has its spies watching for a hint of any new gadget its rival is going to bring out. They dare not start till the last second. Three years ago a small noncombine firm swept the market with the "Blue Streak"—the beginning of streamlining. That is the sort of nightmare that keeps executives awake for fear it may happen again.

In spite of the immense plant, this scramble method leads to a lot of work being put out to "small masters," who specialize on supplying particular parts. They are solely dependent on the big firms, who can therefore dictate their prices. The only way to make a profit at these prices is by insensate speeding-up the minute the word "go" comes through on the telephone.

• • • •

They dare not put their idle men on to making for stock because their part may be completely changed at the last minute, and they would have to stand the loss. So a quarter of a million men stand idle for months, living on the scraps of dole that is all these overburdened towns can afford, for they dare not tax the works for any adequate contribution toward the cost.

Then one day the executives feel they can wait no longer. Telegrams are sent out. The word is given, and the wheels begin to revolve. As they get into their stride, the pace becomes faster and faster.

I was taken to see the men who work in heavy rubber boots, rubbing down the bodies of the cars to get the smooth surface necessary for the highly finished coachwork. Gangs of 16 men had to turn out 30 per hour. The American cars are huge. Every bit had to be rubbed by hand. The order came through for another 1,000 bodies a day. The order, divided among the groups, meant such an increase in speed that the men dropped their heads on the tables and slept exhausted during their lunch hour. They propped themselves exhausted against the walls when the whistle blew before they could recover sufficient strength to go home.

• • • •

Bone and muscle had reached their limits. The men told the management they couldn't do it. They stopped work. They stopped the night shift. But the pressure of the army of unemployed outside was too strong. In police cars the strike-breakers were rushed through the gates. Production had to be slowed down, but the strikers were blacklisted.

The combines do everything they can to prevent the men organizing. They try to get as nearly a fresh staff as they can for each year's eight-week period of work. They send agents as far as Texas and Arizona to attract men with promises.

• • • •

The situation has become intolerable. Something will break, and break soon, in Michigan. In the year ending October, 1934, over $94,000,000 in sheer profits was taken out of the automobile industry, while the wages were cut and cut again. Even the hand-picked investigators from the Government have had to report that the speeding-up has reached a point where men can stand no more. Sabotage has begun in the works. Production was held up in the biggest of all motor factories because sand had been put in the bearings. If these men revolt as a mob, the results will be terrible. The need is for leadership—and the companies' thugs stand ready to smash the head of any that rises.

Too Proud For Slums

By Eugene Pharo.
Special Correspondence of The Post.
Philadelphia.

WHEN the last budget is balanced, and the last letter of the alphabet has been woven into the name of a new Government agency, Philadelphia will remain as she is—virtually perfect, and owing not a nickel to anyone. That is, all that will be true if that stanch old Republican functionary, Mayor Hampton L. Moore of the Quaker City, former busy Representative for his State at Washington, and perennial exponent of deeper waterways along the Atlantic seaboard, continues to have his way with things.

Unfortunately for the Mayor and those who think with him, there will be a primary election in the fall at which champions will be chosen for each party's vote at the following mayoralty election. Neither the Republicans nor the reforming cohorts of the Democrats give any sign of wanting to continue Mr. Moore in office.

In a way it will be a pity, for of recent months "Hampy," astringent old conservative that he is, has provided some of the most interesting copy for the local press that could be emitted by any mayor of a large American city, unless one should go back to the Middle Ages and resurrect someone to fill the role.

Lately the town has been talking because of a bit of verbal legerdemain whereby his honor sought, overnight, to rid the city of all its slums, without obligating the municipality to the Federal Government, and without contracting any obligations that might eventually irk its taxpayers.

• • • •

ARISING in all his pride of place and devotion to his native town at a meeting of a local post of the American Legion, Mr. Moore told his hearers:

"This city is too proud to have slums.

"Of course," he admitted, "there are cases of two or more families living in one house. There are houses fronting on alleys. There may be some dilapidated houses where windows are broken. But that does not constitute slums. People are merely living within their means . . ."

Inspiration for this denial of the existence of slums was in recent efforts by social welfare organizations to have the Moore administration cooperate with the Federal Government, to obtain funds for slum clearance. Mr. Moore has before this proved his determination not to cooperate with any government that remotely threatens Philadelphia with having to spend funds of its own.

"I have already rejected some of the projects for so-called slum clearance," the Mayor told the Legionnaires. "I may reject all of them. They call for tearing out whole sections of the city where self-respecting people live."

• • • •

THE social welfare forces were immensely interested the next day by his honor's attempt to eliminate by force of mouth, the slum areas that anyone can find by a ten-minute walk in either direction from lower Market street.

Samuel S. Fleisher, chairman of the Philadelphia advisory housing committee, perhaps the outstanding philanthropist of the city, founder and supporter of any number of enterprises for bringing cultural advantages to the poor, and winner of the Bok Award for service to Philadelphia, stepped to his dictophone almost as soon as he had read the newspapers.

Referring to the Mayor's statement that the city has no slums, Mr. Fleisher said, "I beg to differ with you, and would suggest that you collaborate with those who know the city and who have made a comprehensive study of our slum districts.

"There are large areas of slums, breeding places for crime and disease, lacking any kind of play facilities or character-building influences. Houses that are overcrowded, badly lighted, poorly ventilated, and, in the opinion of any fair-minded person, totally unfit for habitation . . .

"If the City of Philadelphia loses the $10,000,000 earmarked for slum clearance, due to apathy on the part of our Mayor and council, it would reflect a lasting disgrace on the city and the dominating Republican Party . . ."

• • • •

Upon receipt of this communication, and having no further Legion engagements on his calendar, Mayor Moore turned to his secretary and dictated a repetition of his statement that Philadelphia is not a city of slums. He added:

"You seem to have overlooked the relation of the taxpayers in Philadelphia to the agitation for new bureaus, new social worker outfits, new expenses, new jobs, contemplated by the 'better housing' agitators. It does not take long for one group of social workers dispensing public funds, to find 'need' for another group of social workers to dispense more public funds. Nor does it take long for those who find their well-intentioned philanthropic work becoming a burden to them individually, to seek to unload it upon the taxpayers.

"It is because I have witnessed this unloading process through easily attained legislation, both in Harrisburg and Washington, that I have exercised caution in assuming for the taxpayers of Philadelphia the cost of new activities which sooner or later must involve them in new and greater responsibilities."

Upon receipt of this letter, Mr. Fleisher, who in his first communication had offered to conduct Mayor Moore to various slum areas, so that he might know exactly how bad were the conditions he denied, decided to repeat his invitation. It evoked no response from city hall other than a statement from the Mayor's secretary that the Mayor was thoroughly acquainted with all of Philadelphia, and saw no need to go "slumming."

• • • •

IN his final invitation Mr. Fleisher had gone part way to meet the Mayor. He had admitted that there are "wide areas of convenient, comfortable homes, for which the city has long been celebrated. "But, he added, "I feel those living ni its fine homes should be the ones to seek justification for the thousands who are compelled to live in cast-off houses, crowded in alleys and courts, surrounded by vandalized neighborhoods, in houses with windows and doors broken, living in rooms overcrowded beyond the danger point, and unfit in every way for habitation.

"It is these people for whom I am pleading and speaking, i tis these people whom I would expect the Mayor to help, and it is for these people of Philadelphia that the Federal Government offers to step in and provide good housing.

"No one should stand in the way of such progress. I can only repeat my request to you, namely, that you take a trip through certain areas of Philadelphia and get at real facts . . ."

• • • •

THE approach to the Delaware River Bridge is specifically mentioned by Mr. Fleisher as one of several slum areas. He says nothing about the river itself, which is as much of a stench in the nostrils of residents and transients, when warm weather advertises the economical primitiveness of Philadelphia's sewage disposal, as even the worst of the downtown slum areas.

At present writing, both the Mayor's mind and the subject itself seem to be closed. It remains to be seen whether those who advise the Mayor, if there are any such, will have enough influence with him to lift him a little from the penny-pinching contentment that pervades his being as he prepares to reminisce by his own fireside over the emoluments and discomforts of a former active political career. In the meantime what everyone except the Mayor chooses to call slums remain.

Cecil Wood Is Named Jury Commissioner

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., June 27.—Cecil M. Wood, Hedgesville orchardist and banker, and a Republican, has been named by Judge D. H. Rodgers as a jury commissioner, succeeding John W. Smith, Republican, whose term has expired. He will serve with W. A. Roush, Democrat, and Circuit Clerk William C. Morton, member ex officio. The commissioners will meet in August and prepare a list of names from which grand and petit jurors will be selected.

Coal Mine to Reopen In West Virginia Soon

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Phillippi, W. Va., June 27.—The Meridan coal mine, one of the largest in the Philippi region, will be reopened soon. Headed by Charles W. Gallaway, of Baltimore, a party of business men made a recent inspection of the property and announced a modern tipple would be erected. The tipple will also serve as a coaling station for Baltimore & Ohio Railroad engines.

Victor Hugo's Vitality

By Wm. Lyon Phelps.

WHEN Victor Hugo was more than 80 years of age, he had all his 32 teeth in perfect condition, and his bodily powers in all other ways seemed to be those of a man of 30.

When he ate an orange, he ate it the way a boy eats an apple; he chewed up skin and all, swallowing it with relish. When he ate a lobster, he ate and swallowed shell and all, as well as the meat; and as he crunched the hard shell with his strong teeth, he remarked that it was very good for the digestion.

Over 80, he traveled around Paris winter and summer, on the tops of the omnibuses, where people could see him. He relished his reputation and courted publicity.

• • • •

He was destitute of a sense of humor; this absence of humor deprived him of the power of self-criticism, so that he apparently did not know when he was sublime and when he was ridiculous. But if he had possessed a sense of humor, it is probable that he could not have written such magnificent poetry and prose; he let himself go, and humor is often a check on creative power. The man who is afraid of making a fool of himself often makes nothing.

Victor Hugo's conceit was as sublime as his genius; in fact, it was so colossal that one can not be either angry or disgusted. One can only stand still and behold the wonderful works of God. When he was old, his rooms were crowded every night with admirers; and if he seemed about to open his mouth, some one would say "Hush! the Master speaks!" He liked this.

One evening, an admirer said: "There ought to be an avenue named after him." Then another said: "An avenue, after this great man? The name of Paris should be changed, and the city called Victor Hugo!" Then a third: "A city? After such a genius? The name of France should be changed, and the whole country called Victor Hugo."

The poet had listened in profound silence. But now he opened his lips, and amid the awe-struck hush of the assembly, he said with quiet emphasis, "that will come in time."

• • • •

Dante Gabriel Rossetti made two splendin translations of two of Victor Hugo's splendid songs in "The Burgraves." They illustrate the tremendous vitality of his genius, and his transporting power. I quote from memory.

Through the long winter the rough wind tears;
With their white garments the hills look wan.
Love on: who cares?
Who cares? Love on!

My mother is dead; God's patience wears;
It seems my chaplain will not have done.
Love on: who cares?
Who cares? Love on!

The devil, hobbling up the stairs,
Comes for me with his ugly throng.
Love on: who cares?
Who cares? Love on!
In the time of the civil broils
Our swords are stubborn things.
A fig for all the cities!
A fig for all the kings!

The Burgrave prospereth:
Men fear him more and more.
Barons, a fig for His Holiness!
A fig for the Emperor!

Right well we hold our own
With the brand and the iron rod,
A fig for Satan, Burgraves!
Burgraves, a fig for God!

Auto Accident Victim Files Suit for $10,000

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charles Town, W. Va., June 27.—Suit for $10,000 has been instituted in circuit court here by J. Lindsay Fairfax, Shenandoah Junction railroad employe, against William Larner and his mother, Mrs. Eygenia S. Larner, of Shepherdstown, for damages based on a collision between vehicles owned by Larner's mother and Fairfax.

The accident occurred on the Martinsburg road several weeks ago. Jack Brazier, of Charles Town, who was riding with Larner, was killed. Fairfax, his wife and his brother-in-law, who were in the other machine, were hurt.

Wheeler Is Forgotten County Of Oregon, Inventory Shows

Area Lacks State Police Office, Farm Station and Liquor Store.

By the United Press.

Salem, Oreg.—Wheeler is the forgotten county of Oregon.

It has no State police office, agricultural experiment station, State institution, liquor store or any of the dozen other items covered in a property control survey to be made by Budget Director D. O. Hood's office.

An inventory of State-owned property in every county has been planned as an economy measure. State departments will be expected to pool some resources and interchange them, thus saving the State from buying too many duplicates of seldom-used articles.

Every State-owned desk, chair, pencil, piece of paper, typewriter, automobile and piece of property down to the smallest paper clip will be counted in the inventory. SERA help may be employed, especially in Marion and Multnomah Counties where the greatest amount of State property is located and at State institutions and schools.

These places of business will be covered by the survey: All governmental offices, country agents' office, home demonstration agents' office, State police quarters, experiment station, forestry storerooms, liquid stores, agricultural department shipping point inspection service office, penal and charitable institutions, secretary of State branch offices, commissions, boards, highway department offices, University of Oregon, Oregon State College and the three normal schools.

But of all of these, forgotten Wheeler County has only highway department property, and it has already been enumerated. The county has two liquor agencies, but they will not be covered.

Lincoln's Site For Duel Goes Under Water

Dam in Mississippi to Erase Island Used Also as War Cemetery.

By the United Press.

St. Louis.—A Mississippi River island which once was chosen as a dueling ground for Abraham Lincoln and later was the cemetery for Confederate victims who died of smallpox while in the military prison at Alton during the Civil War is being removed piecemeal from the Missouri shore of the river to provide a base of operations for the Federal Government's work on a dam across the river at Alton.

About 40,000 cubic feet of earth has already been removed from the piece of ground. It is no longer an island in reality, having been joined to the Missouri mainland by the action of river currents. The earth is being removed from a point about 200 yeards from the dam.

Soldier His Opponent.

When Lincoln was supposed to have gone there for a duel the land was known as McPike's Island. It was chosen as the site of a duel between Lincoln, then a country lawyer, and James Shields, brigadier of the Mexican War. Shields challenged Lincoln after the latter wrote an article which offended him.

Tradition has it that Lincoln, given a choice of weapons, picked cavalry broadswords, a selection which his challenger did not particularly favor. The day of the duel, Lincoln "warmed up" by slicing off a small willow tree with his immense weapon, at which Shields burst out laughing. Before they returned to the Illinois shore their quarrel was made up, without the duel having been fought.

Known as Smallpox Island.

During the Civil War, its use as a cemetery followed an outbreak of smallpox at the prison camp at Alton, where numerous Confederate soldiers were confined. After that episode it was known as Smallpox Island.

The dam now under construction by the Government is one of many being built along the length of the river to control the effects of river currents and aid navigation.

Convict Band Stars Over the Air Lanes

Columbus, Ohio (U.P.).—You'll never hear of the "Rogues of Rhythm" playing at the famous dance spots of the country, but they make regular appearances over Ohio air lanes.

The convict band plays regularly each Sunday afternoon from the Ohio Penitentiary over a Columbus radio station.

The orchestra boasts of all modern arrangements despite the inability of members to contact other famous leaders for an exchange of "business tactics."

The musical organization also takes part in performances presented behind the walls for members of the institution.

No Debts to Worry County in Wyoming

Douglas, Wyo. (U.P.).—No debts and but a few back taxes have the county commissioners of Converse County to worry about. At their last meeting, the commissioners ordered County Treasurer Burgess to pay off the last $14,000 of indebtedness. At a previous meeting, $10,000 in debts was erased from the books. Back taxes owed the State of Wyoming will be taken care of gradually, the commissioners announced.

Montana Indian Tribe To Get Herd of Buffalo

Butte, Mont. (U.P.).—An experiment that may prove of far greater practical value than can now be foreseen—because of its sentiment—is under way on the Crow Indian reservation in southeastern Montana.

It is the establishment of a buffalo range along the Big Horn River, one of two such ranges authorized last April by Indian Commissioner John Collier. The other range is on the Pine Ridge Reservation in South Dakota.

A herd of 77 buffalo was given to the Crow Indians as a basis of the new herd. They are now being crated—singly because they cannot be shipped like domestic cattle—and shipped from Yellowstone Park by truck to their new home on the Big Horn.

New Officers Sought At Davis, Elkins College

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Elkins, W. Va., June 27.—The board of trustees of Davis and Elkins College is expected to meet tomorrow night to take action on the selection of a new president and a new coach made necessary by the election of Dr. James E. Allen to the presidency of Marshall College and appointment of Camden Henderson as athletic director of the same institution at Huntington.

Henderson will leave July 1 for his new post, while Dr. Allen will remain until July 21 to wind up his 25 years' administration here.

Chickens Hold Secret Of Gold Mine Location

St. Hyacinthe, Quebec (U.P.).—J. A. E. Morin, St. Joseph de Yamaska poultryman, is keeping a close watch on the movements of his chickens in the hope that they will lead him to a rich gold strike.

While preparing a fowl for the market, Morin found a gold nugget about the size of a bean in its gullet. He believes that if he follows his flocks long enough he will find out where the chicken picked up the gold.

Danville Bank Ready To Pay $6,000 Dividend

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., June 27.—The American National Bank has declared its usual 2 per cent semiannual dividend on the capital stock. A disbursement of $6,000 will take place Monday. Reports presented to the directors showed an increase in the number of deposits and an increase also in the surplus and undivided profits account.

The Industrial Bank of Danville will pay a dividend of 25 cents per share on the common stock on July 1, this amounting to $5,000.

Four Men Considered For High School Post

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., June 27.—Four men are under consideration of Supt. G. L. H. Johnson for appointment as principal of George Washington High School. They will come here presently for conferences. The names have not been made public. John D. Riddick recently resigned his post here to become principal of Jefferson High School in Roanoke.

Operator of Still Gets Two-Year Term

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Elkins, W. Va., June 27.—After he had confessed in Federal court here, Martin M. Bell, 61, of Lower Cheat, was sentenced by Judge William E. Baker to the penitentiary for two years for operating a moonshine still, and ordered to pay a fine of $1,000.

Denver Leary, jointly indicted with Martin, was given 12 months in the Harrison County Jail at Clarksburg.

Expert Repairing

Venus stepped down from her pedestal at the Corcoran Art Gallery and sighed enviously. There was a wistful look in her eyes as she patted her hair back into place.

"You don't know what breaks these modern women get," she moaned. "Now, in my day, things were different."

We leaned against a glass case and listened to her plaintive tale.

"Why," she continued, "when I wanted vanishing cream or a new lipstick I had to send that flighty daughter-in-law of mine, Psyche, over to Proserpine's house across the River Styx to get it and, would you believe it, I tramped all the way from Olympus to the Parthenon without finding a single decent Beauty Shoppe! And you know how catty those Athenian newspapermen could be. That awful Aristophanes, who had that scurrilous column in the Daily Gazette, actually said that if I got another wrinkle my face would look like a prune skin.

"But these modern women have all their beauty and personality problems solved by Frances Mangum, of The Washington Post, and she knows ever so much more about beauty than I did." She smiled shyly. "But then, I had my moments. There was that dear boy, Praxiteles . . ."

Well, since Beauty is Truth, Venus was right: Miss Washington does get a break. All she has to do to keep her nose from being shiny or her chins from doubling is to follow Frances Mangum's advice in The Post. Frances knows her cosmetics, whether they're to be used to please a sweetheart, hold a husband, or make the blonde next door jealous. She tells you where to get 'em, how to apply 'em, and, when the date is over, how to peel 'em off. In short, Frances' column is the answer to a perplexed maiden's prayer.

And Handsome being what Handsome does, Frances also advises you on ways to develop your personality . . . how to acquire that charm which will make men want to shower you with attentions . . . and other women long to cut your throat. Even Madame de Stael could have profited from our Frances' column.

If you have wrinkles instead of dimples . . . circles instead of curves . . . girl-friends instead of boy-friends . . . let Miss Mangum tell you the reason why. Follow her advice and you'll have that movie-actress figure . . . that peaches-and-cream complexion . . . those come-hither eyes . . . and a lot more fun. Her column is found each Sunday on the Household Pages of

The Washington Post.

Mills Indicts The New Deal In N. Y. Debate

Senator Barkley Replies That Critics Offer Only Negotion.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 27.—A sharp indictment of the New Deal was uttered tonight by Ogden Mills in an open forum discussion, and was answered by Senator Barkley, of Kentucky, with the assertion that Administration critics recognized only the "sacred policy of negation."

Mills, Secretary of the Treasury under the Hoover regime, and Senator Barkley, a dynamic defender of the Democratic Administration, discussed the question of recovery at a Town Hall meeting under the auspices of the League for Political Education.

"I challenge those who complain that we have robbed the people of their liberty to point to a single example not based on public welfare," said Barkley. "I challenge those who weep over the destruction of the States and the demise of the Constitution to indicate where we have stabbed it and where it is buried . . .

"We have not destroyed the Constitution. We are not destroying it. But if the time ever comes when it shall be preserved only by assigning it to a shelf in some museum where it may be seen, but never used, then the people themselves will destroy it and make another in its place."

Other Rulings Cited.

Barkley sai dthe Supreme Court's adverse NRA ruling was met with the assertion the Constitution was being destroyed.

"During the 150 years of our history Congress has enacted more than 25,000 laws," he said. "Altogether 59 of them have been declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court. From 1929 to 1930 19 acts of Congress were declared unconstitutional, but nobody became excited or predicted the downfall of the Republic, or announced that Congress or the Administration then in power were about to plunge the Nation into the abyss.

"But we are told by hose who suffer from a sor of inellecual imperviosity that liberty has departed from our midst and that the Constitution is deader than the dodo, because Thomas Jefferson is supposed to have remarked that 'that government is best which governs least.' He also said once that the Constitution ought to be revised every 30 years in order to keep it up to date."

Mills, first dealing with the efforts of advocates of planned economy to effect recovery which he said had failed, asserted that the so-called economic war-cycle of depression had run its course and the country—if left alone—was ready to go ahead itself.

Sees Political Unrest.

"The trouble is that, whereas economic uncertainties have vanished, political uncertainties cast an ever-lengthening shadow," he asserted.

"What stands between the American people and prosperity today is their Government itself. The wheels of industry would soon be turning at full speed if, instead of trying to re-make us, the Government would be content to make us well; if, instead of attempting to impose a new system, that will not work, it would permit the one we know will, to do so; and if, instead of pursuing all sorts of foreign 'isms,' it would but turn to a tried and proved Americanism.

"We can not have a full recovery as long as the Administration seeks to transform America into a collective state; as long as it destroys savings, discourages thrift, penalizes success, hampers enterprise and smothers the vital energies of a free economy; as long as Government, while dictating to the individual citizen how to conduct his business, shows an amazing incapacity in the management of its own.

"The road to recovery lies straight before us. All that keeps us from it is an Administration that has not the capacity—and perhaps not even the desire—to find it."

U. S. Rates Increased By Wire Companies

The Communications Commission yesterday approved a 100 per cent increase in the rate that telegraph companies may charge the government for certain types of telegraph service

The telegraph committee of the commission ruled that the Government should pay 80 per cent of the commercial rate, instead of 40 per cent as at present, on time wire and serial service.

Regular day message service costs the Government only 40 per cent of the commercial rate. The preferential charge has been in effect for 30 years, due to land grants and other privileges given the telegraph companies in their early development.

Only Six Families Now Desire To Leave Settlement in Alaska

the mountains" first, and the sentiment was concurred in by others.

The six families who plan to leave made arrangements to dispose of their property, and their neighbors found bargains. When the dissenters, however, were informed they must pay their bills at the commissary for food and supplies, they protested they wouldn't have anything left."

Commissary Inquiry.

One change welcomed by the colony was an investigation of the management of the commissary and a reduction in the amount of bills which have been incurred there, to conform to prices at Seattle, with transportation costs added. The commissary manager was asked to leave during the investigation.

The arrival of Eugene Carr, Federal Relief Administration "trouble shooter," expected tomorrow or Saturday, was awaited and more changes were expected.

Meanwhile, the organization of clubs and classes among the women, the establishment of a library, with Mrs. Lloyd Bell, a colonist, as the librarian, the forming of a 4-H Club and the setting up of a Boy Scout troop were aiding in making life more satisfactory to women and children.

Women Attend Classes.

Mrs. John Hanson, of the Alaska College Extension Service, was organizing home demonstration classes, at which the women can study knitting, weaving, sewing, canning and even spinning. Mrs. Frank Ring, a Wisconsin colonist, and Stelle Irwin, daughter of Don Irwin, project manager, are leaders of a 4-H Club.

John Lund, a Minnesota colonist, organized a Boy Scout troop, with boys enthusiastically joining.

The Lutheran Ladies Aid meets twice a month in the temporary community hall. The hall is also used for many other purposes. On Sundays, the Catholics hold a mass early in the morning, a community church and Sunday school is held in the forenoon and the Lutheran Church holds services in the afternoon. The library is in the building and all assemblies are held there, as well as dances on Saturday nights.

Most of the colonists' tents have "Alaska refrigerators" under them, which are holes in the ground a foot deep, with a trapdoor over them, in which food is kept.

Bennet Parries Treaty Quiz.

Ottawa, June 27 (AP).—Premier R. B. Bennett told the House of Commons today he could report no progress in the signing of a trade treaty with Washington. "Negotiations are being continued and that is as far as I can go," he told Liberal Leader MacKenzie King.

Japan's Thrust On South China Reported Near

Nippon's Military Aids Fly on 'Significant' Visit Into Kwangsi.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Hongkong (Friday), June 28.—The Japanese, masters in the north China area below the Great Wall, were reported today preparing penetration into the South China district as well.

The move was hinted in the visit to Nanning, an important city in Kwangsi Province, in south-central China, of two Japanese military officials.

Col. Seiichi Kita, chief of the Chinese section of the Japanese general staff, accompanied by Col. Usuda, Japanese resident military officer in Canton, southern provincial capital, flew from Canton to Nanning on a significant visit.

Tokyo Offers "Aid."

They were accompanied by a member of the Kwangsi provincial government.

Tokyo was reported willing to offer technical and "other aid" in the development of Kwangsi, one of the most progressive south China provinces, thus spreading the Japanese spheres of influence far south of the Yangtze River.

This significant gesture coincided with final peaceful settlement of the Chahar Province "incident" in the northwestern frontier, bordering on Inner Mongolia.

The Japanese and Chinese authorities, meeting in Peiping, announced full settlement of the Chahar issue, with the Chinese apologizing for the Changpei incident which caused the threat of Japanese pentration into that province, west of Manchukuo. Four Japanese intelligence officers were held there for several hours when discovered by the Chahar authorities to be traveling without proper papers.

The Japanese demanded an apology and cessation of these alleged anti-Japanese activities in Chahar. The Chinese agreed to stave off further trouble in that area, and likewise complied with a Japanese demand for dismissal of the responsible officials.

Deny Clash Rumor.

Chin Teh-Chun, civil affairs commissioner in Chahar, was understood to have delivered to Maj. Gen. Kenji Doihara, chief Japanese intelligence officer in Manchukuo and head of their delegation on the Chahar negotiations, a letter embodying the terms of the settlement.

Rumors of renewed fighting around Tsushihkou, on the Chahar-Jehol border, were denied in Japanese advices from Hsinking, Manchukuo capital. The Japanese military said they had no word of any clash since the alleged Chinese attack on a Manchukuo-Japanese joint border patrol of 80 men there last Monday.

They were inclined to consider the incident a local matter attendant on the transfer of "anti-Japanese" troops of Gen. Sung Che-Yuan, ousted Chahar governor, evacuating the province at Tokyo's demand.

However, the Japanese army authorities are insisting on complete withdrawal of Chinese troops from the Chahar-Jehol frontier area in anticipation of the establishment of a demilitarized buffer zone there. Advices said they threatened otherwise to clear the desired strip of territory of Chinese troops by force.

Batting for Morgan Baker.

TENTATIVE figures obtained by the Agriculture housing and rent committee show that a five-room brick bungalow built in a community planning project would cost $1,300 less than the same house constructed by a speculative builder.

A saving of at least 20 per cent can be effected through collective action, it was revealed at a meeting of the committee, which is working on a plan of home ownership for Government employes to be set up though a community planning project.

Frank L. Lombard, BAE, general chairman of the committee, has announced a meeting for Saturday at 1:30 p. m. in room 2050, Agriculture Building, to push plans for setting up a community planning corporation.

Numerous possible locations for the home-building project are available, Lombard reported.

Payments should be approximately $50 a month on a five-room house to include all charges, amortization, taxes, insurance, heat, light, water, etc. The loan should be amortized in 20 years, according to the proposed plans.

The following plans of financing have been discussed by the committee:

1. One private financial concern is partially committed to loan up to a million dollars.
2. A number of life insurance loan authorities have been found to be friendly to the project.
3. Possibly a good share of the money could be secured from individuals within the department seeking safe investments.
4. The committee also has contacted several Government credit agencies regarding possibilities of securing long-term loans at low rates of interest.

Fellow employes of Mrs. Gertrude Hale, Loans and Currency Division, Treasury, gave a picnic and farewell party in her honor yesterday afternoon at Hains Point. Mrs. Hale (C) is retiring after 33 years in the Government service.

A NEW and direct attack was aimed at an amendment to the Farmers' Home Corporation bill, which provides that all employes earning $4,000 or over annually, regardless of civil service status, must be confirmed by the Senate, according to Luther C. Steward, president, N. F. F. E.

"While leading members of the Senate, as well as the Administration generally, continue their pious lip service in behalf of the merit system, step after step is taken to insure its breakdown," President Steward asserted. "It is to be hoped that the House of Representatives, having in mind the public welfare, will refuse to agree to this latest spoils action on the part of the Upper House.

"This amendment, which specifically provides for confirmation by the Senate of FHC employes whose annual salaries are $4,000 or more, is an open and brutally frank concession to the spoilsmen who, after more than two years of job-debauchery, are still unsatisfied.

"In raising his voice against the Senate action, Senator O'Mahoney did not overstate the case when he declared that 'it will wreck the entire civil service system.' However, Senator O'Mahoney's warning was unheeded, and the amendment went through.

"The time has come for concerted action to save the merit system from complete spoliation.

"This issue is the most pressing single problem before the American people today.

"Constructive action is demanded and that imperatively and immediately."

John Laurence, HOLC, barytone, will give a recital at 8 p. m. today in Homer L. Kitts' studio. Mr. Laurence (F) is a pupil of Elena Paige.

Medical Plan Discussed.

The preventive medical plan being considered by the medical and health committee of the Agriculture Department was the principal topic of discussion at a meeting of the Local No. 2, N. F. F. E. Present plans indicate that employes will be examined annually at a diagnostic center, to be located in some existing hospital or created by the group. This service will probably cost about $5 a year, it was estimated.

Other topics discussed were rent and housing, resolutions to the national convention, the successful membership drive, and the transportation problem in the District. A. C. Edwards is president of the union.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF F, P or C follows your name in this column, call in person on the Federal Diary editor between 4:30 and 6 p. m. today. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's Theaters: (F), Loew's Fox (stage, Edward Arnold in person and Carl Freed with his Harmonica Harlequins, and other acts; screen, also Edward Arnold in "The Glass Key," with George Raft and Claire Dodd); (P), Loew's Palace (second week of Joan Crawford and Robert Montgomery in "No More Ladies"); (C), Loew's Columbia (Will Rogers in "Doubting Thomas").

Commemorating the retirement of six employes from the Redeemed Currency Unit, Treasury, Margaret Harmon Andrews (P), has composed the following poem:

Day by day, in years to come,
Each memory growing dearer,
Our minds, in loving retrospect
Will bring these friendships nearer.
For time and distance can't divide
When hearts have grown together.
So here's good luck to every one—
Fair landings, pleasant weather.

FHA Postettes.

Miss Marian Boss, Industries Division, FHA, was married yesterday afternoon to Graham Walker, of Washington, at Chevy Chase Episcopal Church.

Miss Lucille Lennox, secretary, FHA, left yesterday to attend the North Carolina State convention of Young Democrats, at Raleigh.

Quincy Owens, Central Files Division, FHA, is back at work after having been out some time due to a broken ankle.

Is Made Colonel.

John W. Edwards, assistant head, Appeals Division, Internal Revenue, yesterday was presented with the commission of colonel on the staff of the Governor of Kentucky. The presentation speech was made by Arthur H. Kent, special assistant, General Council, Internal Revenue. The entire Appeals Division was present at the ceremony.

Post Staff Photo.

These employes, retiring yesterday from the Government service, were guests of honor at a luncheon given by associates in the Redeemed Currency Unit, Treasury, at 119 D street northeast. They are, left to right—Miss Margaret Andrews, Mrs. Grace Kieny, Mrs. Edith Hill, H. H. Lee, assistant chief, Redeemed Currency Unit, who presented each of the ladies with a pocket book; Miss Daisy Bashford and Mrs. Zera Kuhlman. Miss Virginia Grimes, who was out of town yesterday, also has retired.

Toy-Gun Thief Arraigned, Bail Is Set at $5,000

Holdup Charge Lodged in Alleged Attempt to Rob Newspaper Employe.

A toy gun and his alleged attempt to rob Charles Tappy, Washington Post advertising salesman, yesterday caused Barkley C. Pinkind, alias George Hataway, of Baltimore, to be held in $5,000 bond for grand jury action. He was arraigned in Police Court before Judge John P. McMahon.

When Tappy stopped his auto at a red traffic light at Seventh and E streets northwest last Monday, Pinkind jumped into the front seat, drew a gun and told him to "keep still and drive around the corner," police testified.

But Tappy grabbed the weapon, held it on the seat beside him and shouted for help. Sergt. Joseph Harrington, of the Traffic Bureau, happened by with the police towing truck. He leaped to action, and so did Bernard O'Donnell, a former professional football player.

The robbery suspect attempted to escape. He was tackled by O'Donnell and arrested by Harrington. The gun was found to be a fake. Pinkind told police:

"I didn't know holding up a man was so serious in Washington."

Clean Out Kidney Poisons
Wash Out Your 15 Miles of Kidney Tubes
If kidneys don't pass 3 pints a day and get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter, the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters may become clogged with poisonous waste and the danger of acid poisoning is greatly increased. Bladder passages are difficult, which often smart and burn like scalding water and cause discomfort.
This acid condition, brought about by poor kidney functions is a danger signal and may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains and dizziness.
Most people watch their bowels which contain only 27 feet of intestines but neglect the kidneys which contain 15 miles of tiny tubes and filters. If these tubes or filters become clogged with poisons, it may knock you out and lay you up for many months. Don't run any risk. Make sure your kidneys empty 3 pints a day.
Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS, an old prescription, which has been used successfully by millions of kidney sufferers for over 40 years. © 1934, Foster-Milburn Co.

What Summer Drinks owe to "CONTROLLED CONDENSATION"

Hiram Walker Reveals the First Process in 300 Years Assuring Uniform Gin Flavor!

The best ingredients alone are no assurance of the best results in distilling gin. Both the nature and the number of ingredients make the production of a uniform gin a delicate and difficult operation.

Why Gin Flavors Go "Haywire"

Even the finest formula of juniper berries, coriander seed, sweet orange peel, and other elements will not produce gin of smooth, even flavor if—as often happens—one ingredient gets out of control and disturbs the even balance of related flavors.

Ordinary distilling merely regulates the amounts of the gin ingredients ...The Hiram Walker process of "Controlled Condensation" scientifically regulates and controls their flavors!

How the "C. C." Process Controls Gin Flavor

Under this amazing "C. C." Process the various flavoring ingredients are distilled into the grain spirits at different proofs, under absolutely accurate control. Nothing is left to chance. No flavor can run "haywire" and come through too strong. Every single drop is uniform in smoothness and flavor.

For over 300 years distillers in America and Europe have been seeking the very process which the Hiram Walker Research Staff has perfected and used ever since the opening of Hiram Walker's Peoria distillery, a year ago.

You Pay No More for Flavor Control

Hiram Walker's London Dry Gin is the gin that is made from grain spirits only, with the finest flavoring ingredients. The "C. C." Process keeps the gin uniform in smoothness and flavor, no matter what you mix it with.

Try a bottle today and see what a difference the "C. C." Process makes. And remember—you pay no premium for this remarkable difference.

Big radio shows are winking out rapidly these summer evenings. Several are scheduled to go after this week and more are leaving the air after finales next week. Tonight's notable instance is the half-hour starring Aunty Bea Lille. However, there is a near promise that the titled English actress will be back in the fall.

Miss Lille's program, WMAL, 8 tonight, finds Aunty Bea prophesying the future careers of juvenile actors now on "kiddie programs." Lee Perrin's band promises "Every Single Little Tingle of My Heart" and "I'll Never Say No Again" from the current crop and "Dardanella," from the best sellers of 20 years ago.

* * * *

Tommy Loughran, former world's light heavyweight champion, will contend that interest in boxing is being revived these days in the College Prom, WMAL, 7:30 p.m. Ruth Etting and Red Nichols' Orchestra for the music . . . Richard Himber introduces an innovation—a symphonic string quartet in the Champions broadcast, 9 p.m., WJSV. Particular attention will be given Gershwin's "The Man I Love." . . . Irene Rich's radio vehicle tonight is entitled "Three Good Friends," WMAL, 7 . . . For those who still find the organ pretty nice radio fare, Eddie Dunstedter, WJSV, 2:30 p.m., presenting among others, "Chloe," "Solitude" and "Ripples." . . . Hollywood Hotel offers Edmund Lowe and Karen Morley in a preview of "Thunder in the Night," a new flicker. Dick Powell, as usual, with Frances Langford, WJSV, at 8.

For those with jaded radio appetites: A discussion of "The Problem of Withdrawing Poor Farm Lands from Cultivation in the Southern Appalachian Mountains" will be heard in the Farm and Home Hour at noon.

We hadn't heard the remarkable spot announcement for several days and had just about given up in despair when lo! it popped out of the speaker at the breakfast hour. It really is a wondrous piece of advertising. The general idea, it would seem, is to induce the innocent listener to buy a piece of heating equipment. On several occasion we have attempted to count the number of time the modet seller's name is given in the brief spot but have become utterly confused before the spot is completed. Some say the advertiser's name is mentioned 21 times and others say only 19. Incidentally, one becomes so fascinated by the repetition that the product and its usefulness are lost.

Rabid baseball fans beseiged Arch McDonald a day or two ago when he changed his worn-out recording of "The Old Pine Tree" to a new one. Arch is superstitious and depends on the recording to pull the home club out of losing the ball game. Evidently his listeners hold to the same superstition.

Library of Congress Opens Music Contest

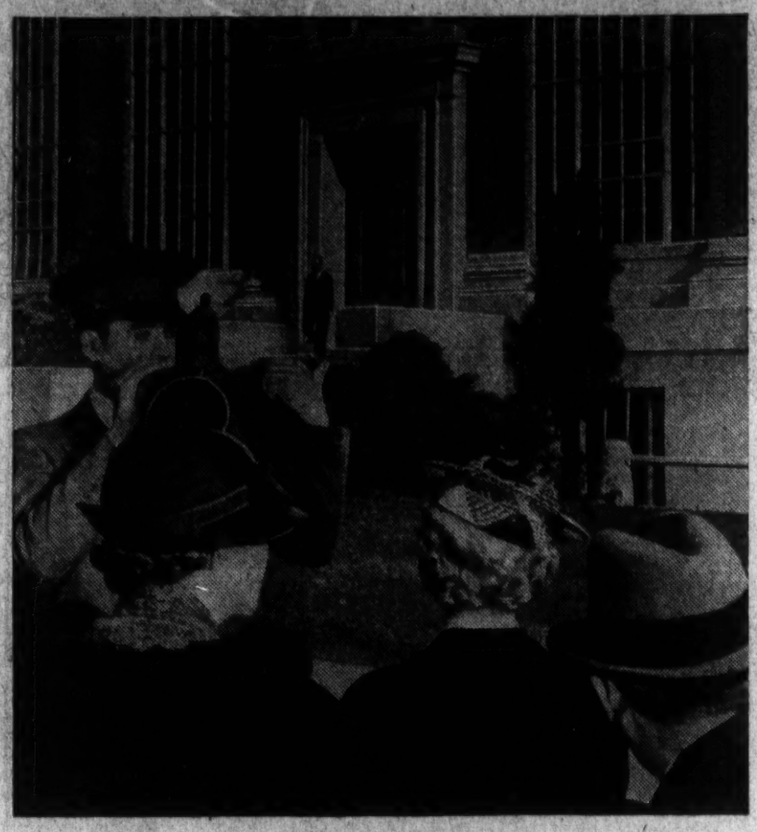
THE GOVERNMENT CAN'T BE LAX!
Their specifications can help you decide which gasoline to buy.



WASHINGTON VISITORS know this building. It's where U. S. technologists check the products that the Government buys against difficult Federal specifications.

One of the severest sets of specifications that the Government sets up is for ambulance and fire-engine gasoline.

AN EMERGENCY DUTY gasoline . . . that's what the Government calls it. It must have greater acceleration . . . be faster-starting . . . produce more power . . . than ordinary gasoline.

You might think that only a premium-price gasoline could meet those needs. But regular Fire-Chief gasoline . . . the gasoline you get from any Texaco pump at no extra cost . . . meets these Government requirements.

REMEMBER THIS . . . the next time you need gasoline. Try a tankful of Texaco Fire-Chief.

You buy as scientifically as the Government, when you buy Fire-Chief for your car.

You're never in doubt. You know you've picked a good gasoline.

TEXACO FIRE-CHIEF

When you buy at this pump you will be getting, at no extra cost, a gasoline that meets the Government's requirements for fire-engines and ambulances

Tuckerman Home Scene Of Gay Fete

Mrs. Cary, Miss Ekenden and Miss Coltam Are Guests.

Laura, Eldest Daughter of Bethesda Couple, Greets Sister-Debs.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Tuxeden, the estate of Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman in Edgemoor, near Bethesda, Md., has long been a favorite gathering place for the younger members of Washington's smart set. For whenever there are three most attractive young ladies in a family who have made their bow to society, and two younger ones who are yet to be presented to Capital society, there are always young people dropping into the house. And the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Tuckerman is well known. Not only do they entertain for themselves in a delightful manner, but they give charming parties for their daughters, and nearly always there are several friends visiting them from out of town. Miss Laura Tuckerman, the eldest of the sisters, who recently returned from a two-month stay in California, has two guests, Miss Mary Claire Cottman, daughter of Mrs. Warrington Cottman, of Baltimore, and Miss Elsie Ekengren, daughter of the late former Minister of Sweden, and Mme. Ekengren, who has recently returned from Europe, where she has spent the past year.

Miss Ekengren went abroad last June, and after visiting with relatives in Sweden went to Zurich in Switzerland, where she spent some time with Mr. and Mrs. Francis LeComte Spalding. Mrs. Spalding was formerly Miss Loranda Prochnik, daughter of the Minister of Austria Mr. Edgar Prochnik, and with her two small sons is planning to visit Washington in the autumn. Mr. Spalding is United States vice consul in Zurich.

Later Miss Ekengren returned to Sweden, where she was joined early this spring by her sister, Miss Christine Ekengren, who is remaining abroad some time longer.

On Wednesday, Miss Tuckerman entertained at a small cocktail party for her guests and for Mr. and Mrs. Reginald S. Cary, of Baltimore, who have recently returned from Rio de Janiero, where Mr. Cary was vice consul.

Mrs. Cary was formerly Miss Margaretta Wright, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Price Wright, of Washington, and immediately following her marriage a year ago, left with her husband for his post in Rio de Janiero. This is Mrs. Cary's first visit to Washington since her marriage, and the cocktail party was a grand reunion, for Miss Tuckerman, Miss Ekengren and Mrs. Cary were sister debutantes several seasons ago, and were inseparable until the one was married and Miss Ekengren departed for Europe.

Flemings Lease Country Home Near Bethesda

Dinner Given for Daughter and Bessie Gill at Chevy Chase Club.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert V. Fleming have leased the home of Col. and Mrs. C. D. Herron on the Fairfax road near Bethesda, Md., for the remainder of the summer, and will close their home on Wyoming avenue Monday. Mr. and Mrs. Fleming, their daughter, Miss Alice Fleming, and their son, Mr. Robert W. Fleming, who has just returned from Lawrenceville School, will go to Rehoboth Beach, Del., Wednesday to be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Lewis Smith for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Fleming gave a dinner last night for Miss Fleming at the Chevy Chase Club in honor of Miss Bessie Gill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore N. Gill, whose marriage to Mr. William Barron Kerkam, jr., will take place tomorrow afternoon at 4:30 o'clock in St. John's Church in Georgetown.

The guests included Miss Emma Louise Tompkins, Miss Martha Freeman, Mr. Kent Legg and members of the bridal party, in which Miss Fleming will be maid of honor. The other guests were Mrs. Herbert Hartman, jr., who will be matron of honor; Miss Mary Louise Marsh, Miss Hope Jackson, Miss Eleanor Beck and Miss Margaret Robertson, the bridesmaids; Mr. John F. Kerkam, who will serve as best man, and the ushers, Mr. T. Nichols Gill 3d, Mr. George Riggs, Mr. John Hamilton, Mr. Enlo Wilkinson, Mr. Malvin Morse and Mr. Richard Shelton.

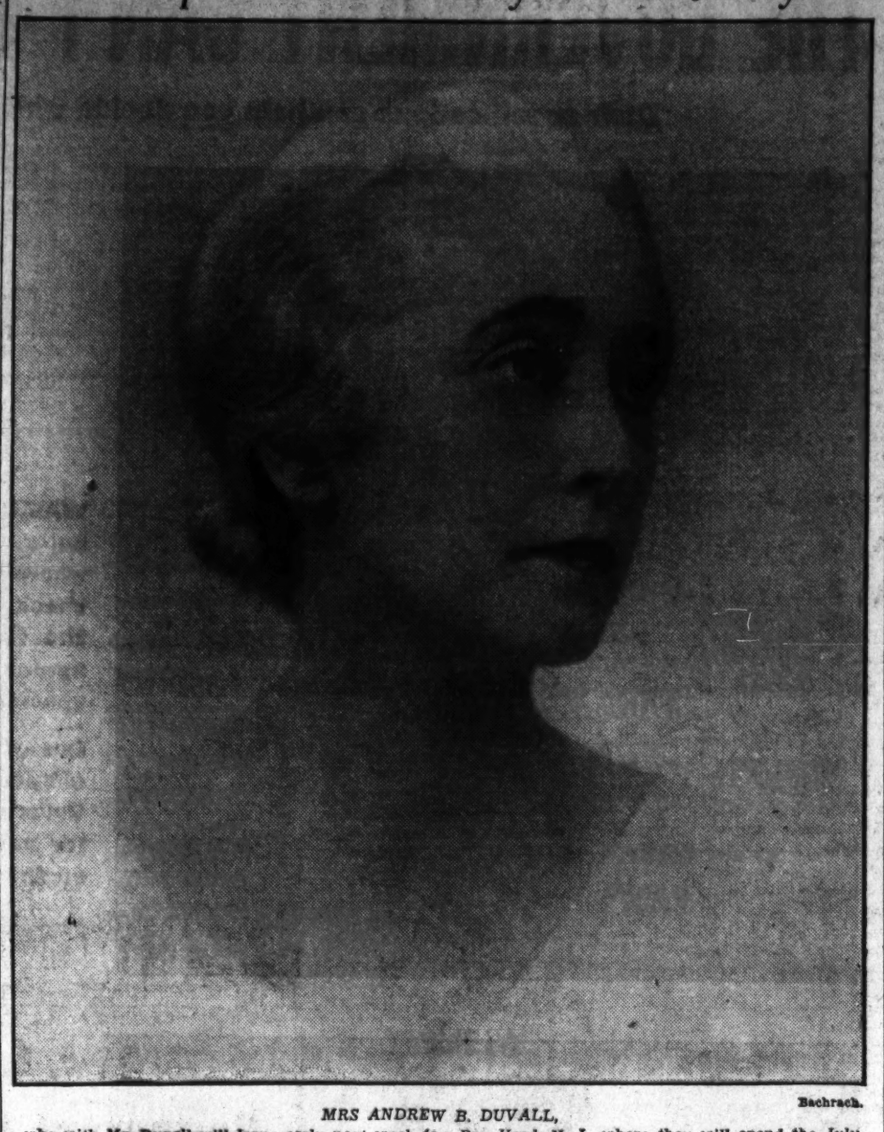
Mr. and Mrs. Fleming also entertained a large party at dinner last night when Mr. and Mrs. Gill and Mr. and Mrs. Kerkam were among the guests.

Dr. and Mrs. Eugster Leave for Summer Home

Dr. and Mrs. Louis W. Eugster have left for their summer home, Rustius Island, Casco Bay, Me., where they will remain until autumn.

They were accompanied by their daughter, Mrs. D. O. Elliott, and granddaughter, Anna, who came from their home in Cincinnati, Ohio. Maj. Elliott will join them in Maine in August.

To Spend Brief Holiday in New Jersey



Bachrach.

MRS ANDREW B. DUVALL, who with Mr. Duvall will leave early next week for Bay Head, N. J., where they will spend the July 4 week-end with Mrs. Duvall's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. William E. Pearson. Mr. and Mrs. Pearson and their children have left to open their summer home at the resort for the season.

NOTES OF SOCIETY

Official and Resident

Senora de Alfaro, wife of the Minister of Ecuador, is among the guests at the Hotel Traymore in Atlantic City, N. J.

D.A.R. Chapter Sponsors Pohick Services Sunday

Dr. Brown, First Surgeon General of Continental Army, to Be Honored.

Special patriotic services will be held at Pohick Church in Virginia, Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock, in memory of Dr. William Brown, the first surgeon general of the Continental Army. The service is being sponsored by the Susan Riviere Hetzel Chapter, D. A. R., which placed a bronze marker on his grave in the Pohick Church graveyard 80 years ago.

A member of this chapter, Mrs. Bessie W. Gahn, is a great-great-great-granddaughter of Dr. Brown. The program will consist of an address by Mr. Wade H. Ellis on "Our Country," greetings by Mrs. George Madden Grimes, State regent of the District of Columbia D. A. R., and Mrs. C. A. S. Sinclair, national president of the C. A. R., a recitation of the C. A. R. Creed by Miss Nancy Washington, a paper on the life of Dr. Brown by Mrs. Bessie W. Gahn, and patriotic songs by Miss Lillian Chenoweth, Mrs. Charles C. Haig and Miss Margaret Moncure.

After the services in the church, flowers will be placed on Dr. Brown's grave by Mr. Lawrence Brown, great-great-great-grandson of Dr. Brown. The program will be in charge of the Rev. C. A. Langston, rector of Pohick Church, and Miss Luella Chase, regent of the chapter. The hour for this service has been changed from 5 to 4 o'clock to accommodate many who wish to attend.

Pohick Church is 20 miles from Washington on the Richmond highway. George Washington and George Mason were vestrymen in this church for many years.

Josephine Parks Is Bride Of Edward Eugene Pugh

Daughter of House Member From Arkansas Marries at Home on Decatur Street, the Rev. George F. Dudley Officiating.

Miss Josephine Parks, daughter of Representative Tilman Bacon Parks, of Arkansas, became the bride of Mr. Edward Eugene Pugh, son of the late Dr. and Mrs. George A. Pugh, of Kenosha, Wis., yesterday at noon in the home of the bride's father, on Decatur street, before an improvised altar in the drawing room where the Rev. George Fiske Dudley, pastor of St. Stephen's Church, officiated in the presence of the families and a few friends. The drawing room was effectively decorated with white gladioli, roses and white spring flowers, intermingled with Australian ferns.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of platinum gray lace, made on princess lines with a decided flare below the knees. The wide collar and cuffs were fashioned on narrow frills of lace of the same shade and opal buttons from the collar to the waist line in front. With this she wore a picture hat of powder blue organdy and a corsage of orchids.

Mrs. Allen Matron of Honor.

The matron of honor was Mrs. Robert J. Allen, daughter of former Representative Ralph Gilbert, of Shelbyville, Ky., who wore a gown of lilac mousseline de soie, made on long fitted lines with bell sleeves. Her hat was of lilac tulle to match her frock and had a halo brim of stiffened tulle, and her bouquet was of gardenias.

Mr. Frank Allen, of Akron, Ohio, was the best man for Mr. Pugh.

A reception followed the ceremony when the young couple were assisted in receiving by Mrs. Parks, stepmother of the bride, who wore a gown of flowered chiffon in which green and yellow predominated.

Bride Attended School Here.

Later Mr. Pugh and his bride left for a wedding trip to Wisconsin. They plan to make their home in Chicago, where they will go in the autumn when Mr. Pugh will enter the Medical School at Northwestern University. The bride wore for traveling a navy blue sheer crepe and tissue taffeta ensemble, with a white hat and white accessories.

The bride attended Fairfax Hall, Waynesboro, Va., and Holton Arms School here. Mr. Pugh was graduated from St. John's School in Wisconsin, and from Kenyon College in Gambier, Ohio.

Among the out-of-town guests were Miss Betsy Gilbert and Miss Jane Gilbert, of Shelbyville, Ky., sisters of the matron of honor, and Mr. Frank Mallett, of Sharon, Pa.

Tea Tendered For Miss Dial, Future Bride

Mrs. George Howe Gives Fete; Other Parties to Honor Couple.

In compliment to Miss Dorothy Dial, who is being extensively entertained prior to her marriage next Tuesday to Mr. Harold Ogden Smith, jr., Mrs. George Howe gave an informal tea yesterday afternoon at her home on Connecticut avenue. Mr. Smith Bowman, jr., who will be one of the ushers, will entertain this evening for members of the bridal party and a few friends at a swimming party at Sunset Hills, the home of his parents. A buffet supper will follow the swimming party.

Saturday evening a dinner party at the Chevy Chase Club will be given for the popular young couple by the brother-in-law and sister of the bride, Dr. and Mrs. Matthew White Perry. Miss Phoebe Soaper, a niece of former Senator and Mrs. A. O. Stanley, of Kentucky, will entertain at a cocktail party at the home of her uncle and aunt in Georgetown preceding the dinner party at the Congressional Country Club to be given by Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Lawton.

Former Senator and Mrs. Nathaniel B. Dial, parents of the bride-elect, will entertain at a buffet supper Monday evening, following the rehearsal for the wedding.

Arthur Lyon Weds Miss Lansburgh

Marriage Is Solemnized at Suburban Club in Baltimore.

The wedding of Miss Elizabeth Lansburgh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Lansburgh, of Baltimore, and Mr. Arthur Tingle Lyon, son of Mr. Rutherford P. Lyon, of Washington, was solemnized at the Suburban Club in Baltimore late yesterday afternoon.

The Rev. William Rosenan, D. D., performed the ceremony in the garden before an altar banked with white lilies and snapdragons and inclosed in a bower of palms and pink rambler roses. The bride, lovely in a gown of white satin, was given in marriage by her father. She carried a bouquet of white orchids and lilies of the valley.

Attending matrons for the bride were Mrs. Lee Greif and Mrs. George Hecht, who were attired in hydrangea blue net and carried bouquets of talisman roses and sprays of lavender and blue delphinium. Miss Barbara Lear, maid of honor, wore a frock of violet net over satin and carried a bouquet of talisman roses and lavender and blue delphinium. Other attendants were Miss Lisette Sonneborn, Miss Alice Heineman, of Baltimore; Miss Elaine Kahn and Miss Gertrude Schoenberg, of Chicago, and Mrs. Frank Luchs and Mrs. Gerald G. Lyon, of Washington. They were frocked alike in models of pink net with sashes of hyacinth blue and carried shower bouquets of roses and delphinium.

Mrs. Lansburgh, the mother of the bride, was gowned in a model of peach marquisette with which she wore a corsage of deep purple orchids.

Mr. Gerald J. Lyon acted as best man for his brother. Ushers included Mr. James Anathen, Mr. Bernard Nordlinger, Mr. Alfred Katz, Mr. Carlton Kaufman, Mr. Richard Lyon, Mr. Jacob Epstein Katz, Mr. Sidney Lansburgh, jr., Mr. Robert Lansburgh and Mr. Richard Lansburgh.

After the ceremony a dinner and reception were given in honor of the young couple at the Suburban Club.

Mr. and Mrs. Lyon will sail tomorrow on the Conte di Savoia for a sojourn in Italy, France and England, and, upon their return, will be at home at the Shoreham Hotel. Before the marriage Miss Helen Heineman and Miss Barbara Lear entertained at a dinner for the young couple.

3. Curved heel to keep you from "running over."

Harriet Adds New Autograph To Her Book

Bill O'Connell, Jr., Latest to Make Select List at Mayflower.

By Chanticleer.

Harriet has added a new name to her autograph book. This latest is Bill O'Connell, jr., son of the Chicago banker. Harriet is proud of that autograph book and not every Tom, Dick and Aloysius gets a peak at it. Reliable information advises that the celebrities represented include James Farley, Will Rogers, Elliott Roosevelt, and so on. Oh, yes, Harriet is the cigarette girl at the Mayflower's lounge.

Al Norton has written himself a new skit. We haven't heard it yet, but we know the title: "The Horse With the Lavender Eyes." That's enough. The Powhatan roof has a mystery. A good, grade AAA-1 mystery. For some time now a young couple has graced Pete Macias' dance floor with some of the neatest dancing seen in these poor parts in many a midnight. Ramon's house is divided, some believing they are being visited by a professional dance team, others contending the same two young people were guests several times last summer. Ramon says they provide an impromptu floor show every time they drop in.

Hall's restaurant, down at Seventh and K streets southwest, is reviving the jolly game of eating hardshell crabs again this summer. It is appropriate that hard crabs are a delicacy at Hall's in the summer when the diner can perform the ceremonies in the outdoor garden. Each order brings with it a service of broom handles and boards. A hard crab, even when ready for palate tickling, resists to the bitter end. Guess that's why he's a hard shell and not a tender, soft fellow.

Speaking of cigaret girls, the Club Habana boasts the best-dressed gal in the nicotine vending business. Unlike Harriet she goes in for clothes. It is reported, more or less reliably, that ladies among the Habana's customers have been drawn back a night or two later just to see what Babs would have on. It seems worthy of mention in a world filled with men who usually go back to a favorite spot to see what the girls do not have on.

Many an admirer of the Cuban rhumba is melancholy this week as the Reyes prepare to fold up their tents after a most successful four weeks on the Shoreham Terrace. Preparations are under way for the Shoreham's annual Fourth of July fireworks display next week. Not every after-dark impresario can shoot Roman candles off his dance floor!

Beauty Reduces for Contest

What do you suppose Judy Ellington is doing so deep in the countryside, so far from the Lotus and Bill Strickland's baton? Very simple. Miss Ellington, who has been rudely termed "plump" on occasions, has decided to square up for those cruel charges once and for all. She's "down to 122" now, she says, and is going to enter a bathing girl contest. Got a brand-new yellow stream-lined bathing suit and everything!

Two 'Paroled' Dogs Must Die, Thanks to Masters' Appeal

Second Trial on Charge of Killing Hens Brings Death Verdict.

"Buster" and "Kipp," East Falls Church's two condemned dogs, who until yesterday were paroled in custody of their masters, Maj. William Covington and S. P. Grubb, must die for chicken killing.

The canines were arrested December 29 for allegedly slaying the chickens of Herbert Payne, of Falls Church. When Payne identified the dogs from an unique line-up in which nine other beasts appeared, the case attracted wide attention.

Sitting in Civil Court in Arlington County, Judge C. M. Hedrick tried the offenders and sentenced them to die, while, unconcernedly, they wagged their tails. The sentences were commuted later, however, and Buster and Kipp were paroled.

Their masters went so far as to announce an appeal would be taken to clear their pets' names, and action was taken on the advice of their attorney, S. P. Kramer, of Washington.

Two juries and Judge Walter T. McCarthy heard the cases in Circuit Court yesterday.

Both juries were ordered polled by the judge, and both voted overwhelmingly in favor of execution of the dogs.

No date has been set for the exacting of the death penalty. Meanwhile Buster and Kipp ate dinner with apparent relish last night.

Capital Scouts Train as Guides For Jamboree

Corps of 1,000 to Conduct Visiting Boys About City in August.

Boy Scouts throughout Washington are living up to their "Be Prepared" motto these days, and yesterday plans were moving ahead rapidly for accommodating the 30,000 youths in khaki who will come to the District August 21 to 30 for the national jamboree.

Already camps at Abingdon, on the Mount Vernon boulevard, and on Columbia Island are being set up. Washington's quota of actual campers in the jamboree is but 159, but participation among Scouts here is not limited to that number. A guide corps of 1,000 Scouts is being trained to accompany the visitors on excursions through the Capital.

This guide training is being conducted in the individual troops, in the camps and in other places under direction of Dr. William T. Mcclosky, chairman of the training committee, assisted by Eagle Scouts, with Bob Roberts as the chief liaison officer.

A guide's manual, entitled "Jamboree Time in Washington," is being distributed to troops. This manual, together with a transportation map and a pictorial map of the city will be the official kit of a guide. Any well-uniformed Scout in Washington or vicinity who can pass a brief quiz covering matter in the manual, is eligible for the guide corps.

One or more Scouts or Scouters from the following troops are registered for the Jamboree: Troops 3, 5, 8, 14, 23, 25, 33, 40, 51, 124, 150, 221, 235, 250, 525, 625 and 636. Troop 2 of Frederick, Md., will send two Scouts and two Lone Scouts are registered. The Redskin Division has also paid for the reservation of an unnamed Scout. There is no limit as to the number who may enroll from each troop. Several troops have three or more members going.

Camp Roosevelt, the District council's camp on Chesapeake Bay, opened June 24 with the largest first-week attendance in many years. Scout Fred Kochli, of Troop 52, won a week's outing at the camp for his promotion of the moonlight river trip May 16. Hiking Director Victor Kebler has been selected to conduct the jamboree guide training at the camp. Physical examinations for camp will be held at headquarters on the evening of July 5 and each Thursday evening thereafter.

Reports from Camp Wilson at Burnt Mills, Md., which opened on June 15, indicate that the camp again will prove attractive to Scouts. A great attraction at this camp is the old swimming hole made famous in President Theodore Roosevelt's Administration when the President frequently used this pool with his sons. J. Wesley Lotis, district commissioner of the Takoma division, is again camp director, with John Chandler, Bruce Jenkins, Guy Appel and Jimmy Arentson as his junior staff.

Courts of honor from now until further notice will be held the second Saturday of each month at Camp Wilson and the fourth Saturday at Peck Chapel, Twenty-eighth street and Pennsylvania avenue.

Scouts will participate in the Washington Community Fourth of July celebration this year as color bearers and torch bearers.

A standard Red Cross first aid course is being given each Tuesday evening at Troop 59's headquarters, the Francis Asbury M. E. Church, Sixteenth and Lamont streets northwest.

Troop 45 gave a play last week entitled, "Where There's a Will," proceeds going to help send a scout to the Jamboree.

The Redskin Division's scoutmasters' monthly meeting will be held Monday night at Troop 58's headquarters, Fifteenth street and Kentucky avenue southeast. The division has a new camp site at Pohick, Va.

Fourteen diplomas were received this year by members of Troop 8.

2 Sentenced to Die In Petty Holdup

Pair Doomed When Court Denies New Trial.

John Homer Cummings and Willett Marcus, both colored, must pay with their lives for the slaying of Joseph Wushnak, 41, who was fatally shot during a holdup at Tenth and B streets northwest, January 4.

Justice Jesse C. Adkins, before whom they were tried several weeks ago, yesterday denied motions for a new trial and ordered that the two be electrocuted at the District Jail December 3. Both said they would appeal.

Cummings was charged with firing the shot that killed Wushnak, and Marcus, named as an accessory, in the holdup, which netted only a small amount of money, was made equally guilty of the slaying because of a District law that provides for the death penalty when it occurs in the course of a felony.

Summer Term Now in Session At Catholic U.

Enrollment Is Expected to Exceed Attendance of 1,300 Last Year.

As registration for the twenty-fifth summer session of the Catholic University opened yesterday, Dr. Roy J. Deferrari, director, predicted enrollment will exceed last year's 1,300.

Classroom, laboratory and office space will be taxed to accommodate the unprecedented number of students, Dr. Deferrari said.

Several new courses have been added to the curriculum of previous summer terms. The school of social work has enlarged its staff and extended its work to meet rapidly changing social conditions. In the fields of nursing education, English, education and psychology, several new classes and instructors have been added.

An additional course, for members of the staffs of Catholic periodicals, has been added to the journalism curriculum, and a printed newspaper called the Summer Session News is to be edited by the students. Under the direction of the Rev. Ignatius Smith, O. P., the preachers' institute will be conducted at capacity enrollment.

Registration will continue until 5 p. m. Saturday in the main lobby of McMahon Hall. Classes will open Monday.

Man Is Convicted In Girl's Attack

Harding Found Guilty at His Second Trial.

Charged with criminally attacking a child, Francis H. Harding was convicted by a jury in the District Supreme Court yesterday. The maximum sentence possible is 30 years.

Harding was brought up for trial several weeks ago, but the case ended abruptly when jurors admitted having read newspaper articles telling how the father of the girl had been arrested in the District Supreme Court when an alert deputy marshal discovered a pistol in his hip pocket.

Justice Jesse C. Adkins ordered the withdrawal of a juror and a consequent mistrial, and at the suggestion of the Government revoked Harding's bond and ordered him kept in jail for his own safety. The second trial yesterday was held before Justice James M. Proctor with Irvin Goldstein, assistant United States attorney, prosecuting.

5 Conventions Listed for D. C. By Trade Board

Federal Bar Association Among Groups Meeting Here in 1936.

Washington has been chosen as the scene of five conventions between September, 1935 and May, 1936, it was announced by the Greater National Capital Committee of the Washington Board of Trade yesterday.

Approximately 100 members of the Independent Order of Rechabites' High Tent of North America will meet here September 22 to 28, inclusive. John R. Mahoney, 333 C street southeast, is the secretary in charge.

The month of May will see three gatherings: the Federal Bar Association, the American Judicature Society, and the American Federation of Arts. Altogether more than 500 delegates will be present.

Secretaries in charge of the three conventions are K. H. Brunner, 714 Earle Building, for the Federal Bar Association; Herbert Harley, Law School, Ann Arbor, Mich., for the American Judicature Society; and George F. Zook, Barr Building, for the American Federation of Arts.

In June, 1936, about 300 National Sojourners will meet here. Washington secretary of the national governing commission is Maj. Edwin S. Bettleheim, jr., 1700 I street northwest.

Scribe to Address Graduates.

J. Fred Essary, Washington newspaper correspondent, will speak tonight at the graduation exercises of the Washington School for Secretaries. Dr. Richard T. Ely, president of the school, will present diplomas to 85 graduates.

500 Jewish Veterans To Hold July 4 Services

Approximately 500 Jewish War Veterans of the East will hold an Independence Day program here.

Headquarters have been arranged at the Ambassador Hotel. At 11 a. m. July 4, Dr. Ivy A. Pelzman, District commander of the veterans, will preside at services in the Amphitheater in Arlington National Cemetery.

This program, under the joint auspices of the Veterans' Association of the District, will be addressed by Senator Bennett Champ Clark, of Missouri.

Music will be furnished by the United States Navy Band and Miss Dorothy Reddish, soprano. The program also will include addresses by William Berman, national commander of the Jewish War Veterans and other officers.

Six Going to Congress Of Youth Will Be Feted

Washington's six delegates to the American Youth Congress are to get an oratorical send-off Sunday. They will attend a conference at the Phyllis Wheatley Y. W. C. A., at 11 a. m., when Representative Byron N. Scott (Democrat), of California, is to be the principal speaker, according to an announcement from the congress' Washington committee.

A night rally will be featured by a New Theater skit, "Recruits," as well as by speeches from representatives of local political organizations. The national convention will be held at Detroit, July 4.

650 Sorority Girls to Meet In D. C. Sunday

Alpha Chis Coming Here After Indiana and West Virginia Sessions.

ALPHA CHI OMEGA, collegiate sorority, for the first time in the history of such a group is holding a seven-day convention in two States—Indiana and West Virginia—and the District of Columbia.

The 650 delegates representing all the States in the Union and Canada, opened the first session Wednesday at Depauw University, Greencastle, Ind. Faculty members and other widely-known persons were speakers.

After the meeting at Depauw the delegates boarded special trains for White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., where the convention will continue through tomorrow at the Greenbrier Hotel. Among the speakers at the sessions will be Dorothy Thompson, writer and wife of Sinclair Lewis.

* * * *

At midnight tomorrow, the members will start for the District of Columbia, arriving at 7 o'clock Sunday morning.

The Washington alumnae chapter will act as hostess for the convention here from Sunday until Tuesday. Mrs. Parry Grubb, president of the local chapter, will be hostess Sunday.

A six-hour sightseeing tour including a trip to Annapolis, Md., has been arranged for Sunday afternoon. The business sessions and social activities of the sorority during its stay will be held at the Shoreham Hotel.

The National Pan-Hellenic Council will meet Sunday night. Mrs. Scott Hovey, past president of the Washington council and a member of Alpha Chi Omego, will introduce the members of the various sororities.

* * * *

Mrs. Ethel Meade van Auken, national president, will preside at the banquet at the Shoreham Sunday night. Assisting Mrs. Chester Leasure, chairman of the receiving committee for the dinner, will be Miss Dorothy Perkins, Mrs. Grubb and Mrs. George Shaffer.

A musicale of Edward MacDowell's compositions will be presented by Marian MacDowell, after the banquet. Mrs. MacDowell will also give a talk on the MacDowell Colony at Peterborough, N. H., where Alpha Chi Omega maintains a cottage.

The convention will be brought to an end with another banquet Monday night.

The guests of honor during the convention will be the four living founders who helped to organize the society in 1885 at Greencastle, Ind. They are Olive Burnett Clark, Bertha Deniston Cunningham, Estelle Leonard, and Nellie Gamble Childe.

Moonlight Potomac Cruise.

The Young Democrats' Club of Washington will hold a moonlight party tonight on the Potomac. Among those attending will be Senator and Mrs. Harry Moore, Representative Mary T. Norton and her niece, Miss Mary McDonough; Representative and Mrs. Edwin Kenney and Representative and Mrs. William H. Suphim.

The committee in charge of the arrangements includes Mr. and Mrs. Walter F. Bramhall, Charles L. Hannowell and Edward Radue. Those having charge of tickets are Alfred S. Kurtz, Victor Russell, Miss Dorothy Ahlers, T. A. Goss, Robert Paxton, Miss Dorothy Biggerstaff, Miss Elizabeth Biehler, Miss Margaret Rauber, Miss Frances Sentell, Walker Johnson, Miss Margaret Williams, Miss Elizabeth Wheeler and Miss Ruby Davis.

To Address Law Convention.

Miss Mae Helm, assistant corporation counsel of the District of Columbia, will be one of the speakers at the convention of the International Association of Women Lawyers next month at San Francisco. Miss Helm first will attend the meeting of the American Bar Association also to be held in San Francisco. She is an alternate to that convention. She will leave Washington Saturday and return about August 1, after a tour of the Far West.

Miss Helm was one of the founders and the first president of the Women's Democratic Educational Council.

Federation Broadcast.

Miss Julia D. Connor will be the guest speaker during the "Among Women" hour presented weekly by the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs at 1:30 o'clock tomorrow from Station WRC.

Miss Connor, a representative of the Credit Union Section of the Farm Credit Administration, will speak on "Credit Union—the Poor Man's Bank." Mrs. George Oliver Gillingham, of the federation's radio committee, will introduce the speaker.

Novelty Musical Program.

The Beltsville, Md., 4-H Girls' Glee Club will give a novelty musical program tonight in the Methodist Church Hall to raise funds for "club week" at the University of Maryland.

The program includes a one-act play, a tableau, a garden scene and xylophone solos by Miss Betty Becker. The production will be directed by Mrs. L. L. Hurley.

Becky Sharp's on Scene Again To Remind Us That Best Sirens Are Anything but Dumb Doras

By Malvina Lindsay,
Women's Page Editor.

ALL WOMEN interested in the indirect control of men will rejoice in the return to the current scene, via the movies, of Becky Sharp. For Becky, after 75 years, still is the epitome of what women have learned about men's weaknesses. A rereading of "Vanity Fair" will prove the point.

* * * *

Few English fictionists have attempted to depict mesmerizers of men. And when they have, they have usually confined their efforts to telling how charming their heroines were rather than letting the enchantresses speak for themselves. But not Thackeray. He gets right down to concrete details and gives the A. B. C.'s of Becky's vamping.

* * * *

Up to the time of Becky, the fictional heroine who got her man was invariably an angel. She was also a good deal of a fool. But Becky violated all traditions of sirens by being smart, witty and bad-tempered. She was "not in the least kind or placable," writes Thackeray, thus being one of the first to challenge the "be good, sweet maid" formula. However—and here is a point many so-called smart women have never succeeded in learning—Becky concealed her smartness, at least from men, under an ingenue manner. Study her witticisms and you will find they seldom were uttered in the presence of a victim before he was ensnared. Her cleverest remarks usually were addressed to women. Her brightest philosophizing to Rawdon Crawley occurred after they were married.

HOW FAMILIAR even today is Becky's little bag of tricks. First, there was the "I'm a poor little girl all alone in the world" device. Wisely she made the most of being an orphan. She envied other girls their "dear brothers"—in the presence, of course, of the brothers—and orally she "doted on children." "We poor governesses!" she was wont to exclaim, lifting her green eyes appealingly to masculine listeners who almost choked up in pity over the plight of this poor little defenseless woman.

* * * *

She was the world's best listener—when a man was talking. "I must be very quiet and very much interested about India," she thought as Jos Sedley began his oft-repeated harangue about his Indian adventures. What is more, she laughed at Jos' tiger stories even on the nineteenth retelling. And (hint to the modern working girl) when she went into service as a governess she asked her employer to select her serious reading for her, she consulted him on all trivial matters and she solicited his help with her French even though she spoke the language like a native.

* * * *

Becky's ace trick perhaps was flattery. "He's very handsome." she said, in a stage whisper to fat Jos Sedley's sister, when Jos, of course, was sitting nearby. Her flattery of men, in fact, was so audacious the subjects sometimes feared she was making game of them. But on second thought, they invariably attributed it to her fine discrimination.

HOWEVER, many women have been clever, have even had green eyes, red hair and good figures and not been Becky Sharps. Becky's prime attribute was nerve. She was not afraid of men. She didn't overestimate their subtlety and she frankly addressed herself to them. She could light their cigars, pat them on the arm, shake hands with both hands, indulge in all the little graceful familiar gestures that made them feel at home.

* * * *

Moreover, she didn't waste any more time than she could help in the society of women. She was not the type that at a social gathering would permit herself to be marooned on a sofa with the feminine guests. And she was never inhibited by any ladylike fears that men would think she was running after them. "It's evident the poor devil's in love with me," thought Jos Sedley, and then smiled fondly to himself. In fact, most men left her presence firmly convinced they were lady-killers.

* * * *

Becky has come down to the present through stage and screen largely as Thackeray conceived her—a clever, unscrupulous, winsome charmer. Even Hollywood has refrained from putting her in a bathing suit, a pair of hostess pajamas or a setting of magnolia blossoms. She continues to stand on her wits and her nerve. She remains an eternal testimonial to the fact that the best sirens are not dumb Doras.

Girl Workers Under 21 Run Greatest Risk

Head Other Age Groups in Industries, Women's Bureau Finds.

YOUNG GIRLS may be more in demand than older women by employers because they are pretty and will work for lower wages, but they present greater risks in the way of industrial accidents.

This was ascertained by the Women's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor which has just completed a study on industrial injuries to women as compared with those to men. The study shows that girls less than 21 years old suffered more injuries than did women in any other age group. This indicates, according to the investigators, that youth and its characteristic inexperience are factors in accident frequency. A large proportion of the accidents to these girls were caused by machinery. The report says:

"From this standpoint the demand for young girls rather than older women as machine operators seems unfortunate.

"Women over 45 showed comparatively few injuries. While differences in exposure undoubtedly are a partial explanation of the small proportion of injuries to older women, the steadying influence of age and experience also are factors of importance, an important fact to bear in mind at a time when industries are refusing employment on the basis of age at 40 years or even younger."

Falls were the most frequent source of injury to women over 21, the report states. About 70 per cent of the back injuries compensated in one State were caused by falls on stairs and steps, from elevations such as chairs, boxes and ladders, or on level surfaces. Many of these falls on stairs were traced to shoe heels catching on stair treads. Though the reports were not complete on this subject, it was stated a number of restaurant workers gave slipping on wet floors as the cause of the injury. The numbers of women suffering back strains from handling heavy objects led to the conclusion that women should be warned against the strain of lifting articles not ordinarily handled by them.

Manufacturing outranked other industries in number of injuries both to women and to men, and generally accounted for a larger proportion of women's accidents than of men's. Clerical, professional, and other service were important groups in regard to the number of women's injuries, while construction and mining were responsible for many of the men's injuries.

Summer Styles Dominated by 'Flowers'

Wear your flowers in some unconventional way if you would follow the latest trend in Paris. At the right, shower bouquet of many-toned silk flowers is worn in a cascade effect from the belt of the maize colored embroidered organdie gown. A cluster of flowers may be caught at the neck of a gown or form the belt fastening in the back.

Trims Range in Size From Forget-Me-Nots to Sunflowers.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, June 27.—The handwriting on fashion's wall spells "flowers" in big letters this summer.

They are all over the style scene in artificial trims running the size gamut from forget-me-nots to sunflowers, in fabrics ranging all the way from crepe paper to velvet, in huge or tiny printed figures on both cottons and silk crepes. They are the favored finish to both evening and day costumes.

By night some exotic blooms appear. One designer studs the skirt of a black mousseline gown with four huge white pique daisies, another poses a giant pale blue mousseline rose on the shoulder of a pale blue satin dress. Garlands of forget-me-nots rim the decolletes of Indian muslin dance frocks, cluster of lilacs mingled with grapes are caught at the waistline of chiffon dinner dresses and masses of colorful poppies fill the decolletes of crepe dresses.

Flowers have crept up to the head, too, these evenings. They nestle in a cluster at the nape of the neck, are tucked in a close cluster over ears, are sprinkled over the top of chiffon Indian head veils and cover toques and crownless visors to wear with dinner frocks.

Favored as Finish to Both Evening and Day Costumes.

Most of the flowers seen at night are fashioned of mousseline or velvet, but those which bloom on day frocks are made of everything from a crinkled crepe paper to leather and rubber. White linen chrysanthemums are poised on the pockets of a black crepe ensemble, dutsy blue paper anemones are caught at the base of the vee neckline on a navy blue crepe frock and a bib of pink roses and green leaves made of organdy finishes a black taffeta afternoon costume.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I trust you will see fit to publish this letter in your column and shall ask God's blessing upon you for so doing. After having been for years the main support of my family, I find myself alone, ill and in dire need, with no one in the world to look to for relief.

* * * *

I might add that I am suffering greatly from lack of medical attention so that life is almost unbearable. However, I'm striving with all my might to "keep going," and the kindness I'm about to ask of you will, if granted, do lots toward cheering me—something to look forward to, something to do.

* * * *

It occurs to me some of the well-to-do women of this city would be kind enough to send me some of their discarded clothing and thereby relieve me on that score. I am very clever with the needle and would find real diversion in remodeling anything that might be sent me.

Thanking you from the bottom of my heart, I am, sincerely,

MISS X. Y. Z.

* * * *

DEAR MISS X. Y. Z.: Here is your letter in print. I hope it may bring you a generous supply of clothing (surely it will if women readers have one superfluous article of wearing apparel hanging in a closet) and I thank you for the spiritual blessing you invoke upon me.

* * * *

It's quite possible you may obtain that much-needed medical attention by applying to the clinic or out-patient department of practically any hospital in Washington. It might be Providence, George Washington, Georgetown, Garfield, Columbia, or any of the others. Your petition will be considered by the medical social worker, and you will be advised what steps to take in securing medical advice and supplies. M. H.

DEAR MISS HAYWORTH: How I cried when I read the letter signed "Invalid," in last Saturday's column. I am the mother of a son who was stricken with infantile paralysis at 9 months of age. He was an invalid for five years. After numerous operations he finally walked and we sent him to school. He grew to be 19 years old and then was taken by death.

* * * *

Only God knows how my heart aches for my lost son. "Invalid's" stepmother must never have known the sorrow of losing a child, or she could not be so insensible to the suffering of that poor boy.

* * * *

I should like very much to have his address just to send him a card or fruit or flowers or maybe pay him a visit. My sympathy goes out to him, and I hope his heartache and suffering may soon be lessened.

Sincerely, Mrs. V. P.

* * * *

DEAR MRS. V. P.: I feel sure your expression of sympathetic interest in "Invalid," the 34-year-old bedridden sufferer who lost his mother at the age of 14, and who has been crippled since the age of 17, will be balm to his lonely heart. I regret to say I do not have his name and address, since he wrote anonymously, but even had he given it, I would not feel free to divulge his identity without first obtaining his consent. Perhaps, reading your letter, he may be willing to launch an exchange of letters. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Food in Opened Can Held Safe

Pouring Off Juice From Vegetables Called Waste.

FOOD is perfectly safe if left standing in a can under proper conditions of storage after the can is opened, says the Bureau of Home Economics. A great many people have the idea that some mysterious and dangerous change takes place when the contents of the can are exposed to the air, although they do not worry about the food as long as the can stands unopened on the pantry shelf. The can, as a matter of fact, is often the most convenient container to keep the food in.

Food spoils no faster and no slower in the open can than in any other open container. It is just as safe in the can as it would be in a dish, possibly even safer, since dishes are not always sterilized. Of course, you have to use some care to keep the can cool and covered, and to use up the contents in the same time as you would if they were in a dish.

People sometimes claim that acid foods like tomatoes get a tinny taste when they stand in the can. This is because they tend to dissolve some of the iron in the tin in the presence of air, but this is not harmful in any way. If the canner advises you on the label to transfer the contents to a dish, it is because he thinks they will look more appetizing.

Some people think the liquid in a can of peas or beans or other vegetables should be drained off and not used. Years ago the liquid may have been too salty. Today it is seasoned just right, and it contains valuable nutrient, like the liquor in which you cook vegetables. Discarding it is a sad waste. Sometimes you can add it to a soup or make a sauce of it to go with the canned vegetables. Or, by using a broad, shallow pan, you can heat the canned vegetables in their own juice until the liquid has almost evaporated.

'Lady Bountifuls' Draw Fire of Feminist Leader

Miss Marie Wing Decries Women Who 'Dole' Out Political Activity.

WOMEN NO LONGER have a choice between taking an active interest in Government and retaining a passive attitude toward it. They have a unique contribution to make to public welfare today, as never before, when the Administration is trying to extend home developments of human values into larger fields.

So thinks Miss Marie Wing, prominent feminist and attorney, of Cleveland, who is visiting in Washington. Active in women's organizations since pre-suffrage days, Miss Wing has observed at close range the changing attitudes and interests of women since they have established a place for themselves in public life.

Discussing these yesterday, she pointed out that the industrial revolution had brought about so many developments in labor devices that women today were no longer confronted with the drudgery of housekeeping. "Since they have been the direct beneficiaries of the revolution, it is the duty of women to help solve some of the problems the industrial revolution has created," she said.

Decries "Bountiful" Attitude.

Miss Wing decried "the Lady Bountiful attitude" of some women who dole out their time to studying public problems as if they were charity projects. She also had some disparaging things to say about women who take an active part in promoting good government but largely defeat their aims by "hard boiled tactics." She believes women make much greater contributions to public welfare when they realize their activity need not be identical with men's.

Miss Wing first devoted her efforts to the suffrage fight because, as she expressed it, "Woman suffrage was fundamental to any contributions women might make to public life."

When the suffrage fight was won, she turned her attention to social legislation, including child labor laws and unemployment insurance. This eventually led her to study law because she believed a knowledge of legal practice would help her in promoting social legislation.

Active in Social Legislation.

Since she has been a practicing attorney in Cleveland, she has played a prominent part in politics and has been active in bringing about much welfare legislation, including the minimum wage law in Ohio.

She was also among the group who established the Woman's Federal Saving and Loan Corporation. This organization, which was granted a charter in Cleveland only a month ago, is unique in that it is the only saving and loan corporation in the world in which women are the directors as well as the investors.

This is not the first big project in which Ohio women have recently pioneered, according to Miss Wing. It was in Cleveland that the widely publicized and highly efficient "reporter plan" for education in government was first established.

Explains 'Reporter Plan.'

This plan, Miss Wing said, had proved "amazingly successful" in Cleveland where women were making use of it in keeping posted on what New Deal agencies are accomplishing.

The reporter plan, she explained, is a system whereby one woman becomes an authority on one phase of government and can interpret its aims and activities to other persons. "Mrs. Smith, for example, will find out all there is to know about the CCC or the FERA. She will keep informed on every project attempted or carried out by the particular agency for which she is a 'reporter,' and she will be 'on tap' to dispense her information to other women, and even men, from time to time. We like the plan very much in Cleveland," she went on. "I am convinced women everywhere could profit by following it."

Paris' Eyes Pop At Hair Dyed Frocks' Hues

By the Associated Press.

AUTEUIL, France, June 27.—The most eccentric fashions Paris has seen in years appeared today at the hurdle race which marks the apex of Grande Semaine—the "Grand Week" which winds up the Parisian social season.

The horses at the race course wore the conventional saddle and bridle, but the racing enthusiasts' eyes bulged when they saw women with their various heads of hair dyed blue, violet, mauve, and rich copper to match their frocks or accessories.

One Parisienne's hair was dyed to match her vivid blue costume; another wore a sun-tanned-copper make-up to match her titian red hair.

Beaten silver slave bracelets were worn above the elbows and big, crownless felt hats with turned-up brims, rimmed at the forehead line with ostrich fringes and other eccentricities were noted.

Really chic Parisiennes appeared in decidedly more sober costumes, the great favorite being dark silk tailleurs. There were many navy or black, plain or dotted taffeta gowns with wide-brimmed straw hats and colorful sweet pea and carnation boutonnieres.

What TODAY Means

"Cancer."

IF JUNE 28 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10 a. m. until noon, from 2 to 4 p. m. and from 7 to 9 p. m. The danger periods are from 8 to 10 a. m., from 4 to 6 p. m. and from 9 to 11 p. m.

Conditions which may cause jealousy, makes it advisable for you to be careful of what you say, how you express preferences, and what you do. A good motto to remember this day is: "actions speak louder than words;" so be circumspect in yours if you wish to keep out of hot water. Business will probably be decidely "spotty." Any general activity may be most found in those lines catering to the general public's actual requirements, or entertainment. This day should be auspicious for making engagements of a social nature, as well as entertaining. Married and engaged couples, and those with matrimonial thoughts, should find this a good day to plan some form of diversion that will require their going to some interesting place, even if it is only to the movies.

If a woman, and June 28 is your birthday, you should possess a lovable disposition and find it easy to get along with people. Your amiability is likely to be instrumental in your meeting with success in either a business or social way. Be careful your wilingness to play Lady Bountiful is not taken advantage of by some selfish friend. It will be a good policy for you to pursue, to discuss any matter involving a large expenditure of money with some disinterested person in whom you have confidence.

It will be good judgment to practice tolerance where religious or political subjects are involved in a discussion. Work of a statistical, clerical, or scientific research nature, as well as educational or missionary, probably will be the most suitable for you to engage in. Through matrimony you should be able to have the type of home life you have always desired.

Doting Mother Alienates Girl, Writer Warns

Trust Your Daughter and Stay Her Friend, This Daughter Advises.

CAN A GIRL'S best friend be her mother? The answer is yes if the mother knows how to be a friend.

Nea Colton, 19-year-old girl, discussing the problem in the July issue of the National Parent-Teacher Magazine, lists some of the types of mothers who can never be friends with their daughters. One is the questioning mother, another the matchmaking mother, another the poor-sport mother and still another the jealous mother. Speaking of her own happy relationship with her mother, Miss Colton says:

"When I return home from parties I am not met at the door with an avalanche of questions as some young people are. My parents honestly trust and respect me. They have instilled in me the highest ideals and they have faith in those ideals as well as faith in me.

Amazed at Practice.

"I was really amazed when I first heard of this questioning practice. A friend of mine, whose mother, by the way, tells all and sundry that she and Martha are 'the best of friends,' is an unusually unfortunate victim of this. 'We love doing things together,' her mother will say, beaming happily. 'Don't we, dear?' Poor Martha can't get rid of her doting mama. The poor girl, who is now 24, hardly ever gets a break! If she does, she is met at the door with questions. 'Where were you? Will you look at the time? Why are you so late? Whom did you see? What did they wear? Whom were you with? Who danced with you?' And so on, far into the night.

Matchmaking Embarrasses Girl.

"The story of Martha reminds me of the story of my friend, Jean. Jean is one of the most attractive girls in our crowd, and she used to be by far the most popular—but her fond matchmaking mama soon put an end to the latter. A few weeks following the girl's first date her mother bought her a 'hope chest.' Thereafter, the slightest sign of a boy's interest in Jean was a signal for Jean's mother to begin asking him the most personal questions as to his family, finances, and his own 'prospects.' All of these highly personal questions are asked in a very coy and knowing manner, Jean tells me, till she, poor girl, is so embarrassed that all possibility for a natural friendship and romance to develop is killed then and there.

"On the other hand, I know a boy who dares not mention a girl's name in his mother's presence for fear she will have an 'attack.' What these attacks are no one has ever been able to discover, but even her son notices that as soon as he denies all personal interest in the girl his mother miraculously recovers.

Parents Wish to Be Pals.

"Most parents want to be pals with their children and yet many of them violate all rules of good sportsmanship and fair play, which they righteously demand from their other friends. They accept their young people as intelligent individuals only as long as these young people agree with them. A disagreement, perhaps a matter of clothes, of politics, and the youngster is insolent, impudent, and 'must go to his room without any supper.' As I look around me, I become increasingly aware of how very like in all instances is a parent-child friendship to any friendship. It is always a matter of giving and receiving. If a girl's best friend really is to be her mother it can only be because out of all the friends she knows, her mother combines more of the qualities of friendship which she needs than does any one else."

Deodorant Set Holds Answer To Daintiness

Powder and Liquid Will Dispel Perspiration, Refresh Skin.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

NOW THAT summer's here, the problem of personal daintiness is ace high with most people. One solution comes from the makers of a well known liquid deodorant. They announce their newest product—a deodorant powder for use all over the body.

This product combines the qualities of bath powder and deodorant. It is soothing to the skin and has a delicate, faint fragrance. It is an effective neutralizer of body and perspiration odors, and is perfect for dusting the body after the tub. And it is cool and refreshing and at the same time efficient enough to control perspiration odors under the arms and around the feet!

The pink and white enameled metal container with its convenient shaker top is handsome enough to grace the smartest bathroom. Naturally it's grand for traveling, being compact, easy to carry, leak proof and a sure guardian of daintiness.

For Use With Liquid.

Delightful and effective as this powder is in taking the odor out of perspiration, it is not intended to serve the purpose of keeping the underarm dry. For this a liquid non-perspirant should be used. Powder and liquid together enable the fastidious woman to take the perspiration dilemma by the horns.

Whatever care one takes to deodorize perspiration, so long as it is present, it will dampen the armholes of one's clothes. This results in a stale, unpleasant odor which deodorants can not control and even dry cleansing does not completely remove. Besides being malodorous, perspiration stains fabrics, fades colors and shortens the life of the garment.

Used for 20 Years.

The liquid deodorant already referred to has been used in this country for more than 20 years. It comes in two forms, one for persons who perspire heavily and another for those who have especially sensitive skins or need a milder astringent. The actions of these astringents close gently the pores under the arms and divert the perspiration to less restricted parts of the body, where it can evaporate as soon as it appears.

The stronger product gives relief from perspiration in even the most difficult cases. It should be applied twice a week, as it is effective for three or four days. Sometimes women find that it is effective for almost a week. The underarm should be thoroughly washed before it is applied, to remove old perspiration and prepare the pores for the deodorant. It takes from 15 to 20 minutes to dry depending upon the individual and the dampness of the weather. Since it does its work while drying, it should be rinsed off as soon as the skin feels dry.

Milder Liquid Suggested.

For women who need only a mild nonperspirant or have especially sensitive skin, the less powerful sister product is suggested. This milder liquid should be applied every day, or on alternate days, according to the individual need. Because it takes less time to dry than the stronger deodorant it is fine for hurried use.

Cool Foundation Cream.

A foundation that beautifies your skin, and cools it 10 degrees in 10 seconds is something good to know about on a sweltering day. If your beauty is hot, wilted, tired, if your loveliness registers 100 degrees Fahrenheit, give your skin an application of a certain snow lotion and see how quickly your complexion revives!

Besides, it coats your skin with a delicate, semi-powder film that is most becoming. It makes your powder cake-proof and doubly adherent on the hottest summer day guards the skin from drying hot weather—and soothes an irritated, reddened skin.

It comes in three smart Paris-dictated tones, Peachbloom, Rachel and Terra Cotta, the new shade that is so "Indian" and exotic. The lighter tones are recommended for evening, the darker ones, Terra Cotta, for suntanned skins and daytime wear.

Used during the daytime, the snow lotion protects and flatters. Used at night, on face, neck, arms and back, you come forth looking like a midsummer night's vision of loveliness—cool—and enchanting!

About Permanents.

Query—I have already had two permanent waves since last September, but my hair is looking quite ragged and I am thinking of having it waved again. Do you think this would be injurious to my hair? Will you recommend a good wave set? B. E. A.

Answer—Beauty experts generally agree that more than two permanent waves a year are bad for their hair. Why don't you see a good specialist and have her examine your hair and scalp? I'm sure this consultation would not cost you anything and you will certainly obtain authoritative advice.

I shall be glad to send you the name of a reliable wave set if you will send a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Right Sport Clothes Make Any Man Seem 'Rugged'

For Registering Sartorial Virility, Hound's Tooth Check Outfit, in Bold Black and White Design, Is Recommended; Also Other Items.

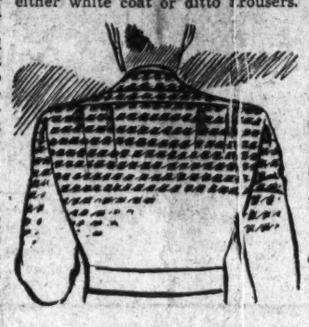
By John Q. Alexander.

Mr. Alexander's articles are written exclusively for The Post and will appear regularly, every Friday, on this page. For information on men's fashions, or for the names of the shops carrying the apparel described by Mr. Alexander, call NAtional 4200, branch 305. Or write, inclosing stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

THIS IS THE SEASON when new ideas in men's wear are as plentiful as ants on a picnic sandwich. Taken singly, most of them are all right. But be careful how you mix them or even your best friends will cross to the other side of the street when you come along.

If you're imprisoned in an office all week, it's difficult to look rugged over Saturday, since a good coat of tan is the first requisite and ordinary Mazdas don't help particularly. However, it can be done, if you'll shun those hues that make pale faces paler and stick to those that give you color.

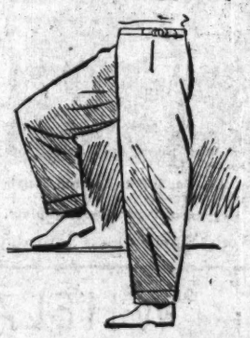
A sports suit is practically indispensable. We saw a knock-out yesterday in large black and white (no . . . not spots before your eyes) hound's tooth checks. This is the top for country wear and can be broken up and combined with either white coat or ditto trousers.



The whole get-up is handsomely tailored, with meticulous attention to detail. For instance, it has a new interpretation of the shirred back that is not only better looking but more comfortable. The material is sturdy and the general effect enough to make members of the opposite sex swoon expectantly. Even without that possibility it's easily worth the $65 they're asking for it . . . in anybody's money.

Slacks a Necessity.

Slacks are another necessity. These may be . . . and are . . . worn with sweaters, jackets or polo shirts and should be shorter than regular trousers, with no break across the instep. That last is important. You can forget about belts and suspenders, too, since the better slacks have efficient buckles that hold them snugly in place



They should be cut full length at the thigh and knee, and not more than 18 or 18½ inches wide at the cuff. Some we looked at and liked particularly were also in the hound's tooth pattern and would make a handy complement to the suit mentioned above.

Buttonless Sports Shirts.

Another thing we liked in this outfitter's was a new type of buttonless sport shirt. This has a regular collar but no buttons, is a slip-over affair, open about 6 inches below your Adam's apple. Most comfortable. And not only cool, but conservative.

If Annabelle insists, you can easily slip on a tie after the golf game and it will look like any other shirt. It's one of the most practical innovations of the year and may be had in blue or white, $1.95.

If you want to keep a cool head this summer, don't say we didn't tell you how to do it. There's an ingenious idea in men's head gear which is definitely okay.

Headgear With Glamour.

This is a helmet of terry cloth over some sort of featherweight composition, copied from those the English officers wear in India . . . you saw them in "Lives of a Bengal Lancer." Though they're not guaranteed to give you the appeal of Gary Cooper, they seem to be becoming to most men . . . we watched half a dozen try them on and there wasn't a fizzle in the lot. They're good for both town and country wear and have a special green eye-saving lining under the trim that minimizes glare. There's a half-inch margin of air space around your head for ventilation. And they're so light you won't know you're wearing a hat. Take it away for $1.00.

This same store is showing a lot of English foulard ties of the seven-fold variety. Because they require no lining, these are virtually wrinkle proof . . . we saw it demonstrated . . . and should come through smooth as a maiden's cheek after months of hard usage. They come in pleasing designs and various colors and are reasonably priced at $2.00. We've never seen the like before for less than $3.00.

Special in Robes.

Another store is specializing this week in house and beach robes of Japanese crepe. They are so practical and smart that we'll miss our guess if they don't become a major weakness of the stronger sex during the coming months. The material is serviceable and comes in a tremendous variety of patterns, neat, but not gaudy.

We liked especially a soft gray one, with green trimming, which would go well on any beach . . . especially after you've acquired that freshly toasted look. The store throws in a pair of heeless slippers and a bag to match, so that you can carry the entire kit easily. It's yours for $1.95, slippers, bag and robe.

Culbertson On Bridge

The Shut-Out Play.

THE word "hold-up" to those of us familiar with the literature of the West of a generation ago, or for that matter modern life in some of the great cities of today, suggests a bandit with a gun in his hand and the corrollary, "Your money or your life." Bridge writers and players notoriously careless and inexact in their terminology, use the word to describe a play which has nothing whatever in common with the methods of Jesse James or other bandits of more recent days.

In Bridge, to hold up is merely to retain a stopper in an adverse suit until such time as the partner of the leader has no more of it, so that he will be unable to return it if the lead is surrendered to him. A more correct name than "hold-up" is "shut-out," but, after all, life in the world of Bridge is too short to change certain accepted misnomers.

Cutting Off Communication.

In the hand below South must "hold up" to make his contract.

The bidding: (Figure after bid refers to numbered explanatory paragraph.)

North	East	South	West
1♣	Pass	2NT(1)	Pass
3NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—South's hand is, of course, too strong to respond with one no-trump only.

The Play.

West's opening lead was the diamond 5, upon which the 4 was played from dummy, and East played the Queen.

What card should South now play, and why? The first impulse, no doubt, is to play the King and then hope that a second trick may later be won in the suit with the Jack. Such reasoning, however, is basically fallacious. The establishment of the club suit is essential to the making of the contract, and if East holds the club King, he will be able to lead through the diamond Jack and establish the entire suit for his partner, thus defeating the contract.

South, therefore, should play the 3, not the King, and now, regardless of the location of the club King, the contract is safe. The line of communication between the two defendant hands is cut by South's "intercepting" or "shut-out" play.

Comfort and Protection In Children's Play Suits

Pattern No. 799.

IN THE COUNTRY, at the seashore, there are many times when a play suit is the perfect garment. It protects the child from too much sun, insects and poison ivy. The Bureau of Home Economics in Washington has designed this modern play suit, with a scientific eye to the young wearer's comfort.

The bias-cut seat permits bending, stooping and crouching without any strain on garment or youngster. The front slide-fastener closing (or large buttons and buttonholes) encourages self-help. The pockets are at hand level. Seersucker, denim, linen or percale are suggested fabrics. The pattern is cut in sizes 1, 2, 4 and 6. Size 4 requires 1¾ yards of 35-inch fabric and a 15-inch slide fastener.

Vegetables Should Be Crisp, Cold, Dry Before You Start Mixing Salad

Broiled Tomatoes With Olives and Bacon a Delicious Dish.

By Dorothea Duncan.

THE OLD WOODEN salad bowl becomes more popular as the years roll on. There is something festive and yet entirely informal about a table decked with pleasant linen, bright china and a large wooden bowl filled with crisp greens and fresh succulent vegetables.

The wooden bowls are prettier than ever this season. Some are made of plain polished wood, while others are carved and painted with gay flowers. The effect of the salad bowl is enhanced by serving fork and spoon of olive wood. The luster of these olive wood accessories is enhanced rather than dimmed by constant use.

The fork and spoon illustrated screw together scissor fashion making it possible to lift a portion of salad from the bowl with one hand while holding a plate in the other. The screw made of white bone can be unfastened, separating the fork and spoon so that they can be used as single kitchen utensils.

Before mixing your salad be sure that the vegetables are crisp, cold and dry. Wash the lettuce and wrap it in a damp towel and place in the refrigerator to crisp. Peel the cucumbers, score the sides with the tines of a fork, slice them paper thin and put them in ice water for 15 or 20 minutes. Wash and stem the radishes and cut from the tip almost to the stem so that the petals will stand out like a rose. Drop in ice water for an hour so the petals will unfurl. Wash and cut the tomatoes in wedges and chill.

Rub the bowl with a cut clove of garlic, arrange the lettuce in the bowl, garnish with cucumber slices, radish roses and tomato wedges. Green pepper rings may also be added. These, too, should be crisped first in ice water. Put the dressing, a thin, sharp French dressing, right on the table in a cruet or the bottle if it is a decorative one. Just before serving mix the salad lightly with the dressing, using the wooden fork.

Broiled Tomatoes with Ripe Olives and Bacon.

2 firm tomatoes
1 tablespoon flour
5 slices bread (½ inch thick)
Butter
10 very thin slices bacon
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
¾ cup pitted ripe olives
Salt and cayenne
1 cup milk
Cornmeal

Fry the slices of bread in butter until a golden brown on each side. Put them on a piece of brown paper on a warm part of the range until needed.

Fry the thin slices of bacon until crisp and, after draining them well on brown paper, lay them on top of the fried toast. Slice the tomatoes (which have not been peeled), making 3 slices to a tomato. Dredge the slices in corn meal to which has been added a little salt, and fry in the hot grease made by the bacon. When the tomato slices are a light brown on each side, place them over the bacon. There should be 2 strips of bacon and 1 slice of tomato to each slice of toast. In what remains of the bacon grease, after the tomatoes have been fried, sift 1 tablespoon of flour and, when well mixed, add the rich milk, salt, pepper and Worcestershire sauce. Let simmer 2 minutes and add the olives. Let the olives heat through, and pour the sauce over the toast slices, which have, in the meantime, been arranged on top of each tomato, and serve.

For culinary assistance, call Dorothea Duncan, National 4200, or write to her, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope, in care of The Washington Post.

Pointers Given on Selection Of Practical Costume Slips

YOU NEED a number of slips to get through the summer, not only because of frequent laundering, but because with sheer dresses you may need different colors, fabrics and styles. Perhaps you will make some of them yourself. Others you will buy ready-made. You will be offered slips made of pure dye silk, synthetics or cotton, and maybe even handkerchief linen. They will come in long and short length with ordinary and low-cut backs, shaped, straight, or brassiere tops, snug-fitted, loose, bias-cut, straight and wrap-around bodies, shadow-proof panels, lace or embroidery trimming or none at all, adjustable straps, and other devices planned to suit different types of garments worn over slips, and the ideas of different women.

In all this variety of design and material, some will be durable, and others that may look all right at first, may not last the season. A clothing specialist in the Bureau of Home Economics, U. S. Department of Agriculture, offers some useful shopping tips on selecting durable, practical costume slips.

"You know an underslip doesn't lead an easy life," she said. "It spends long hours on duty, with very little time off. It must stand up under a good deal of strain from wear—walking and particularly sitting strain, if the wearer happens to be an office worker—and frequent laundering. So it needs to be made well, of the right material. In short, a good slip must wash well, wear well, fit well, and make a smooth, inconspicuous foundation for the dress."

The kind of fabric, then, and the way the slip is made, are the two important considerations. You want a material with a firm, smooth, evenly balanced weave—one that is not too thick or too thin—one that will not pull or shoft, stretch or shrink. Several rayon fabrics this season have these qualities, as well as the special advantage of ironing nicely when dry, just as pongee does.

A pure dye silk with a smooth close weave is also excellent for a slip. It may cost a little more than a weighted or sized silk, but it will wear better. See if there is a label saying "pure dye silk." If the slip is white or light-colored it may not contain more than 10 per cent of weighting and be labeled "pure dye silk." If dark colored, the silk may contain up to 15 per cent of weighting, and still be called "pure dye."

Scratch a little place with your fingernail and see whether the yarns slip easily or stay firm. Or put the ends of your thumbs together, holding the material between them and the first fingers. Pull first on the warp or lengthwise threads, and then on the filling or crosswise threads. If the yarns shift easily the fabric will blister and wear out quickly, or pull out along the stitching on the seams.

Look at the trimming and edge finishes. Are they dainty, flat, and no trouble to iron? If the top is bound, see if the binding is put on evenly so that it will not pull anywhere. Some kinds of lace are stronger than others.

Gland Extract Brings Relief From Diabetes

Insipidus Type of Disease Puzzled Science Until Recent Years.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

THE term diabetes refers to two conditions that are quite different. Both may exhibit the symptoms of excessive thirst and profuse excretion of urine, but one is a disease of a portion of the brain while the other is due to a deficient internal secretion of the pancreas.

In true diabetes or diabetes mellitus (the root "mell" meaning honey) the urine contains sugar and there is often a high level of sugar in the blood. In diabetes insipidus the urine does not contain sugar, neither is the sugar in the blood increased. The kidneys are not the seat of the disease in either type of diabetes.

Only recently have we come to understand diabetes insipidus even partially. In 1913 Harvey Cushing reported that in his first 100 cases of disease of the pituitary gland (the "boss" gland of the body), the secretion of urine had been so profuse that the diagnosis of diabetes insipidus had been made by the attending physicians.

Other reports followed in rapid succession and it was shown that injuries to a certain portion of the brain would cause excessive urination. Later Pines, in 1925, and Greving, in 1926, described what they interpreted as a water regulating nerve center—one on each side of the brain. They showed that nerves from these areas traveled through a portion of the pituitary gland.

May Follow Brain Injury.

It would appear, therefore, that excess secretion of urine may follow injury to or disease of many parts of the brain including the so-called water regulating nerve centers and the pituitary gland. This is emphasized by the fact that fractures of the skull, encephalitis (sleeping sickness), brain tumors, tuberculosis and syphilis of the brain may be followed by an excess secretion of urine.

The diagnosis of the condition rests upon the positive symptoms of persistent urinary secretion and great thirst. The amount of urine passed may be very large. Ordinarily it is from 12 to 18 quarts per day, but may reach as many gallons. The amount of fluid taken by mouth is correspondingly large.

The discovery in 1913 that pituitrin, an extract of the posterior portion of the pituitary gland, would relieve the condition came as a boon to sufferers from diabetes insipidus and the drug has been used with marked success in many cases. Commercial preparations are ordinarily employed. Within 24 hours the amount of urine excreted may drop to normal limits with a corresponding relief of thirst.

The extract is usually administered by means of a hypodermic syringe in the same manner that insulin is given. For mild cases one-half to one cubic centimeter twice daily may be all that is required. A dose is usually given on retiring so that the patient will not be disturbed by the necessity of rising at hourly intervals for the purpose of emptying the bladder. The effect of the dose lasts from four to six hours.

Often Effective if Inhaled.

Sometimes the drug produces intestinal cramps and in such cases small doses at more frequent intervals may be employed. Occasionally the drug is effective if dropped on a bit of cotton and inserted into the nostril two or three times daily. If syphilis of the brain is the cause of the condition anti-syphilitic treatment should, of course, be employed.

It must be understood that the condition here referred to is not diabetes mellitus, and that no sugar is found in the large quantity of urine voided by these patients. The use of pituitary extract does not cure the disease. It merely supplies the gland substance that is lacking and adds to the comfort of sufferers from the disease. Nevertheless, some patients apparently improve under the effects of the drug and in time a smaller quantity is found to be sufficient to control the symptoms. Recent reports indicate that extracts of the anterior portion of the gland also exert a powerful influence on controling water excretion.

Potato Pact Ends Tie-up Of Shipment

Dealers and Embattled Farmers Agree on Price Structure.

Growers Had Imposed Embargo at Eastern Shore State Line.

By the Associated Press.

Painter, Va., June 27.—Producers who had enforced an embargo on potato shipments from Virginia's Eastern Shore as a protest against a precipitate drop in market quotations, today agreed with dealers on a price structure and named committees "to see that the regulations are followed."

The farmer-dealer conference adopted the following rate schedule:

1. One dollar and sixty cents for all potatoes on the track direct or through brokers today. No price arrivals.

2. One dollar and fifty-five cents for blocks of five cars or more. All sales to chain stores must be in blocks and must be shipped and billed direct to chain stores.

3. One dollar and fifty cents net, no brokerage. No guaranteeing prices for another day. All prices to trucks, $1.80. All sales to truckers must go through sales agencies, and bills of lading must be carried by truckers showing bill of lading. No digging or loading Friday or Saturday and only those potatoes in the field and on the track today can be shifted.

The aroused farmers patrolled the highways prior to the conference, virtually isolating the tapering peninsula as they picketed the Maryland line to shut off shipments north.

Other producers assembled at rail and truck shipping points to emphasize their demand that dealers quote potatoes at not lower than a $2 per barrel f. o. b. base price.

Growers were drawing $1.25 per barrel for their product when they united yesterday to enforce their demands for a better return.

Maryland Farmers May Lose Crops Rot

By the Associated Press.

Salisbury, Md., June 27.—Faced with the prospect of selling their early potatoes at a loss, farmers of the lower Eastern Shores counties of Maryland were undecided today whether to start their harvesting next week or leave the crop in the fields to rot.

S. B. Shaw, chief of the inspection service of the University of Maryland, said the drought conditions, decreasing the yield and increasing production costs, and the current low market quotations had spread a sentiment among the Maryland growers similar to that which caused shipments to be halted in Virginia today.

Staunton to Pay Ruff Final Tribute Today

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Staunton, Va., June 27.—With municipal operations virtually at a standstill, Staunton today prepared to pay a final tribute tomorrow at the bier of James C. Ruff, 38, city manager, killed last night when struck over the heart with a baseball bat which slipped from the grasp of a fellow player during a City Softball League twilight game.

Services will be held at the First Baptist Church conducted by the pastor, the Rev. I. T. Jacobs, assisted by the Rev. Dr. John J. Gravatt, of Trinity Episcopal Church. Burial will follow in Thornrose Cemetery here. Morton L. Wallerstein, of Richmond, executive secretary of the League of Virginia Municipalities, will head a delegation of out-of-town municipal officials coming for the funeral.

Mother Sees Her Son Drown in the Potomac

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., June 27.—Bertrand Carpenter, 15, was drowned in the Potomac River at Snyders Landing last night during a swim with his father, Harold Carpenter.

The youth, a sophomore in the local high school and a Boy Scout, was a good swimmer. The boy's mother saw the tragedy from the shore. The body was recovered late this afternoon near the West Virginia shore.

New Trial Granted In Auto Crash Suit

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., June 27.—A new trial has been granted in the $100,000 damage suit of Mrs. Helen Elgin and her two children against Carl J. Bruckner and John S. Schellhammer, Hagerstown, by Judge David A. Robb.

Mrs. Elgin had been awarded $21,000 a month ago by a jury in the Allegany County Court in the death of her husband, Joseph L. Elgin, killed June 26, 1934, in a truck collision near here. Motions for a new trial were filed by both the plaintiffs and defendants.

Public Affairs Group Meets in Charlottesville

All Virginia Cities Expected to Be Represented at Convention Opening Sunday Evening; Prominent Speakers on Schedule.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., June 27.—Nearly every city and town in Virginia, as well as units of national civic associations are expected to be represented here next week during the proceedings of the Institute of Public Affairs.

The two weeks' session will be opened Sunday evening with a program of a religious nature, and the daily discussions of State, national and international affairs will begin Monday morning. Approximately 150 of the country's leading educators, industrialists, writers, governmental and church officials will appear before the 12 round table groups.

A phase of the institute's organization is designed to have the aims and results of the discussions reach the people through regularly constituted delegates. For this purpose and in keeping with the annual custom, the governor has commissioned several hundred men and women from various communities to attend the sessions in an official capacity.

The Rotary Clubs of Virginia, one of the civic groups sponsoring particular forums, has named institute representatives to the round table they have helped organize, that of "European Relations—Rebuilding Peace," which will be directed by Dr. J. Anton deHass, professor of international relationships at Harvard University.

The Rotary committee for the institute program includes the Rev. Paul D. Bowden, of Warrenton, governor of the Fifty-sixth District of Rotary International, chairman; Lamar H. Timmons, of Charlottesville; John D. Crowle, jr. and Charles K. Brown, both of Staunton.

The Rotary-sponsored round table will form part of the first week's program.

Also, during the first week a forum on economic security will be conducted under auspices of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, of which Mrs. Geline M. Bowman, of Richmond, is president.

Efforts have been made by national officials of the federation to have a large group of delegates at the institute. Staff members in charge of arrangements are Mrs. Eudora Ramsey Richardson, of Richmond, and Emma H. Gunther, of New York. Assisting them is a special committee of Mary Stewart, chairman, and Josephine Roche, both of Washington, and Dr. Grace H. Beardsley, of New York.

Dr. Eveline M. Burns, of Columbia University, will direct the debates on economic security, a topic which has been incorporated in the ten-year objective program of the national women's organization.

Other groups sponsoring institute round tables are the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, the Carl Schurz Memorial Foundation, and the American Liberty League.

The Liberty League has delegated spokesmen to uphold its views on the topic, "The Constitution and the New Deal," while the Carl Schurz Memorial Foundation has assisted in organizing a conference on German-American relations. The Carnegie Endowment body will sponsor studies of Latin-American affairs.

The work of bringing the diverse groups together and outlining programs has been performed by Dr. Charles G. Maphis, founder and director of the institute. This has been done with the aim of having pressing current questions presented and interpreted by men and women of recognized ability.

The institute committee from the rector and visitors of the University of Virginia consists of President John Lloyd Newcomb, Lewis C. Williams, of Richmond, and Robert G. Williams, of Winchester.

Vesper Services Set On Skyline Drive

23 Congregations Will Be Represented.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Luray, Va., June 27.—Vesper services will be held on the Skyline drive Sunday for 23 congregations of northern Virginia and the Shenandoah Valley, according to an announcement by Elder A. J. Caricofe, minister of the hostess congregation at Luray. The territory included extends from Winchester to Dayton and from Broadway to Front Royal.

The program will include representatives from every congregation with M. H. Kahle, of Roanoke, field worker, as principal speaker.

Officers of the Brethren Young People's conference of northern Virginia are Jacob Huffman, Timberville, president; Melvin Fitzwater, Broadway, vice president; Mrs. Leona Miller Munday, Harrisonburg, secretary, and Miss Avis Munday, Harrisonburg, treasurer.

Episcopalian Youths Of Virginia Convening

Nice Is Flayed For Selections On Game Board

Governor's Conservation Choices Called Paying of Political Debts.

By the Associated Press.

Centreville, Md., June 27.—Gov. Nice was accused today by Joseph W. A. Evans of paying off "political debts" and neglecting the interests of the seafood industry in his appointments to the three-man conservation commission.

Evans, Democratic member of the House of Delegates from Queen Annes County, gave out a statement criticizing the Governor's naming Judge Robert F. Duer, of Princess Anne; Dr. J. Hubert Wade, of Washington County, and Dr. Henry W. McComas, of Garrett County, to the commission. His statement said:

"Gov. Nice in making his appointments disregarded all suggestions of the seafood industry and promises made previous to his election.

Discouraging to Trade, He Says.

"There is nothing in his appointments to enthuse either the oystermen, the packers or the seafood industry as a whole.

"We do not question the intelligence, honesty or sincerity of the new conservation commission, but it appears to me and all clear-thinking people that at least one member of the group should have been a man with a thorough knowledge of the seafood industry.

"The Governor in his campaign throughout the Tidewater counties promised faithfully that a thorough reorganization of the conservation department would be made with the appointment of practical men to the board.

Branded Political Salve.

"This was just political salve to secure votes.

"The seafood industry was never in a more critical condition than at present. Our oyster rocks are near depletion. Our shrimp areas are rapidly being destroyed.

"But proper judgment on the part of the Governor would have assisted greatly in restoring Maryland to her proper position in the seafood industry.

"Gov. Nice, however, elected to follow in the footsteps of so many political leaders, and has paid off political debts regardless of consequences."

Convict Succumbs As Parole Pends

William Blake, Attacker of Girl, Is Dead.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, June 27.—William Blake, whose application for parole was under consideration by Gov. Nice, is dead.

Blake had served six years of a 21-year sentence for criminal assault on an 18-year-old Baltimore girl. Some weeks ago, the Governor announced that he would parole Blake, who was dying from tuberculosis.

The victim of the attack and her family asked for a hearing and entered bitter objections to the parole. Following the hearing, the Governor announced that he had taken the matter under advisement.

Blake died yesterday at the Maryland Penitentiary here. His body was sent today to his mother, Mrs. Susan B. Finch, at Richmond, Va.

The attack for which he was sentenced occurred March 22, 1928. Two years prior to that time he had been tried on a similar charge involving another young woman. The trial was transferred to Annapolis on a change of venue and ended in an acquittal.

New Beer Ordinance Adopted at Weston

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Weston, W. Va., June 27.—A new municipal ordinance regulating the sale of beer and a reenacted ordinance regulating the playing of music will become effective July 1.

The beer ordinance prohibits the sale of beer from midnight to 6 a. m. and bans drinking of beer between those hours in places where it is bought; forbids hanging curtains on windows of beer parlors or booths in such places, and makes unlawful excessive noise or loud music in beer gardens. Heavy penalties are provided.

Pearson Fate To Be Settled By Aid of Nice

Governor Meets Regents at Baltimore This Morning.

Five of U. of M. Board in Doubt on Attitude to President.

With Gov. Harry W. Nice sitting in on the session, the fight on Dr. Raymond A. Pearson as president of the University of Maryland will come to an issue at 10 a. m. today in the university's Baltimore office.

Some time today the board of nine regents of the school is expected to vote on the charges against Dr. Pearson. The matter almost reached a vote last week, but the balloting was headed off by a friend of Dr. Pearson on the board, it was learned yesterday. This regent suggested Gov. Nice be given an opportunity to consider the charges and express an opinion before the voting.

Two of the regents are known to be definitely for the university head. Two more are equally definitely known to be against him. The attitude of the other five is shrouded in cautious silence. Intimations that Gov. Nice will line up on Pearson's side are seen in his speech at the university commencement. Dr. Pearson has been blamed for cuts in the school's appropriations. Gov. Nice took the blame for the latest cut, when speaking to the graduates.

To Follow Nice Lead.

J. Milton Patterson, of Cumberland, newest member of the board, is considered to be one of the doubtful members of the body. However, Patterson was only recently appointed by Gov. Nice and is likely to line up with the Governor on the side of the Pearson supporters.

It was learned yesterday that the opposition to Dr. Pearson, as brought out at the executive session of the board last Monday, apparently dated back to the salary cuts of 1932. Certain deans, it appeared, who had no authority to fix pay, had promised certain salaries to members of their staffs. When these could not be paid, Dr. Pearson got the blame. This is the version of a regent known to be favorable to the university head.

From the same source it was learned that these facts were developed at the meeting:

No Moral Reflection.

There is no evidence or charge reflecting on the moral integrity or high character of Dr. Pearson.

That he extended courses, doubled the number of students and elevated most of the colleges to a class A rating, all without an increased appropriation from the State.

That the finances of the institution are in proper order.

While the regents were gathering for the final discussion of the charges against Dr. Pearson, correspondence between the university head and Dr. Frederic E. Lee, former dean of the school, was released by Dr. Pearson. Lee's letter, in which he accused Dr. Pearson of offering him the presidency of the university as a "cheap form of 'bait' or 'bribe,'" was first made public by Dr. Lee himself Wednesday.

Pearson Answers Lee.

Dr. Pearson also issued a statement outlining the circumstances under which Dr. Lee, now with the University of Illinois, came to Washington. Dr. Pearson said that he called Dr. Lee here to offer him a place as head of the department of sociology and economics. Dr. Lee said he was not interested in this. It had been agreed that the university would pay his expenses on the trip and Dr. Lee submitted an account of $89.91. Dr. Pearson said this would be paid as soon as possible.

On the other hand, Dr. Lee's letter to Dr. Pearson said, "You said that you hoped I would be the next president of the University of Maryland if you decided not to stay on, in order that the university might have an 'honest man' for president in case you leave." Dr. Lee said last night that he was remaining here awaiting a call to testify before the regents tomorrow.

If Gov. Nice does align himself with the Pearson supporters today, it will mean that the university head may have the support of both political parties. Dr. Pearson is said to have been a close and respected friend of former Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, titular head of Maryland Democrats. Gov. Nice is a Republican.

Pay Cuts Explained.

Answering the charges made against him, Dr. Pearson said last night:

"The difficulty at College Park centers in the fact that our financial income has been decreasing steadily and regularly year by year since 1926. We are now receiving $160 average less per student than we received nine years ago for our educational work at College Park. Each year during this long period we have taken care of an increase of enrollment, with an actual decrease of money.

"Of course this gets on some people's nerves. With the cost of living going up it is getting worse. We have not substituted any poor teacher for a good teacher. In three of our five colleges at College Park we have had not one resignation of any importance since I have been president. These three colleges are engineering, home economics and education.

In the College of Arts and Sciences we have not had but one important resignation in six or seven years and that was the head of the department of modern languages, who resigns this year to go to North Carolina.

"If our financial income curve could turn upward for a year or two, the chief cause of our troubles would disappear. Gov. Nice and the Board of Public Works recently gave us $30,000 toward the maintenance of our new and larger hospital with its enormous charity work. At our commencement recently Gov. Nice made a very encouraging statement about further assistance."

Prison Row Of Quenstedt Upsets Party

G.O.P. Reported in Move to 'Draft' Him to Run for Mayor.

T. Roland Brown, Set to Head Ticket, Asserts He's Running Yet.

By the Associated Press.

ANNAPOLIS, June 27.—Reports that Annapolis Republicans would attempt to "draft" Mayor Walter E. Quenstedt to run for the post again were current here today as Quenstedt charged that a "thorough investigation" should be made of what he termed "deplorable conditions" at the Maryland House of Correction.

Quenstedt is a candidate to be warden of the House of Correction. He is now ending his third term as mayor but did not announce for re-election after Gov. Nice had said he would name him to the warden's post.

Appointment Hit Snag.

The plans for Quenstedt's appointment struck a snag this week, however, when Charles J. Butler, Nice's appointee as chairman of the welfare board, refused to agree to the change. Dr. J. L. Wright is warden at the House of Correction.

Quenstedt said today he based his charges partly on a letter he received from a guard at the prison. He declined to name the guard but said the letter gave him permission to turn it over to Gov. Nice if the Governor wanted it.

Warden Wright's comment on Quenstedt's charges was:

"I shall be only too glad to have an investigation made by any authoritative agency. I will welcome it.

"These charges are the type usually made. They are very broad and sweeping, not backed by details.

"I don't know what else I can say except that I would be very glad to have an investigation made."

Report Comes Suddenly.

The reports that Quenstedt would be asked to run for the mayoral post again as the Republican candidate in the July 8 election were not current until today. Developments in the dispute over the appointment of the warden indicated yesterday that Quenstedt would not receive the appointment, at least for several months.

T. Roland Brown, president of the Annapolis Water Co., is the G. O. P. candidate for mayor. It would be necessary for him to withdraw if Quenstedt is to be the party's candidate.

The action would have to be taken by tomorrow afternoon as candidates can not withdraw in the ten-day period prior to election.

Brown said today that he had not talked with Quenstedt and added that "up to the present time, I am the candidate of my party."

Quenstedt said he was not in a position to comment at "this time."

Criminal Law System Termed Feudal Relic

T. H. Duckett, Retiring President of Maryland Bar, Tells 40th Annual Meeting of Association That Administration Deters Justice.

By the Associated Press.

Atlantic City, June 27.—The present system of criminal law and its administration were termed relics of the feudal ages by T. Howard Duckett, retiring president of the Maryland Bar Association, tonight in proposing measures to speed up justice.

Addressing the association on its fortieth annual meeting, Duckett, a Hyattsville attorney, asserted:

"We are mired in a morass of technicalities and lost in the shadows of presumptions, reasonable doubts and (required) unanimity (of opinion by juries).

"Let us assume that all these rights, these ancient privileges and immunities were essential to a fair administration of criminal justice in the days of the arrogant barons or the tyrannical kings of York and Lancaster, does it follow that progress is impossible under a republic of free people, with a written Constitution and the final supremacy of the courts?

"The accused is enveloped in a shining armor of feudal design and the victim remains completely disregarded and forgotten."

Dubbing the grand jury a "palladium of the underworld," Duckett suggested that cases to go before this body be limited to the most serious offenses, that it be reduced in number and meet as often as necessary to expedite the meting out of justice.

He also cited measures in many States to permit a majority of a petit jury to bring out a verdict to obviate the impediment of "hung" juries where one or two men out of 12 "nullify the whole proceedings."

Reports of committees were received at a business session and will be acted upon tomorrow or Saturday, the closing day. The election of officers is a prime item of business for tomorrow.

The consensus of leaders was that plans of Gov. Nice to consider a full pardon for Harry B. Wolf, disbarred lawyer, would not figure at the association's meeting. There had been outside suggestions that the matter might be brought up.

Holt, Neely, Kump Slated for Session

Young Democrats of Lewis County to Meet.

By the Associated Press.

Charleston, W. Va., June 27.—The Young Democrats Club of Lewis County arranged today for the first meeting in nearly a year, at which Gov. Kump and Senators Neely and Holt, all Democrats, will be present.

That was assured when the Governor said he had accepted the club's invitation to attend a banquet in honor of Holt July 6 at Jacksons Mill, home of Stonewall Jackson.

The two Senators, friends personally and politically, also have accepted, the club announced.

With the party already laying plans for the next year at which the governorship and Neely's chair in the Senate will be at stake, Democrats all over the State will watch with interest the result of the meeting of the three highest officeholders in West Virginia.

Unlicensed Fishing Brings Fine of $10

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., June 27.—Edward Sweitzer, of Vindex was arraigned yesterday before Magistrate George Poole, Kitzmiller, and committed to jail in default of $10 fine for fishing without a license. Geroge Sweitzer, also of Vindex, arrested on the same charge, will be arraigned for a hearing Monday. Sol Rizer, of Bloomington, is held for a hearing Monday on a charge of allowing dogs to pursue game during the closed season.

The three arrests were made by Jacob Parker, of Luke, and John Shewbridge and Joseph A. Minke, of this city, game wardens. Local wardens state they have received numerous requests for information about the opening of bass season in Maryland, and explain that no species of fresh water fish may be caught in Maryland before July 1, except suckers, catfish, carp and eel.

Tobacco Tariff Treaty Sought By Maryland

Reciprocal Pact by Which France Would Lower Levy Growers' Aim.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, June 27.—An effort to have the United States effect a reciprocal tariff agreement under which France would lower the tariff on Maryland tobacco has been launched by State tobacco growers.

Dr. S. H. Devault, of College Park, and W. P. Posey, of Baltimore, recently met with the committee for reciprocity in Washington seeking such a treaty.

The movement originated in a letter to E. Churchill Murray, of Anne Arundel County, from John Lansdale, Maryland land owner, now in Houston, Tex.

Murray discussed the matter with Stanley A. Day, county agent, who called a meeting of county tobacco growers at which a resolution asking for the treaty was adopted and copies sent to the manager and directors of the Maryland Tobacco Growers Association.

As a result another meeting was called at College Park for the State and another set of resolutions adopted. These were sent to the committee on reciprocity in Washington.

Attending the State meeting were Dr. Devault, Thomas Parran, St. Leonards; Murray, C. M. Roberts, Landover; Bennett Darnell, Baltimore; J. P. Ryon, Waldorf; J. Harris Franklin, Washington; P. D. Brown, La Plata; Posey and S. B. Shaw, College Park.

A copy of a joint resolution asking for such a treaty, passed by the recent General Assemly, also has been sent to Washington.

Rialto Theater to Reopen in September, Under Ownership Management, Is Report

Universal Will EndLong-Term Lease on July 1

May Be Moore Laboratory; Columbia's Big Plans; Theater Notes.

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

From every present indication the Rialto Theater, Ninth and G streets northwest, will resume its place among Washington's centers of theatrical activity on or about Labor Day.

This is presaged by the fact that, arrangements having been completed for the termination of Universal's leasehold on the property, as of July 1, 1935, it will revert to the ownership control of Tom Moore, builder of the theater and its first successful operator. Mr. Moore's activities in the fields of stage, screen and radio recently have been transferred from New York to the Capital, where he is known as one of the motion picture's pioneer showmen.

Tenants of business properties built and owned as a part of the Rialto Theater Building, it is reported, have been advised that fiscal arrangements, previously in force between them and Universal, on and after July 1 will be operative between them and Mr. Moore.

Would Be Fine Laboratory.

When, as and if, as we say in the ticker room, Tom Moore resumes active control of the Rialto this fall, he will have at his disposal a fully-equipped and practical laboratory theater for the pursuance of plans which were exclusively set forth in this space last Monday morning.

Mr. Moore has announced that he controls several standard theatrical properties which, in condensed form, will be suitable for presentation on both stage and screen and as radio broadcasts of unusual form and fiber.

It is his declared intention to organize producing companies for the staging of plays, the production of pictures and the broadcasting of radio programs, in which extensive use will be made of the Capital's resident acting forces as support of stars of the first rank to be brought in from New York, Hollywood and other centers of production, along with experienced directors, playwrights, scenarists, technical crews and mechanical forces.

Recalls the Past.

The re-entry of Tom Moore into the local theatrical field will bring back to many old-timers—and they do not have to be such very old-timers, at that—memories of the day when the Rialto, under Tom Moore's personal direction, was not only the most popular motion-picture theater in Washington, but was nationally known as one of the foremost pre-release outlets for superior film product in America.

The initial bookings at the Ninth street house, beginning with Nazimova in "Eye for an Eye," the inaugural bill, back in 1918, and proceeding through Mack Sennett's production of "Mickey," starring the late Mabel Normand, Universal's "The Wildcat of Paris," with Priscilla Dean, and a long list of other "super-specials," comprised the most impressive roster of hits the Capital had ever known and established the week-run picture policy in this city, for the first time making possible the permanent abandonment of split weeks, with new bills opening on Sunday and Thursday of each week.

With "T. M.," as he always has been known to his intimates, back in the saddle, it is not impossible that the Rialto may recapture something of its former glory, not only as a picture house, but in new fields into which it never heretofore has ventured.

John Sikken, one of the most promising of the Capital's young resident actors, finds himself, of a sudden, confronted with the opportunity to become Washington's ranking matinee idol. He has been signed for leading-man roles by the National Civic Theater Society and will appear for the first time with that acting group next week in the Odeon Theater, on the grounds of the National Park Seminary, at Forest Glen, Md., where this week "A Murder Has Been Arranged" is the bill. The play in which Mr. Sikken will make his debut with the new organization will be "The Bride the Sun Shines On," a play that was to have been done by the National Theater Players had not their season ended so abruptly.

I have seen John Sikken in many roles the past year or so, no two of them alike, and I have yet to see him turn in a poor or slipshod performance. On certain occasions he has betrayed many of the subtle qualities of the born actor. With proper coaching, a judicious selection of plays and the advantage of continuous activity behind the footlights, he should go far. Both he and the society are to be congratulated.

Hail, Columbia!

One of the greatest books in the enduring literature of the world—Dostoievsky's "Crime and Punishment"—will be brought to the screen as a talking picture with Pierre Lorre, who first came to American attention by virtue of his appearance in the foreign-made picture called merely "M," in the stellar role. Lorre was to have been seen with Nova Pilbeam in "The Man Who Knew Too Much," at the Belasco, following that bizarre musical piece, "Moscow Laughs," running on the screen at the time the Lafayette Square playhouse was shut down for the summer.

"Crime and Punishment" will be made by Columbia Pictures and will be released as one of that company's special features during the season of 1935-36. It takes an important place in a line-up of "specials" that includes Frank Capra's version of "Lost Horizon," "A Feather in Her Hat," which will mark the return to the screen of Ruth Chatterton, and "Love Me Forever," the new Grace Moore vehicle.

Others Are Signed.

These are not the only important casting assignments announced by Columbia. That company also has signed Louis Hayward, who scored in Noel Coward's stage play, "Point Valaine," with Lynn Fontanne, Alfred Lunt and Osgood Perkins, and recently was seen on the screen with Ann Harding, Herbert Marshall and Maureen O'Sullivan in "The Flame Within." Mr. Hayward will be cast opposite Miss Chatterton in "A Feather in Her Hat." Another addition to this same cast is Billie Burke, currently visible in both "Becky Sharp," at RKO-Keith's, and "Doubting Thomas," in which Will Rogers will reopen on F street tomorrow at Loew's Columbia.

The other important bit of casting announced by Columbia concerns "She Married Her Boss," starring Claudette Colbert, last season's winner of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences' award for the best acting of the year. This production is now in work with such established players as Michael Bartlett, Melvyn Douglas, Katherine Alexander and Jean Dixon leading Miss Colbert's support.

That brash young comedian, Milton Berle, who appropriates to his own lively uses any fragment of stage material he thinks he can do greater justice than it has been accorded by its originator, has been signed to a five-year contract by the Shubert boys. It is the professional intention of the Messrs. Shubert to groom Master Berle for stardom. They better look out or he will have them talking that way! However, Master Berle's first assignment will be to the Bert Lahr role in "Life Begins at 8:40," when that gay gambol—spell it anyway you like—takes to the road for a transcontinental tour early in the new season—if any.

Miss Bankhead Takes Over.

The theater long has recognized in Miss Tallulah Bankhead a young actress of foresight, initiative and courage. She put up with many assaults upon her artistic inclinations while laboring in the Hollywood vineyard and finally eschewed the flickers entirely and came East to do any play which might suit her fancy.

She found one in "Forsaking All Others" and produced it herself, although under the conveniently concealing device of sticking an established producer's name on the piece as a bit of camouflage.

Now Miss Bankhead once more has pitted her judgment against old hands in the trade. She has assumed complete managerial direction of her current Broadway vehicle, "Something Gay," and is going to keep that sprightly affair going through July and August, in lieu of a summer vacation. If another satisfactory play comes along for next season, she will do that in lieu of a fall vacation. That is the way Miss Bankhead is when she gets her dander up!

One is led to believe that it is an altogether pleasant arrangement for all concerned under which Miss Bankhead becomes her own manager as well as star in "Something Gay."

Peeks at Other Side.

The willingness of everyboy connected with the production to lend every possible aid toward lightening her managerial responsibilities is making it possible for "Talu" to acquaint herself with much concerning the running of both a theater and a play that she presumably never knew before—perhaps never even suspected.

She is, of course, surrounded by a cast that knows its way about the theater. Hugh Sinclair, Walter Pidgeon and Nancy Ryan head it. Mr. Sinclair appeared earlier in the year with Elisabeth Bergner in "Escape Me Never," for the Theater Guild, and later assumed the same role opposite the same star in the screen version of the Margaret Kennedy play. He is considering an offer to appear with Gertrude Lawrence in a new Margaret Kennedy play in London next season.

So it all comes down to the simple fact that Tallulah Bankhead's vividness as a personality is quite matched by her absorbing interest in whatever she undertakes in the theater. Compared with a vacation, her present experiment looms as a novelty with something the tang of adventure about it.

And if it makes a few dollars over the summer, that will be something gayer yet!

Personal aside to A. M. J., 1514 Seventeenth street: Thank you very much for recent words of cheer. Listen for the postman to ring at least once, if not twice.

Shiver-And-Shake Show.

Tonight is the night when the ghost walks at Loew's Fox Theater. Furthermore not only it, but they—if advance notices are to be taken at a tenth of their face value—will walk at the scariest hour of the 24, at the witching hour of midnight.

It seems that Ed Wynn and his "Spook Show," to be unfurled locally for the first time tonight, to the best of my knowledge, have played something in the neighborhood of 500 theaters in an unbroken "season" that began May 26, 1933. His hair-raising novelties will be supplemented by eerie murder mystery on the screen, "The Ghost Walks," thus insuring an early morning seance of exquisite terror that will probably give you the squizziwiddles for the rest of your natural life.

Doors will open at 11:30 p. m. for this carnival of shivers and shudders, and the dirty work will get under way at 12, midnight. Ed Wynn's portion of the entertainment will be presented in Washington at this single performance only.

And since the matter of Loew's Fox has come up, aspirants for roles in the third annual "Going Native" revue will parade their talents for the first time before the appraising eyes and ears of Gene Ford, in charge of the production, in the National Theater next Monday night, beginning at 8 o'clock sharp. Additional auditions will be held on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, at the same hour and, as prophesied in this column a few days ago, applications have been pouring in in such numbers as to make it probable that the try-outs will extend into the wee, small hours of the morning. Each applicant should bring whatever music, costume or paraphernalia he needs. An accompanist will be on hand to assist those who need music for their turns. This year's "Going Native" will be presented at the Fox early in August. Mr. Ford is still in the market for acceptable skits and blackouts.

Helping-Hand Note.

Since last Tuesday night, Primo Carnera, the mountain that falls down like a man, ought to know something about black-outs!

He went for one in a big way and, by hook or crook, may have learned something.

Yeah, mostly hook!

Runs the Gamut of Human Types

This debonair gentleman with the silken scarf, white kid gloves, monocle and ivory-headed walking stick is Robert Barrat, one of the most versatile actors devoting his generous talents to the cinema. It is as pictured above, opera hat and all, that Mr. Barrat will be seen in the Fox production of "The Dressmaker." If you wish to see him at the other end of the social scale, go to the Earle and watch his work in the role of Stanislaus Janauschek, the drunken ironworker in "Stranded," with Kay Francis and George Brent.

P. T. A. Institute Opens Next Week

Virginia Branch Will Conduct Sessions at Emory.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Emory, Va., June 27.—Workers of the Cooperative Education Association, Virginia branch of the Na-Teachers, next week will particitional Congress of Parents and pate in an institute at Emory and Henry College, to be conducted in connection with the summer school.

The institute will be held from Monday through Friday, and will be conducted by Mrs. Charles E. Roe, field secretary of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, assisted by Mrs. S. C. Cox, first vice president of the association; Mrs. Spencer Graybeal, chairman of the Holston district of the association, and other county and city leaders of southwest Virginia.

Liquor Thieves Drink Some Better Brands

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., June 27.—Theft of about a dozen bottles of the higher priced brands of liquor from the State liquor store, opened here early in June, was reported to police today.

Officers said they were without promising clews as to the person or persons who used a brick to smash the glass front door in the downtown section early this morning.

New Week Will Offer Stars in Various Guises

Edward Arnold, Vera Van Appear in Person Among Excellent Film Plays.

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

"The Glass Key," a mystery yarn by Dashiell Hammett that is being described as the thin man's hard-boiled brother, will be the screen feature of the week beginning tomorrow at Loew's Fox Theater, with George Raft and Edward Arnold in the principal roles, supported by Claire Dodd, Rosalind Keith, Ray Milland and "Big Boy" Williams. The bill will be made notable by the appearance in person, on the stage, of Mr. Arnold as headliner of the vaudeville portion of the bill which he also will distinguish in shadow form. Other acts will be contributed by Carl Freed and his Harmonica Harlequins, Mills and Martin, a comedy team, and Jordan and Grace. Fox Movietone News and Phil Lampkin's orchestral contributions will round out the program.

• • • •

Joe E. Brown will be the pictured star of the bill beginning tomorrow at the Warner Brothers Earle Theater. His new screen vehicle is peculiarly congenial because in it Joe plays a baseball hero, and baseball is one of his hobbies in real life. The title of the new diamond extravaganza is "Alibi Ike" and it is based on one of the late Ring Lardner's inimitable baseball yarns. William Frawley, Ruth Donnelly, Roscoe Karns, Paul Hervey and Joseph Crehan lead the supporting cast. The 32 original Roxyettes will co-headline the vaudeville portion of the bill with Vera Van, a deep-throated favorite of the airways, who will appear in person on the stage. Others on the bill will include Rufe Davis and his Radio Rubes and Pettet and Douglas, "Two Gobs on Leave." Overture and newsreel will be added.

• • • •

The first full-length feature ever made by the new three-tone Technicolor process, "Becky Sharp," will be continued through next Wednesday at RKO-Keith's Theater, with Miriam Hopkins in the title role and a notable ensemble of stars in support. Among those cast in pivotal roles are Alan Mowbray, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Frances Dee, Alison Skipworth, Doris Lloyd, Nigel Bruce and Billie Burke. On Thursday, July 4, RKO-Keith's will present the film version of H. Rider Haggard's "She," starring Helen Gahagan.

• • • •

"Oil for the Lamps of China," the admirable picturization of the novel by Alice Tisdale Hobart, with Pat O'Brien and Josephine Hutchinson in the featured roles, will resume its downtown popularity as chief screen feature of the Metropolitan Theater, beginning tomorrow. Others of note in the cast include Lyle Talbot, Jean Muir, John Eldredge and Arthur Byron. A musical reel, "Pardon My Glove," with the Three X Sisters, and a full 15-minute newsrell will complete the program.

• • • •

One of the smart comedy hits of the season, "No More Ladies," a screen adaptation of the stage play by A. E. Thomas, will continue for a second week at the Palace Theater, with Joan Crawford, Robert Montgomery, Franchot Tone, Charles Ruggles and Edna May Oliver providing the high points of hilarity. The Metrotone News, a Silly Symphony, "The Golden Touch," and a Laurel and Hardy short-reel comedy will be held over, with the feature.

• • • •

Will Rogers, supported by Billie Burke, Alison Skipworth and Sterling Holloway, will take possession of the screen at Loew's Columbia Theater tomorrow, to continue the downtown run of "Doubting Thomas," the Fox film version of George Kelly's stage play of "The Torch Bearers." The major feature will be augmented by newsreel, comedy and selected short subjects.

• • • •

Beginning on Monday, July 1, the Roadside Theater will present a manuscript play by Winona Godfrey, under the title of "Grand Gesture." The "try-out" of the new work will extend over a period of two weeks in the unique "red barn theater" out the Rockville pike beyond Bethesda, Md. Denis Connell, Virginia Rand, Adele Cusack and Edward Stevenson are cast in the principal roles. The Roadsiders' current production is Dion Boucicault's "After Dark," which will continue through Saturday.

"The Bride the Sun Shines On" will be next week's offering in The Odean, on the grounds of National Park Seminary, Forest Glen, Md., under the auspices of the newly-organized National Civic Theater Society. John Sikken is the company's newly-signed leading man who will appear in the principal male role of this play. Margaret Hatfield, appearing this week as the cockney maid in "A Murder Has Been Arranged," will be the leading woman, having appeared in the play when Katharine Hepburn was the bride. Forney Reese is directing the piece.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich

New York, June 27.

NO joke of Bucky Harris' was it this afternoon when he sent Infielder Red Kress to the pitching mound against the Yankees in the eighth inning.

The Nats' manager is in dead earnest in his attempt to convert the heavy-handed Kress into a pitcher for the Nats. Asked if it was in a spirit of jest that he sent Kress into the box in the eighth inning today, the first time the utility infielder had ever ascended the rubber, Harris erupted:

POVICH.

"Certainly not. I'm going to make a pitcher out of him. You saw what he did out there today (Kress struck out three Yankees in the eighth inning). Well, I think he can pitch. And so does he.

"He's got a heluvan arm, no kidding. And bad as we need pitchers we're lucky to have him. He's got a high fast one that hops and a low fast one that sinks, and I think he's got control. I know he's got courage.

"I don't know when I'll let him start a game, but he may get plenty of relief work. Jack Russell's going to show him how to act out there on the rubber, how to keep the runners close to the bags and how to wind up. And then we're going to let him throw. With that speed he has he oughta knock the bats outa their hands if they get 'em in the way."

Kress has never considered himself a pitcher. The first intimation Harris received that the red-headed utility infielder possessed any pitching ability at all was a month ago when Harris' regular pitchers advised the Nats' manager that Kress had a terrific hop on the ball.

IN an effort to keep down his weight while warming the bench after Lyn Lary and Ossie Bluege had ousted him from the shortstop job, Kress went to the mound daily in batting practice and tossed 'em up to the pitchers and reserves during the noon-time drill preceding the batting practice of the regulars. It was then that Harris began to hear reports that the infielder had a mystifying fast ball.

As yet Kress possesses no curve, but Harris is confident that he can get by with his speed, which compares with that of Willis Hudlin, of the Indians, in the manner that the ball breaks. After the game today, Catcher Cliff Bolton declared that Kress pitched every ball to the spot he called for with remarkable control. No batter worked him for a count of more than one ball.

Kress' mates on the Washington bench were laughing outright when they saw the infielder go to the mound. All of the Yankees were grinning. But when he started to pitch, well, you know about the guy who sat down at the piano.

AFTER the game, Kress said he did feel strange out there on the rubber. After the first man reached base against him he didn't quite know how to pitch without a long wind-up. But you'd never have guessed it when he started striking 'em out—three in a row.

The thing that worried him most, he said, was fielding his position. The hitter looked awful close from the pitcher's mound and mentally he took back any abuse he might have heaped upon poor-fielding pitchers when he was playing behind 'em in the infield. But he said he guessed he'd learn about fielding from the pitcher's box.

The transformation of an infielder into a pitcher is a rarity in baseball, although there have been a few such cases. The most recent and among the most notable is the shift of Bucky Walters from third base to the pitcher's mound by the Phillies. Walters, a third baseman when he was with the Red Sox, pitched a four-hit shutout the first time he ever stepped to the mound in the big leagues.

The Braves used to have Bobby Smith whom they converted from a third baseman into a pitcher with more than fair success, and Ralph Winegarner, of the Indians, came to the Cleveland club as a third baseman. But baseball history shows that it is the pitchers who are usually converted to other positions.

THE most notable example of a transformed pitcher is, of course, Babe Ruth, who was the league's leading southpaw when he helped hurl the Red Sox to the pennant in 1916, and who won a 1-to-0 World Series game. Lefty O'Doul, like Ruth, became an outfielder after breaking into the majors as a pitcher and like Ruth led his league in hitting.

There were lesser lights who made the same change from the pitcher's box to the outfield, but rare, indeed, is it when a guy steps out of the infield into a pitcher's role as Kress is attempting to do.

Gallico, Suh, Prepared to Duel General Phelan or Max Baer

By Paul Gallico.

A Special Correspondent.

NEW YORK, June 27.—This department is not at all disturbed that Jean Borotra and a tennis writer named Didier Poulain are going to fight a duel with swords as soon as M. Borotra is finished with his work at Wimbledon, which seems to be about now, since Borotra was beaten by Roderick Menzel, the temperamental Czech. As a matter of fact, I expect to fight the winner.

From what I gather, M. Poulain called M. Borotra a "nom." M. Borotra then replied by calling M. Poulain a "nom d'un nom" and the seconds were called in. M. Poulain is apparently a champion swordsman. Myself, I have only had about 25 lessons, but I make up in grit, courage, strength and determination what I lack in finesse.

It is obvious that duels between sports writers and athletes will spread to the United States and I consider I have the jump on the rest of the boys. I have been studying fencing for my own amusement the last six months, never dreaming that it would have a practical purpose. All I can say is that I am delighted.

To Challenge Phelan.

I think I probably will challenge Gen. Phelan, the chairman of the New York State Athletic Commission, for my first duel, or probably the general will challenge me. I have been calling the general "noms" for some three years now, and he ought to be about ready to demand satisfaction. He is going to ask for cavalry sabers, but I am going to insist on foils because that is as far as I have progressed to date. Foils with buttons on them preferably, as my skin is a little tender. I am ready to fight him any time he wishes at the Yankee Stadium for 25 per cent of the gate. M. Poulain and M. Borotra are going to do theirs in private, which seems to me a sucker trick. One could get a lot of dough for that sort of thing.

As a matter of fact, I am surprised that the general has not been involved in many duels already, as he is insulted regularly at every major prize fight by the losing manager. The first thing that a losing manager does after a fight is rush over to where the general is sitting and [illegible] to bawl at him at the top of his lungs. The general turns red, then purple, then deep blue and bawls back.

Duello Is the Answer.

This is undignified and could be solved by the duello.

I am aghast when I look over my long and checkered career as a sports critic to think that I have waited this long to study swordsmanship. When I think of the number of fighters, golfers, tennis players, bike riders, ball players, football stars and athletes in general, not to mention commissioners, promoters and all the rest of the sports figures that I have called bums in print, I shudder. All this is now changed. Ten more lessons and I will fight them all. I am still a little rusty on the "riposte" or counter and a middle-aged spread intereferes somewhat with my lunge, but they tell me that I have the coolness of a d'Artagnan and the courage of a lion and that there probably isn't a fight manager in America that I couldn't lick with the duelling sword.

To date the mails have brought no challenge from Mr. Joe Gould, the manager of Jimmy Braddock, the new heavyweight champion of the world, because I recall distinctly calling his man a bum when he was matched with Max Baer, and on subsequent occasions. There was no protest from Mr. Gould at the time, because I suspect that he might have had an idea that I was right, and there was no sense in any blood-letting under those conditions.

But Baer Was the Bum.

However, as it turned out Max Baer and not Braddock was the bum, and it seems to me that Mr. Gould ought to demand satisfaction. True, I have in a measure retracted my statement but no true red-blooded man of honor is satisfied with a retraction. Mr. Gould knows that I meant it when I said it and might even have a lingering suspicion that I am not entirely convinced. My seconds are ready to wait upon him at his convenience. I do not think that would be any good for an outdoor show and am willing to meet Mr. Gould at the

Kress Stars In Box, But Nats Bow

Infielder Fans 3 Yanks in Row in Ninth as Mates Fail.

Three Regular Hurlers Are Pounded for 15-5 Defeat.

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, June 27.—Red Kress, the futility infielder who has been warming the Washington bench, was unveiled as a pitcher by Manager Bucky Harris this afternoon and he celebrated his mound debut by striking out the side in the eighth inning but his heroics were a wee bit too late.

The Yankees had just finished massaging three of Harris' regular pitchers for 16 hits and had already made away with a 15-to-5 victory when with unbelieving eyes they saw Kress stride to the mound.

What at first appeared to be Harris' sarcastic reprimand to his entire pitching staff, which has been functioning during the past month like a wet match, took form as a rare piece of good judgment when Kress went into action.

Greeted With Single.

The reformed infielder learned to accept adversity early in his pitching career when Meryl Hoag met his first pitch for a sharp single to left field but thereafter he was the master. On four pitched balls he struck out Crosetti. On four more, he struck out Ruffing and on four more pitches he struck out Hill. And they all went down swinging.

Whether they struck out from surprise, good fellowship or the effects of Kress' fast ball I don't know, but it didn't look phoney. The only time Kress looked bad was when Hoag stole second base on his wind-up. When he was striking 'em out he was throwing a low fast one over the plate that had 'em missing by feet.

Kress' predecessors on the mound for Washington had been pitching and ducking in the same motion in self-defense. Bobby Burke surrendered his 2-0 lead in the third inning and Ed Linke, who relieved him, was a party to three Yankee runs in the fourth and two more in the fifth.

Nats Assault Ruffing.

It was against Red Ruffing that the Nats obtained their two-run lead in the first inning when Johnny Stone inserted a long triple into the proceedings, but the Yanks went the Nats one better in the third when, with two on base, Ben Chapman slammed a line drive against the left-field wall and saw it carom past Manush into center field for a homer inside the park.

These three runs in the fourth had boosted the Yankees' lead to 6-3 and it was 8-3 when they had finished with Linke in the fifth after he had pitched bases on balls to three straight batters and tossed singles to Dickey and Hoag.

They got Linke out of there in the seventh by beginning a seven-run disurbance, which brought Belve Bean and his lively ball into the box. They had four of the seven runs when Bean went in there and he gave 'em three more pronto.

Thus the score was boosted to 15-3. The Nats came up with two runs in the eighth, which fell only ten runs short of sending the game into extra innings.

O'Mahoney Pins Londos in Boston

By the United Press.

Boston, June 27.—Danno O'Mahoney, of Ireland, moved to within a notch of the world heavyweight wrestling championship when he defeated the veteran Jim Londos before 35,000 fans at Fenway Park tonight.

O'Mahoney won the only fall with a flying body scissors after 1 hour 16 minutes 30 seconds of fast, rugged action.

Ed (Don) George, claimant to the world title, was introduced before the bout and it was understood that a match between him and O'Mahoney would be announced within a short time.

Giants, Cards Dominate Team

Six Members of Each Club Are Picked for All-Star Game.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 27.—The National League today decided to call six members of the league-leading New York Giants and a half-dozen of the world champion St. Louis Cardinals to the colors in a concentrated effort to train its heaviest guns on the rival American League forces in the third annual all-star game, to be held July 8 in the huge Municipal Stadium at Cleveland.

All eight clubs, however, are represented on the squad of 20 players, selected by Frank Frisch, manager of the Cardinals. Frisch, who will direct the team with the aid of the league's "best minds," based his choices on the recommendations of other managers and club owners.

Squad Is Listed.

The complete National League squad follows:

First base—Bill Terry, Giants, and Jim Collins, Cardinals.

Second base—Frank Frisch, Cardinals, and Billy Herman, Cubs.

Shortstop—Floyd (Arky) Vaughan, Pirates.

Third base—Pepper Martin, Cardinals.

Utility infielder—Burgess Whitehead, Cardinals.

Outfielders—Joe Medwick, Cardinals; Wally Berger, Braves; Paul Waner, Pirates, and Mel Ott and Joe Moore, Giants.

Catchers—Jimmy Wilson, Phillies; Gabby Hartnett, Cubs, and Gus Mancuso, Giants.

Pitchers—Carl Hubbell and Hal Schumacher, Giants; Dizzy Dean, Cardinals; Paul Derringer, Reds, and Van Mungo, Dodgers.

Coaches—Charley Dressen, manager of the Reds; Charley Grimm, manager of the Cubs. Trainer—Doc Weaver, Cardinals.

13 of Last Year Named.

The roster includes 13 players who partcilipated in the 1934 all-star game at the Polo Grounds, but there are only seven survivors of the two interleague battles waged so far, both resulting in American League triumphs.

The "two-star" veterans of the National League varsity are Terry, Frisch, Martin, Hartnett, Paul Waner, Berger and Hubbell. This year's "freshmen" are Collins, Whitehead, Mancuso, Moore, Derringer and Schumacher.

Missing from the list, after two previous all-star appearances, are Pie Traynor, manager of the Pirates; Chuck Klein and Lon Warneke, of the Cubs.

Frisch has not yet definitely decided on his starting line-up. It probably will include himself, along with Terry, Vaughan and Martin, for infielders; Medwick, Moore and Waner, outfielders. Hubbell, a pitching hero last year, or Schumacher probably will draw the starting assignment, with Mancuso on the receiving end.

British Open Is Paced By Whitcombe's 139

By the Associated Press.

MUIRFIELD, Scotland, June 27. Henry Cotton finally turned human under the pressure of Murifield's whistling breezes today, but another Englishman, 40-year-old Charley Whitecombe, stepped right into his shoes and kept the door shut in the faces of American aspirants for the British Open golf crown.

While the sauve defending champion treated himself to a string of fives on the back nine before a surprised and disappointed gallery of 6,000 fans, the middle-aged Whitcombe slipped into the lead with a brilliant four-under-par 68 for a 36-hole aggregate of 139 at the halfway mark. The member of the famous British golfing family, who toured the course in 71 yesterday, posted his score before the wind reached its height.

Cotton's second-round 74, following his opening 68, removed the aura of invincibility which had clung to him since the championship at Sandwich a year ago and threw him back into a tie for second place with Big Alf Padgahm with 142. Padgham added a par 72 to his first round 70.

Three more sharpshooters intervened at 144—Alfred Perry, Ernest Kenyon and Bill Branch — before there was any sign of the American contingent. Henry Picard, of Hershey, Pa., established himself a bona fide contender by tying Robert Sweeney, New York amateur, now living in London, and three Britons, including the formidable Aubrey Boomer, at 145.

Picard turned in a 39-34 for a 73 and shot consistently good golf. Only his inability to accustom himself to Muirfield's rolling greens kept him out of the thickest of the melee. Sweeney had a one-stroke advantage over William Lawson Little, jr., of San Francisco, for the honor of leading the amateur contingent. Little, who showed signs of a return to form in shooting a 71, was bracketed with MacDonald Smith, of Glendale, Calif., and two others with 146—seven shots off the pace.

Mac Smith Cards 77.

Smith, who was in his most brilliant form yesterday when he toured the layout in 69 shots, took a windblown 77 that virtually blighted his ever-blooming hopes of winning a major title. His putter failed him repeatedly and he had trouble in wholesale lots with the thick rough and deep traps. Little, on the other hand, apparently reveled in the gusty going. He brought his mighty drives under control and would have been well under 70 with better luck on the greens.

Joe Ezar, of Waco, Tex., and Frank Ball, formerly of Atlanta, shot themselves out of the picture with second rounds of 75s for totals of 151. Another prominent contestant, Sid Brews, of South Africa, runner-up to Cotton last year, barely qualified with 153 for tomorrow's final 36 holes.

Sixty-two players with aggregates of 153 or less made the grade. Prominent failures included Richard Burton, who tied Cotton for the qualifying honors with 141; Cedric Sayner, who fired a 68 in the first test round; and the oldsters, George Dunnan and Abe Mitchell.

Big Train Hurls Again, Team Wins Exhibition

Butler, Pa., June 27 (AP).—The veteran Walter Johnson, old master of the mound and now manager of the Cleveland Indians, pitched five innings today as his club downed Butler, of the Penn State Association, 6 to 5, in an exhibition game. Butler is a Cleveland "farm."

Johnson restricted the Little Indians to three hits and one run. Lloyd Brown, who relieved him, was hammered for seven hits and four runs in four innings.

Trans Mississippi Golf Favorites Fall

By the Associated Press.

Des Moines, Iowa, June 27.—Leland Hamman, Paris, Tex., today survived two of the fiercest opening rounds in the 35-year history of the Trans-Mississippi Golf tournament as several of the country's finest amateurs fell in startling upsets.

Prominent casualties were Gus Moreland, twice champion; Zell Eaton, Western champion; Dave Goldman, national amateur finalist last year; Dodney Bliss, of Omaha; Paul Jackson, of Oklahoma City; Reynolds Smith, of Dallas, and Denmar Miller, of Des Moines, tournament medalist.

Johnny Goodman, of Omaha, former national Open king, and Johny Dawson, of Chicago, were the only favorites to march into the 36-hole quarter-finals with Hamman.

Sidney Wood Leads Men; Famous Two Helens Win Contests.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, June 27.—America sent three of her Davis Cup tennis campaigners into the last 16 of men's singles in the all-England championships today and qualified her two famous Helens for the third round of play in the women's division.

There wasn't even a sign of an upset all day as Sidney Wood, blond New Yorker and most formidable of the American contenders; Donald Budge, of Oakland, Calif., and Gene Mako, of Los Angeles, marched into the fourth round, while Helen Jacobs, the American champion, and Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, former world titleholder, were winning in straight sets in women's singles.

The only American casualty of the day, John Van Ryn, of East Orange, N. J., came closest to upsetting the dope. Drawn against Fred Perry, England's defending champion, and foredoomed to defeat by experts and gallery alike, Van Ryn fought a smashing, if losing battle before bowing to the British ace, 4—6, 6—1, 6—2, 10—8.

Van Ryn Keeps Trying.

Once Perry had taken the second set to square the match, there never was any real doubt as to the outcome, but Van Ryn never quit trying. As a matter of fact, he almost won the fourth set after Perry had gained a 4—1 lead. The American broke the champion's service twice, fighting his way to a 6—5 lead, and he was ahead at 7—6 and 8—7. But here Perry applied full pressure and reeled off the next three games in a row for set and match.

Wood was an easy winner over D. H. Williams, of England, 6—3, 9—7, 6—2, and Budge had little trouble with Adrian Quist, of Australia, winning, 8—6, 6—3, 6—3. But

Dixie Players To Fore in Tourney

Last Year's Finalists Meet Again Today at Congressional.

Louisiana Lad Carried to 37th Hole to Subdue Rival.

By Dave Herman.

TWO golfers from the South, one from the Southwest and another from the Middle West, will clash today in the semifinals of the National Intercollegiate championship at Congressional Country Club.

From the land of Dixie came the challenge of Charlie Yates, of Georgia Tech, defending titleholder, and lanky Freddie Haas, of Louisiana State. A former champion, Johnny Fischer, of Michigan, and Ed White, Texas captain, complete the semifinal bracket.

Yates and White, who clashed in the final last year at Cleveland, will meet in one match, starting at 10 a. m. over the 36-hole route, while five minutes later Fischer will take on Haas.

Two of the quarter-final matches were as exciting as any in the history of the championship, and the other two resulted in comparatively easy victories.

Haas Carried to 37th.

Nineteen-year-old Haas was carried to the thirty-seventh hole by a fighting son of Texas, Bill Welch, before the Southerner shot down his opponent with a beautiful par 5. Welch had the misfortune to take three putts from 20 feet.

Fischer was given the scare of his life by a teammate, Woody Malloy, the tournament sensation, who lost to the former Walker Cup star, 1 up in 36 holes of tense shot-making.

Champion Yates put out Jack Malloy, the Princeton threat and new president of the Intercollegiate Golf Association, 5 and 4, and White blasted out G. A. Menard, jr., of Penn State, 5 and 3.

Beaten by Yates, 1 up in the 1934 final, White expects to gain revenge today. He shot some of the finest golf of the day, after being held even by his rival during first nine of the morning round. Playing the back nine in one under fours, the Texan took a 3-up lead at lunch time, fired a sub-par 36 to become 7 upon at the twenty-seventh, and polished off Menard with a birdie 3 on the thirty-third hole. Three over par with a 75 in the morning, White played the next 15 holes in even par.

Welch Stages Game Rally.

Welch made a game comeback to no avail. One up on Haas through nine, 2 down through 18, 3 down through 27, the blond Texan captured the thirty-first, thirty-fourth and thirty-fifth to square the match. On the home hole Welch was to the left of the green, and Haas 25 feet in front. Both chipped up weakly, Welch missing his putt from 15 and Haas failing by a foot of going into the cup.

After going out in 39 to Welch's 38 in the morning, Haas burned up the back nine, ringing up birdies on the thirteenth and eighteenth to click off a 34, 1 under par. His 73 was low for the morning's play.

Haas went 3 up at the nineteenth when Welch 3-putted, and 4 up by winning the twenty-first with a birdie deuce. Welch parred the twenty-seventh for a win and Haas was still ahead, 3 up.

Haas Appears to Coast.

Perhaps Haas made the mistake of coasting in the stretch. He missed a putt on the thirty-first to take a 6, while Welch sank a 12-footer for a

Ancient Jockey Brings Ado Home in Charles Town Feature

Daily Double Pays Only $19.60

Again Storm Comes Up to Make Track Sea of Mud.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va., June 27.—Willie Hilley, one of the elderly fellows here who insist on plying a boy's trade and make a fair success of it, rode Ado, a gelded son of Sun Edwin, to victory over a muddy track in the feature race here today. Hilley lost his head on the back stretch and as the race was run he might have gone back, picked it up and still taken care of the field. The gelding had a half block of daylight between him and Parade On, ridden by the ancient Willie Obert. Third in the field of nine was Jinnee, the favorite.

Those who succeeded in winning the daily double were rewarded with only a $19.60 pay-off. The first and third races were run on fast and muddy tracks, respectively. After Petee Lad won the first in a much-booed nose decision over Anjoe, a storm blew in from the West and changed the track conditions. In the third race Eddie Smith rode Falmouth Belle to victory through the mud and water. The "double" drew a play of $2,290 from the crowd of some 3,000.

Trylubria Sets Pace.

Hilley had only to sit tight on his mount. Ado broke well and ran just off the fast pace set by Trylubria, a long shot. When that one quit, it was a simple matter for Ado to take the lead and win easily.

Jinnee, a 3-2 shot, was slightly bumped at the first turn of the seven-furlong trip, but made up a lot of ground on the back stretch. Booker, who had the mount, seemed to lose heart along with his horse at the stretch, and he failed to gain thereafter.

Lest we forget, Ado was a $24 to $2 betting proposition.

Eddie Smith, the Washington boy, stole the riding show by piloting three winners, including the longest priced horse of the day, Brilliant Grill, at a $23.80 mutuel. His best riding effort was that on his father's horse, Repeal, in the sixth race. He came from far back to score after Wise Mona had opened a long lead.

Worthington, the best distance horse on the grounds, will be shipped to Empire City tomorrow.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SANTERNO, $6.80, $3.90, $3.40; PALATINE, $5.80, $5.10; YAP, $4.90.

SANTERNO improved his position gradually on the outside through the last half-mile, came willingly in the stretch, and was up in the concluding stride to wear down PALATINE. The latter went into contention approaching the half-mile pole, and, disposed of QUEEN VIC for the lead, drew clear nearing the stretch, and just failed to last. YAP moved up fast rounding the far turn, but was unable to improve her position through the stretch. DOORKEEPER was unable to reach the leaders. QUEEN VIC had good speed for the first six furlongs.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—RAMUS, $7.00, $3.90, $2.90; FRIAR MARK, $5.40, $3.80; RAYCART, $3.60.

RAMUS outran his field to the first turn, was rated along in front under slight restraint after moving into a clear lead and, hard ridden at the end, held FRIAR MARK safe. The latter, restrained off the pace, came through on the outside in the stretch and closed with good energy. RAYCART, restrained early, moved up stoutly leaving the back stretch and, placed under punishment, weakened slightly in the last furlong. GENERAL LEJEUNE followed the pacemaker closest for the first six furlongs, tiring thereafter.

Baer Doubts If Joe Louis Can "Take It," He Declares Here

Poison Fear Revealed By Max

Named Suspects Before Braddock Bout as Precaution.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

FEARS that he would be the victim of foul play on the night of his late, lamented fight with Jimmy Braddock, caused Max Baer, the dethroned world heavyweight champion, to seal in an envelope the names of two suspects who were to be questioned in the event of such an occurence, Baer said yesterday.

The reformed Crown Prince of Swatonia refused to reveal the suspects' identities, and added that since his fears had proved groundless the envelope and its contents had been destroyed.

This newest and verbal bombshell from the loquacious Californian was hurled yesterday during an interview at the Shoreham Hotel, where he put on a bit of sun tan while letting off steam.

By foul play Baer explained that he did not expect to meet with physical violence administered by gangsters, but thought that efforts might be made to drug him. On the night of the fight extraordinary precautions were taken with all of his medical accessories and drinking water.

Here Until Saturday.

Baer will remain in the city until Saturday when he must return to New York for a rehearsal of his Monday night broadcast. He came to Washington, the "country" to him, to escape the heat, and if the temperature is not improved in the big city next week, he intends to return here.

Max is dead certain he'll meet Joe Louis in September, but not so certain he'll whip him.

"Louis has everything," he said yesterday. "He's a good boxer, can punch and knows how to handle himself in the ring, but we still don't know whether he can take it, and whether he has the fighting heart.

"I saw Carnera hit him twice during the fight, and he didn't look too good on either blow. He blinked his eyes, and that means something."

The former champ intends to go to California in the latter part of July to work in a gold mine in which his manager, Ancil Hoffman, has an interest. He claims that his hands are not in the best condition, and exhibits a knot on the back of the right hand, and toys with the knuckle of the second finger, left hand, to prove his point.

Displays His Hands.

"See how that knot comes up when I close my fist," he said. "It pops out every time I hit with it. And this knuckle here (massaging it gently) has water on it, and it hurts when I hit with it."

Baer's physicians have told him that they can operate on the right hand and remove a cartilage, or break the hand and risk re-setting it properly to restore the paw to normalcy. Either course would require five months of inactivity to insure success. The only other avenue open to him is to allow the injury to harden in the hand, and Max thinks he'll do just that.

He devoted a large portion of the afternoon to signing autographs, deriding the New York State Boxing Commission, praising Louis and his brother, Buddy Baer, and raking the Madison Square Garden promoter, Jimmy Johnston, over the coals.

Ridgewood Grove or the St. Nicholas Arena, which are two of our smaller sporting arenas.

I note that in the above I have again fallen victim of my habit and have referred to Mr. Baer as a bum. I do not see how Mr. Baer can afford to let this slight pass unnoticed even though he happens to agree with me and some 6,000,000 others and I will be glad to give him satisfaction too. I have just learned a new thrust, which is called a coule coupe disengage, with which I invariably manage to spear myself upon by opponent's weapon, and I believe I am prepared for him. On second thought, on the strength of what he showed in his recent championship fight at the Yankee Stadium, I am willing to pass up the swords and fight Mr. Baer with my fists. With one hand tied behind me.

Winchester Will Meet PWA Tossers Sunday

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., June 27.—With 14 victories in 15 games to its credit, the Winchester Park baseball team is looking forward to its game Sunday with the PWA nine, of Washington.

Lefty Jewett, ace hurler of the locals, will face the invaders, his old teammates. Jewett has lost but one game this season and that to the All-Stars, of Front Royal, which he later avenged. Saturday the Park nine will play the Antietam team, of Hagerstown.

Wash. County Poloists Will Oppose Marshall

D. C. Lad Scores In Merion Tennis

Hunt Defeats Top-Ranking Fritz Mercur.

By the Associated Press.

Haverford, Pa., June 27.—Gilbert A. Hunt, the Washington lad who gained court fame as the "barefoot boy" of tennis, provided the Merion Cricket Club invitation tournament with its biggest upset today by eliminating the top-ranking favorite, Fritz Mercur, 6—0, 6—3.

Hunt, who reached the final of last year's national intercollegiates as a student at Massachusetts Tech, completely dazzled the former Princeton player through both sets to reach the semifinals of the invitation play.

Hunt smothered Mercur through the first set and then came from behind a 1——3 disadvantage in the second to run out the match.

Billy Dettweiler Out of Prep Golf Play

Eliminated by Brilliant Round of Peddie School Entrant.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

GREENWICH, Conn., June 27. Unable to match the brilliant game of his opponent, young Billy Dettweiler, of Georgetown Prep School, today was eliminated by Bob Riddle, Peddie School, 6 and 5, in the first round of the Eastern interscholastic golf tournament.

Riddle, who, incidentally, lost his masterful touch in the second round and was in turn defeated by Keenan Morrow, of Asheville, made four birdies and played all but two of the remaining holes in par in conquering the Washington youth.

Dettweiler simply did not have a chance in the face of the youthful New Jersey champion's splendid play, nad was three down immediately after the start to two pars and a birdie. They halved the long fourth and Dettweiler won the fifth, but another birdie on the seventh by Riddle made him 3 up again, and he took the eighth and ninth for a 34, to be 5 up at the turn.

He made it 6 up on the 165-yard tenth hole with another birdie, and closed out Dettweiler with still another birdie on the thirteenth.

Bobby Jacobson, now the tourney favorite, remained in the running by virtue of a great niblic shot from the rough in his extra hole deal with Bill Schutt, of Hill School. Jacobson, who also won his afternoon match wth Bob Berger, of Lawrenceville, came through with the odds heavily against him.

Bob Riddle (Peddie) defeated Billy Dettweiler (Georgetown Prep), 6 and 5; Keenan Morrow (Asheville) defeated Haines Merritt (Exeter), 3 and 1; Ed Clarke (Peddie) defeated Alec Gerard (Peddie), 7 and 6; Arthur Rogers (Belmont Hill) defeated Jim Davidson (Lawrenceville), 1 up; Bobby Jacobson (Franklin) defeated Bill Schutt (Hill), 1 up, 19 holes; Bob Berger (Lawrenceville) defeated Lawrence Dilworth (St. Paul) 3 and 2; Carl Becker (Manlius) defeated John Rice (Lawrenceville), 4 and 3; Fred Borsodi (Hill) defeated Charles Pettijohn (Portsmouth) 2 and 1.

Second round—Morrow defeated Riddle 3 and 2; Rogers defeated Clark, 2 up; Jacobson defeated Berger, 3 and 1; Borsodi defeated Becker, 3 and 2.

Tomorrow's pairings—Morrow vs. Rogers, Jacobson vs. Borsodi.

Baltimore Firemen Win From Taneytown, 7-2

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Taneytown, Md., June 27.—Baltimore Firemen defeated the Taneytown Club of the Frederick County League in their opening game here by a score of 7 to 2. Staniford held Taneytown to five hits while the Firemen rapped Keffer for ten, including two triples. The Firemen clinched the game with three runs in the first inning and added one more in the fourth and three in the eighth. Taneytown went scoreless until the eighth when two runs were scored. Bleitner, Taneytown's third sacker, was hurt in the first inning running for a fly and was compelled to retire.

Babe Didrikson Forced to Play Extra Hole to Defeat Farm Girl

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, June 27.—A 17-year-old farm girl, who climbed over her dad's back fence adjoining a golf club just three years ago to take her first lessons at the game, today provided the drama to the Women's Western Open Golf Championship as America's two leading professionals swept into the semifinals.

The farm girl, who still milks the cows, is Miss Josephine Souchek, daughter of a truck gardener living on the outskirts of Chicago. She gave Mildred Babe Didrikson, famous Beaumont, (Tex.) girl athlete, the greatest game of her career until Miss Souchek was conquered in a 19-hole match to lose by 1 up.

Miss Souchek, a determined, brown, bobbed hair youngster, played more with her heart and head than she did with her clubs. The Texas Babe outclassed her in tion to it, and played for the breaks that carried her to the eighteenth hole all square with the lanky girl from the Southwest.

Leaving the sixth hole, with a gallery of 600 surging along to watch the farm girl fight against what looked like impossible odds, Miss Souchek had a lead of 3 up. But Miss Didrikson, with excellent long drives, gradually cut her lead. The Texas Babe evened it up at the fifteenth hole, where both were in the water. The Babe lost the sixteenth on a stymie after trying to play a billiard shot and won the seventeenth, where Miss Souchek showed poor judgment in using a wood for a short tee shot.

The semifinal tomorrow will be between Miss Helen Hicks, Hewlett, Long Island, America's outstanding business woman golfer, and Mrs. Opal S. Hill, Kansas City, in the upper bracket and Miss Didrikson and Mrs. S. Louis Reinhardt, [illegible]

Battle Looming Over Louis' Next Bout

Garden Claims Whip Hand in Having the Title all 'Sewed Up.'

By Bill McCormick.

A Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, June 27.—James J. Johnston, pugnacious little major-domo of modified mayhem at Madison Square Garden, is girding his loins for what promises to be the most hectic promotorial battle the big time has seen since Tex Rickard and Humbert Fugazy had it out.

Johnston's opponent in the battle of wits will be the powerful Twentieth Century Club which zoomed to a commanding position in the fistic world along with Joe Louis by staging a carnage between the Brown Blaster and Primo Carnera last Tuesday night.

The Twentieth Century Club has Louis under contract for two major fights this summer and is seeking Max Baer and Max Schmeling for the bouts. James J. Johnston says Baer and Schmeling will fight for him. Johnston sees the return of the long absent $1,000,000 gate when Louis fights the champion—for the Madison Square Garden Corporation, James J. Johnston, promoter.

Title "Sewed Up."

In the battle, Johnston will be armed with the heavyweight title, which he has sewed up up like a miser's pockets. The Twentieth Century Club will offer the leading contenders a chance to be punched around by the Sensational Senegambian for the very large purses which undoubtedly will be their reward.

"I have the title sewed up," James Joy insists rightly enough. "And I'll keep it sewed up. Every contender fighting for the Garden will sign to protect the title only for the Garden. With that crown, I'm in the saddle—and I intend to stay there."

"Neither Baer or Schmeling will fight this colored lad," Johnston firmly believes. "Baer already is claiming a pair of terribly injured hands, which should be the tip-off. Schmeling can fight for us for the title, so why should he take a chance on Louis and be sidetracked for the championship?"

Johnston is frankly an admirer of Louis and believes that between the colored lad with the air-cooled fighting heart and Champion Jimmy Braddock interest will be revived in the boxing game, which will result in a $1,000,000 gate next year.

U. S. Stars Win At Wimbledon

Mako, for the second successive day, had to come from behind to win, defeating Norman Farquharson, of South Africa, 2—6, 6—4, 2—6, 6—4, 6—1.

Miss Jacobs Below Form.

Miss Jacobs was far from her best form but she won handily from Rollin Couquerque, of Holland, 8—6, 6—4, just the same. Mrs. Moody, trying to gain a title she already has won six times, crushed Adeline (Billy) Yorke, 6—3, 6—1, to join Miss Jacobs in the third round along with such other stars as Margaret (Peggy) Scriven, who eliminated Mrs. D. C. Shepherd-Barron, 13—11, 6—3, and Mme. Rene Mathieu, of France, who won from Miss S. G. Chuter, 6—3, 6—4. A round ahead of these was Hilda Krahwinkel Sperling, of Germany, who won easily from Marie Horn, also of Germany, 6—3, 6—0.

Qualifying for the last sixteen in men's singles were Jack Crawford, Australia; Baron Gottfried von Cramm, Germany; Roderich Menzel, Czechosolovakia; H. W. (Bunny) Austin, England, and Christian Boussus, France.

Hole-in-One Is Record.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Saltville, Va., June 27.—The first hole-in-one ever scored on the Saltville golf course was made yesterday by T. Tate Spraker. Spraker's ace was on the 167-yard seventh hole, where the green is almost entirely surrounded by water.

Burro Ball to Be Played.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Sutton, W. Va., June 27.—A new sport will be introduced here Sunday, when leading citizens will engage in a game of burro ball. The game, similar to baseball, will be played with all players except pitcher and catcher mounted on burros.

Let's Go Fishing . . .

By M. W. Meier.

WE spent some 20 hours on Southwest Middles and adjacent waters yesterday and drew an utter blank as far as blues were concerned. Hardhead were plentiful but we did not want them. All the boats at Ridge were engaged and many Washington parties were fishing around us.

Capt. Taft Tippet took us out. In our party were Louis Steiner, J. W. Loughlin, of the Fire Department; D. A. Dean and Walter Hazel and his brother, Ernest.

On Wednesday we were informed many blues were caught on the Middles. They were rather small and all were full of roe.

Trout Season Wanes.

This is the last week of trout fishing in neighboring States and many Washington parties are leaving today for a final fling.

Postmaster Mooney and a friend are heading for Monterey, Va., for a two-day trip on streams in that vicinity.

Virginia black bass streams are beginning to interest local anglers. The small-mouth are a fighting tribe and he who lands a two or three pounder on a light flyrod gets the best of sport.

Stream fishing for black bass calls for either trout equipment with small spinners or else bass flies, or one can use the regulation casting rod with plugs, spoons or spinner lures.

Distance casting is not nearly so important as accuracy in placing the lure in a likely place. The reason why noviate anglers after bass fail so much is because they do not retrieve the lure at the right speed. Reeled in too fast is as bad as reeling it ni too slow. There is a little knack about it which can not be put down in words. It comes solely from practice and you will have to try and try. Finally the right speed becomes automatic. Then you begin to connect with fish.

Bay Parties on Increase.

Quite a few Washingtonians who own cruisers have been making trips down around the mouth of the river and some of them report excellent catches of small rock, weaks and hardhead.

Joseph B. Trew, president of the Trew Motor Co., took his boat down the river last week-end and finally wound up at Annapolis, after a happy fishing stopover on the Gooses. In his party were Joe Otey, Charles Brooks, Fred Trew and Capt. Billy Mishwitz. They caught many large croakers and a few weaks.

Yates, White, Fischer and Haas Survive in U. S. Collegiate Golf

par 5. The Southerner 3-putted the thirty-fourth for another loss, and he dropped his third straight hole to a par 4 on the thirty-fifth, where his drive caught the rough.

Any golfer should respect the prowess of Woody Malloy. Although a bantamweight in size, Malloy cracks out tremendous tee shots, as attested by his great stand against Fischer.

Malloy, who tied for the medal with Charlie (Chuck) Kocsis, teammate and Lewis Johnson, of College of Charleston, S. C., got off to a bad start when he dropped the first hole, taking a six. He evened the battle at the third with a par 3, and played two booming shots to the fifth for his birdie four to go one up. He won the sixth with a four to go two up. Fischer came through with a ringing 10-footer for a bird on the seventh.

Woody's attempt to negotiate Fischer's stymie on the ninth failed by half an inch, and Johnny captured the hole with a three to square the match.

Fischer Cards 9 Fours in Row.

The next nine was a genuine battle to see who could make more fours than the other. Unusual indeed was Fischer's feat of registering nine straight fours for a 36. Malloy hung on like a leach, collecting eight fours and a five. This five occurred on the short 14, where he failed to reach the green until his third shot, and Malloy lost the hole—the only deficit on his back nine score.

Thus did Fischer enter the afternoon round, one up, with a 74 to Malloy's 75.

A 20-foot putt gave Fischer a birdie four and win on the nineteenth. Johnny dropped the twenty-first to Malloy's par three when the former's tee shot found a trap.

Even again was the match after the twenty-second, where Malloy nailed a 20-footer for a birdie three. They halved the next three holes. On the 476-yard twenty-sixth, Fischer called on his putter to give him another win. It was another 20-footer for a birdie four.

Fischer got a real break on the short twenty-seventh. His tee shot, headed for a trap, hit the caddie of Menard and dropped just short of the green.

Fischer pitched dead for a half, and was still one up.

Both leveled par with 37's for that nine.

Malloy 3-putts the Twenty-eighth.

Malloy dropped the twenty-eighth by three-putting, after his putt from 10 feet rimmed the cup. It was tit-for-tat, for Johnny was guilty of three putts on the twenty-ninth. Malloy blew a comparatively easy putt on the thirtieth for a half, and Fischer's third 20-footer of the afternoon round gave him a birdie 4 on the thirty-first. A trapped tee shot cost Fischer the thirty-second, as Malloy took a 3.

They halved the thiry-fourth in 4s and the thirty-fifth in 5s. Malloy's putt from 8 feet for a win, lipped the cup on the thirty-fifth.

Malloy now needed a win on the thirty-sixth hole, being one down. The little fellow's drive was just short of the green. Fischer clouted a 300-yarder over the green—a mighty poke. Malloy chipped to within 8 feet of the pin, while Fischer, a few inches from the trap back of the carpet, flubbed his second, but was up close enough for two putts and a half.

Putt Rolls Past the Cup.

Malloy, fingering his putter calmly, needing a birdie, saw his ball finish a foot past the cup.

Both did 75s for the afternoon round.

Yates and Jack Malloy started shakily, halving the first two in 6—5. Malloy went into the lead by winning the third when Yates overshot the green with his second. Yates took the fourth with a par and birdied the fifth to go 1 up. Back came Malloy to annex the next two holes, arching an iron second stone-dead for a birdie on the sixth and canning a 10-footer for another birdie on the seventh.

One down at the turn, Yates caught the Princeton golfer at the tenth, but dropped the eleventh by playing too boldly for the pin. Malloy 3-putted the twelfth, to lose.

The match even, Yates ran down a 15-footer for a birdie on the fifteenth, to win, and took advantage of Malloy's trapped second on the seventeenth, to go 2 up at the intermission.

Playing the outgoing side of the afternoon round in 37, even par, Yates had enlarged his lead to 4 up as they crossed the road. The Georgia Cracker played a carom shot to score a birdie and win on the twenty-sixth, and shot the twenty-seventh in orthodox figures.

Five up went Yates at the twenty-eighth. Malloy, hoping against hope that his putter would keep him in the fight, sunk a 15-footer for a birdie 4 on the long thirty-first.

Yates ended the battle on the thirty-second. He made his par 3, while Malloy, trapped on his tee shot, took a 4.

Four over par for the entire day, Yates shot the last 14 holes in 1 over par.

A chance to have their names linked with such two-time champions as Georgie Dunlap, jr., of Princeton, former national Amateur champion; Freddie Lamprecht, of Tulane, and Dexter Cummings, of Yale, is offered both Yates, defending champion, and Fischer, winner at Hot Springs, Va., three years ago. It is rare for a champion to repeat or regain his laurels in the intercollegiates.

Fischer and Yates, in opposite brackets, may be the finalists—and what a battle it will be. Meanwhile Fischer must hurdle a serious obstacle in Fred Haas, a tough match player, and Yates must stop the par-beating pace of White.

Today's Pairings.

10.00—Charlie Yates (Georgia Tech) vs. Ed White (Texas).

10:05—Johnny Fischer (Michigan) vs. Freddie Haas (Louisiana).

Afternoon rounds at 2:00 and 2:05.

Mt. Jackson Wins Over Edinburgh

Victors Increase Lead to Three Full Games.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Woodstock, Va., June 27.—Mount Jackson defeated Edinburg in another slugfest today, 12 to 6. The league leaders put the game on ice in the second inning when they battered two Edinburg twirlers at will to score nine runs. Ford Irwin relieved Ben Swann for Edinburg in the third inning and held Mount Jackson to two scattered hits over the seven remaining innings. Jim Shannon, on the hill for Mount Jackson, assumed the lead by his victory as the league's most effective pitcher. Two home runs marked today's slugfest. Shannon hammered out one in the second and Bill Downey socked another in the sixth. No men were on base when either of the circuit clouts came.

Dinges led the hitting attack for the Edinburg team with three hits in three trips to the plate, while Harold Shannon was the leading stickman for the league leaders. Irwin struck out seven batters, while Shannon retired five.

As a result of the game today Edinburg went deep into the cellar, while Mount Jackson increased its lead to three games.

Cliff Spencer, Ray Mangum Turn in 72's in First Round at Hershey.

By the Associated Press.

HERSHEY, Pa., June 27.—A pair of subpar rounds of 72 put Ray Mangrum, of Los Angeles, and Cliff Spencer, of Washington, in a first-round tie at the head of the pack in the Pennsylvania Open golf championship tournament today.

Their nearest rivals were a quartet with even-par 73s, while Sam Parks, the National Open king from Pittsburgh, got no better than a 75 to deadlock for fifth place, a considerable distance behind the pacesetters.

Crowding the leaders with 73s were J. Wood Platt, of Philadelphia, former State amateur champion; Harlan Will, of Lancaster; Gene Kunes, of Norristown, and big Clarence Clark, of Bloomfield, N. J.

Higgins' 3 Homers Help Macks Win

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, June 27.—Cracking five home runs, three of them by Pinky Higgins, the Athletics larruped the Boston Red Sox, 14 to 2, today in the first engagement of a four-game series.

Higgins, in leading the attack on Wes Ferrell and Henry Johnson, ran his year's total of homer's to six. The three homers set an individual record for the season and drove in five runs.

Braves Sale Held Almost a Certainty

Joe E. Brown and O'Malleys to Be New Owners.

By the United Press.

New York, June 27.—It seemed like an odds-on bet tonight that the beleaguered Boston Braves will be sold within a few days to a combination headed by the millionaire O'Malleys, of Zoston, and bolstered by wide-mouthed, wealthy Joe E. Brown, the movie comedian.

Lengthy conferences today between President Ford C. Frick, of the National League, Charles D. O'Malley and Brown, pushed the sale near to completion, it is generally believed in baseball circles.

Pitcher's Hit Wins Game at Staunton in Eleventh After Long Tie.

STAUNTON, Va., June 27.—Bob Cassel pitched and hit the Front Royal All-Stars, leaders in the Valley League, to another victory here this afternoon at the expense of Staunton, 5 to 4, in 11 innings.

Cassel connected for a single in the eleventh and drove in the winning talley. It was Staunton's sixth loss in seven starts, while it ran Front Royal's winning string to seven. Garbee was in the box for the first time since joining the Staunton ranks and was tapped for 12 hits, mostly scattered.

Stocks Yield To Unfavorable News Features

Northwestern Petition and Copper Break Are Factors.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 27.—The stock market dug its heels in today and gave ground grudgingly to the pressure of several bits of unfavorable news.

Recent Wall street fears over the stability of the copper price structure were confirmed when a producer offered first-hand metal at 8 cents a pound, off a full cent from the "Blue Eagle" level of 9 cents which had been in effect under the copper code since last July.

The rail front likewise supplied its discouraging tidings when the Chicago & North Western Railway, solvent for three-quarters of a century, announced its intention of filing for reorganization under section 77 of the Federal bankruptcy act. Although the move had been foreshadowed in negotiations with large bondholders, it served to dampen enthusiasm for the rail section of the stock and bond lists.

The Associated Press average for 60 stocks was off one-tenth of a point at 43.7, but volume was restricted. The day's turnover, at 736,538 shares, was the smallest since June 10.

Good Weather Lowers Grains

Favorable Reports From Wheat and Corn Belts Dominate Market.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 27.—Despite late reports of threatened damage from black rust in Nebraska wheat fields, grain prices today averaged lower. Favorable weather for the domestic winter wheat harvest in the Southwest and for corn crop progress throughout the corn belt was the principal factor that dominated the markets. Leading trade authorities said tonight tomorrow's action of grain values would largely depend on further advices regarding black rust and on the character of buying which the market develops.

Wheat closed easy at the same as yesterday's finish to ½-cent lower, September 80⅞@81, corn ¼@¾ down, September 81⅜@81½ oats ½@¾ off, and provisions varying from 7 cents decline to 10 cents advance.

Corn and oats gave way with wheat, notwithstanding reports of possible large reductions of corn acreage in Illinois and Iowa.

Bankers' Acceptances Drop to 11-Year Low

New York, June 27.—Outstanding bankers' acceptances fell $38,617,524 in May to $374,755,247, the American Acceptance Council announced yesterday. The total was the lowest since the council began collecting records 11 years ago, and was $194,035,267 below the amount a year ago. Surplus bank funds and business uncertainty continue to be responsible for the shrinking volume, according to Robert H. Bean, executive secretary.

Four-fold Bids For U. S. Bonds

$461,341,000 Tendered for $100,000,000 3 Per Cents.

Secretary of the Treasury announced last night the result of the offering by the Treasury on Monday of $100,000,000, or thereabouts, of 3 per cent Treasury bonds of 1946-48, tenders for which were received at the Federal Reserve banks up to 12 o'clock noon, on Wednesday, June 26.

Tenders for $461,341,000 face amount of bonds were received, of which $112,669,000 was accepted at prices ranging from 103 24-32 down to 103 17-32, and accrued interest from June 15 to July 1, 1935.

The average price of the bonds to be issued is about 103 18-32, and a total premium of $4,005,378.13 will be received.

Based on the average price at which the bonds are to be issued on July 1, 1935, the yield is about 2.62 per cent to the earliest call date, June 15, 1946, and about 2.67 per cent to maturity, June 15, 1948.

U. S. Gold Stocks Rise To $9,109,000,000

Monetary gold stocks of the United States resumed their quarterly upward tendency during the week ended June 26.

Market Moves Of the Day Seen In Brief Review

What the Stock Market Did.

	Thurs.	Wed.
Advances	182	165
Declines	315	372
Unchanged	183	183
Total issues	680	720

Stocks—The market yielded moderately to news of the North Western Railroad's petition to reorganize and the break in the NRA copper price. The volume of 736,538 shares was the lowest since June 10.

Bonds—Secondary issues were driven down 1 to 4 points by the North Western petition. Federals were firm.

Curb—Oil stocks continued weak with mixed closings in other groups; 171,000 shares.

Grains—Favorable weather reports from the winter wheat and corn belts lowered prices. July wheat last at 80; corn, at 81⅜.

Cotton—Except for an early flurry, the market was quiet and closed with net gains of 5 to 6 points. July, at 11.68.

Sugar—Raw sugar was steady at 3.29. Refined closed unchanged at 5.25 for the fine granulated.

Coffee—Spot coffee was quiet. Santos No. 4, last, at 8, and Rio No. 7 last, at 6⅞.

Bar silver—Unchanged in New York at 69½ cents per ounce. In London the last quotations were up 1-16d to 31 1-16d (69.14 cents).

Bar gold—Up 1½ pence to 141 shillings 3 pence in London ($34.91).

$100,000,000 More Treasury Bills Coming

The Secretary of the Treasury gives notice that tenders are invited for two series of Treasury bills to the aggregate amount of $100,000,000 or thereabouts. One series will be 133-day bills and the other series will be 273-day bills. Both series will be sold on a discount basis to the highest bidders. Tenders will be received at the Federal Reserve banks, or the branches thereof, up to 2 p. m., Eastern standard time, on Monday, July 1.

The bills will be in two series—$50,000,000, or thereabouts, maturing on November 13, 1935, and $50,000,000, or thereabouts, maturing on April 1, 1936; each series to be dated July 3, 1935.

Fire Insurance Companies Enjoying Unusually Good Underwriting Year, While Higher Security Prices Also Benefit Their Financial Showing.

By a Special Correspondent.

New York, June 27.—There has been a notable increase this year in investment interest in fire insurance company stocks, along with a material rise in quotations. This development has been caused not only by the general rise in security prices, which increases the market value of the portfolios of these companies, but also by the remarkably small fire losses of recent months.

Fire insurance companies make their earnings from two chief sources. First, they invest their premium income and capital funds in securities, and in this respect operate somewhat like an investment trust. Secondly, they conduct the business of fire underwriting, which is their main activity. This aspect of their business is currently being conducted upon a relatively quite favorable basis, as compared with past years. So far this year, in fact, fire losses have been running at the lowest level since 1915. In fact, on a per capita basis or in relation to aggregate property values, the fire losses of this year are at the lowest annual rate of the century, and it is doubtful whether the record has been better in more than one or two other years since such statistics were first gathered in 1875.

A Succession of Good Underwriting Years.

The excellent loss record of this year is all the more significant because it follows two good underwriting years, 1933 and 1934. According to the National Board of Fire Underwriters, fire losses dropped from $400,000,000 in 1932 to $270,000,000 in 1933 and $275,000,000 in 1934. During the first quarter of this year, they aggregated $73,000,000, a decline of 19 per cent from the $90,000,000 reported for the first quarter of last year.

Insurance men ascribe the sharp decline in fire losses to three main factors. First, there has been a contraction in inventories of most insured business concerns, due to lower prices and the policy of keeping smaller stocks on hand. Secondly, property values have generally dropped. Both these factors are reflected in the fact that the average loss per fire has declined far more sharply than the total number of reported fires.

In the third place, the moral hazard has lessened with the passing of the worst of the depression period. As has often been the case, failures and fire losses have declined sharply together since the bank holiday early in 1933.

This sharp reduction in fire losses has enabled insurance companies to enjoy satisfactory profits from underwriting in most cases, despite the sharp contraction in the volume of premiums received during the depression period because of the decline in values and the inability of some property owners to pay for adequate insurance on their premises. In the boom period of the twenties, competition in the fire insurance field became greatly intensified, many new companies were launched, and the companies generally showed losses on their underwriting activities after paying all expenses as well as losses. Nevertheless, high rates of return and turnover profits on their investments enabled them to show large earnings on their capital. Thus, they became more dependent upon investment than insurance income, and many of the companies closely resembled general management investment trusts in their operating methods.

Depend Less on Investment Income.

The depression has brought about a great change in this situation. Since large profits on investments are no longer available, the companies have had to concentrate on the task of making underwriting profitable. The low loss ratio has greatly helped in this connection, as have efforts of fire insurance companies to operate more efficiently and economically so as to cut their expenses. As a result, with investment conditions now once more favorable, both for companies that favor gilt-edge bonds for their portfolios and those that invest their reserves in common stocks in substantial measure, and with underwriting experience remarkably good, the companies face an unusually satisfactory year. In addition, the tendency for premiums to expand again with rising business and values will be helpful.

There is concern among the insurance men, however, over the pressure in many States for a lowering of rates. They stress the fact that the current good underwriting experience can not be counted upon to continue indefinitely. Hence, to reduce rates now because fire losses are unusually low would leave the companies in a vulnerable position should losses rise again within the next few years, for premium income would then be insufficient to cover the losses that might then be incurred.

Copper at 8 Cents Cuts NRA Price

New York, June 27 (AP).—Copper metal was offered in the New York market by a producer today at 8 cents a pound, a break of a full cent from the "Blue Eagle" price of 9 cents which had been maintained since July of last year.

A little second-hand copper had been offered between 8 and 8½ cents since the collapse of the NRA, but today was the first time first-hand copper had been offered under the old "Blue Eagle" price, which big producers have struggled to maintain. At 8 cents, copper was the lowest since March of 1934.

Standard Power Output Up.

Chicago, June 27.—Electric output of Standard Gas and Electric Co. for the week ended June 22, 1935, totaled 85,987,169 kilowatt-hours, an increase of 4.2 per cent compared with the corresponding week last year.

St. Paul to Join North Western In Bankruptcy

Two Great Railroads at Last Surrender to Financial Woes.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 27.—Jesse Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, said tonight that the directors of the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific Railroad had agreed to file a petition for reorganization under Section 77 of the Federal bankruptcy act.

Jones said that he conferred today with H. A. Scandrett, president of the St. Paul, and that all differences between the RFC and the carrier had been settled.

"It is my understanding that the directors are in agreement on the decision to file for reorganization under Section 77 of the bankruptcy act and that action will be taken Saturday or Monday in the Chicago Federal district court," said Jones.

The St. Paul board met this afternoon and adjourned without making a formal announcement on the trend of discussion, although it was understood the reorganization plan was to be the topic. Scandrett after the meeting left for Chicago with the promise that an announcement would be made Saturday afternoon either from New York or Chicago on the reorganization proposals.

Although a decision in regard to payment of July 1 interest on the St. Paul's general mortgage bonds was expected to be reached today, Jones said he understood the question did not come before the board.

North Western Files Reorganization Plea

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 27.—With the decision today of directors of Chicago & North Western Railway Co., to file a petition with the courts for reorganization, this 8,000-mile rail giant put a finish to one of the most extraordinary financial histories in railroad annals.

Serving for over three-quarters of a century the great agricultural region north and west of Chicago, and connecting with the Union Pacific to form the historic "Overland Route" to San Francisco, the road had weathered all varieties of economic weal and woe while maintaining a rare position as one of the few major carriers never to have resorted to reorganization.

The unprecedented drought and depression is assigned by officials of the road as the chief source of the present difficulties.

The bankruptcy plea has been foreshadowed for some time by negotiations under way between officials of the carrier and leading creditors, principally the large insurance companies, for a voluntary readjustment of the debt structure. These negotiations will be continued, the announcement stated. It is hoped that a plan for reorganization can be presented within 90 days.

In explaining today's action the official announcement stated: "By filing a petition under section 77 (of the Federal bankruptcy act) we will inaugurate jurisdictional steps looking to assistance of the Interstate Commerce Commission in bringing about the approval of the plan."

Causes of Difficulties.

Attributing the present difficulties to "a combination of causes," the official announcement listed these in the order of their importance as:

"The long-continued depression, four years of unprecedented drought in our agricultural regions, the great growth of unregulated and subsidized competitive forms of transportation, high taxes imposed on railroads by State and local assessing bodies, and, more recently, the restoration of the 10 per cent wage decrease, plus increases in costs of materials and supplies due to the application of the codes in the past year."

Canadian Dividends Highest in History

Toronto, June 27.—Dividends by Canadian corporations in June established a high record for any month in the history of the Dominion, surpassing the previous mark established in December, 1930, by almost $5,000,000. The distributions, as reported to E. A. Pierce & Co., members of the Toronto and New York Stock Exchanges, were $55,054,508, contrasted with $41,298,349 for June, 1934, and $17,993,417 for June, 1933.

Utility Bonds Offered Today

$18,594,000 Consumers Power 3¾ Per Cents Priced at 100.

For the purpose of retiring outstanding debt bearing a higher rate of interest, a new issue of $18,594,000 Consumers Power Co., the Michigan operating unit of the Commonwealth and Southern system, first lien and unifying mortgage bonds, 3¾ per cent. Series of 1935, due 1965, is being placed on the market today by a banking group headed by Bonbright & Co., Inc., and including First Boston Corporation, Brown, The Harriman & Co., Inc., E. W. Clark & Co. and Coffin & Burr, Inc. The bonds, which are dated May 1, 1935, and due May 1, 1965, are priced at 100 and accrued interest.

For the 12 months ended May 31, the company reported gross earnings of $29,341,062, against $28,685,138 for the calendar year 1934, and $26,000,000 for the calendar year 1933. Net earnings available for interest for the 12 months ended May 31, 1935, after all deductions including retirement reserves, totaled $12,103,236, against $12,006,261 for 1934 and $11,628,341 for 1933, and are 2.94 times annual interest requirements after providing for retirement reserves.

Brokers' Loans Increase.

Loans on securities to brokers and dealers held by weekly reporting member banks in New York City amounted to $904,000,000 during the week ended June 26, representing an increase of $46,000,000 for the week.

Bond Prices Hit by Railway Developments

Secondary Road Issues Lose From 1 to 4 Points.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 27.—Investment enthusiasm for low-priced railroad bonds, a feature of the bond market for several weeks, was dampened considerably today by announcement of the Chicago & North Western that it would discontinue its efforts toward reorganization under section 77 of the bankruptcy act. The news caused a wave of selling which seeped into all parts of the second-grade carrier group and forced prices down 1 to 4 points.

Financial quarters were not taken by surprise by the North Western's move, but the bond market until today apparently had assumed that the road would find it possible to readjust its finances by agreement with its largest bondholders and thus escape reorganization under court supervision.

Some of the North Western loans were pushed down 2 to 4 points and there was little rally from the low levels.

Cotton Steady, Trading Light

Market Closes With Net Advances of From 5 to 6 Points.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 27.—Except for an early flurry, trading in cotton was quiet today, with the market closing steady at net advances of 5 to 6 points. Traders found no fresh inspiration in overnight news or the showing of Liverpool cables, but a featureless opening was followed by increased activity attributed to covering on the continued tightness of the spot situation and rather less favorable weather prospects for Texas.

Oils Continue Weak on Curb

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 27.—Mixed trends were again in evidence in Curb Market dealings today. Final price changes, however, were mostly narrow. Oils extended their losses of the previous session while alcohols improved.

Distillers Corporation-Seagrams and Hiram Walker ended moderately higher as did Sunshine Mining, Swift International and Electric Bond & Share. Declines of fractions to around a point were recorded by Gulf Oil, International Petroleum, Humble Oil, Pittsburgh Plate Glass, American Gas & Electric and American Cyanamid "B". Transfers approximated 171,000 shares compared with 176,000 the preceding day.

New York, June 27, (AP).—Directors of the Hercules Powder Co. have voted to redeem 18,000 shares of 7 per cent preferred stock on next November 15, at $120 plus accrued dividends. The shares to be redeemed will be determined by lot.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

Foreign exchange rates maintained an even keel in principal markets of the world yesterday.

Gold currencies rose a little in London, but the rise was quickly checked, evidently by control selling, and rates were virtually unchanged in New York.

The dollar closed in London at 4.94 to the pound, and the pound was later quoted in New York at $4.94¼, or close to yesterday's final level.

The dollar closed officially in Paris at 15.0075 francs, and the franc was later quoted at 6.63⅛ cents in New York, unchanged.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London—Traders on the stock exchange were mostly occupied with week-end settlement arrangements today. Profit-taking caused many industrials to ease, while new issues checked gilt-edged securities. Oil and gold mining shares hardened. The transatlantic issues were uncertain. The market closed irregular.

Paris—Rentes improved and industrials held steady in a quiet session on the bourse today. International issues were irregular and Rio tintos declined while Sues shares advanced. The market closed irregular.

Berlin—A firm tone prevailed at the opening of the bourse today. The declining turnover failed to cause a drop in prices, and the market closed sustained.

The Big Whittling Slump.

There's a whittling depression! The worst in whittling history, in fact.

* * * *

And what puzzles the economists is that this should be so in a period when conditions for whittling were never better.

* * * *

Whittlers all over the United States are suffering for the lack of something to whittle. The substitution of paper, cardboard and cellophane for wooden containers is responsible. While the village store whittlers have been hardest hit, due to the wooden box shortage, whittlers everywhere have felt it.

* * * *

"Save the American whittlers!" is the cry of the day, and Huey Long was first to take advantage of the crisis with a three-point program for whittling security:

1. Share the wood!
2. Free jacknives for all!
3. An old-age pension for all whittlers over 30!

* * * *

"I am for the whittlers to the last shaving!" said Huey. "The whittler is the jackbone—beg pardon, backknife—I mean backbone of American life. Whittling keeps a man from thinking too much and the less thinking he does the better for my career."

* * * *

President Roosevelt and his advisers went into a huddle on the whittling crisis at once, the White House declaring that a permanent place in society must be carved for the whittler.

* * * *

"I am for the little whittler against the big whittler," a White House statement said. "Destroy the small whittler and you strike a blow at thrift and shavings."

* * * *

It is understood a bill will be framed to restore wooden boxes to American life and take as much wood from the rich as possible. (Confiscation of polo mallets and walking sticks is an immediate goal.—Ed.)

Ex-President Hoover expressed himself as against Federal meddling in the whittling situation. "The old-fashioned American always will, if left alone," said Mr. Hoover.

Time Will Tell.

The Carnera-Louis fight was a thriller, but we won't know whether it was the battle of the year until Gen. Johnson begins running New York's relief work.

What the President evidently wants is streamline taxation.

The Brown Bomber won from Carnera in three straight falls.

The recovery must!

$10,000 Reward

By Harry J. Tuthill

Yes Count, the Colonel informs me you have lost some papers.... plans for the new bomber planes.
What! The bomber? I said not one word about that, Oakdale. How do you know about...?
Oh...well..oh I just guessed it. You being in munitions, Count, made it natural for me to suppose....
So! A very clever answer, Oakdale. I see you have learn many things since the day I watch you cleaning a rifle in Algeria, eh?
Ah..yes, Count, you did see me there as a common soldier. Ah, I was under orders..
What, you were in secret work then, too? So! How long have you been with those fellows who wanted the plans of our bomber?
Oh I'm out of that sort of work now, Count. Really, I mean it. I'm....
A clever rogue. Listen Oakdale, return the plans and I double the price these other fellows pay you. Double. How much? I go $10,000 Cash!

Water Lily Gardens Are Object Of Wanderbird Anacostia Tour

Exotic Flowers Now in Full Bloom; Frogs, Turtles Enliven Scene.

By Robert Shosteck.

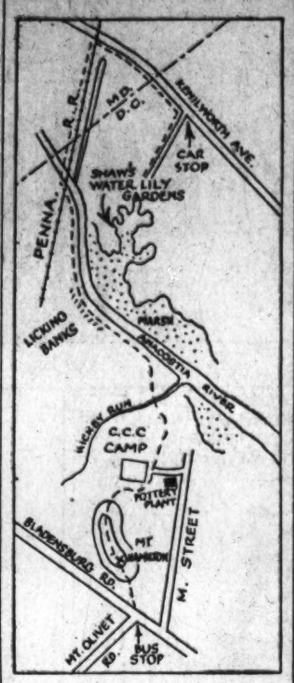
Sunday's trip up the placid Anacostia Valley will afford members of the Wanderbirds Hiking Club an opportunity to view one of the finest water-lily gardens in the country and to see a model CCC camp at the foot of the Mount Hamilton Ridge on the site of the National Arboretum.

Club members and readers of The Washington Post planning to go on this 5-mile hike will meet at the Treasury at 10:20 in time for the 10:30 car to Kenilworth. Hikers may board this car anywhere along New York avenue or on H street, getting off at Douglas street, one block from the District Line. The gardens are about one-half mile to the left, at the end of the street.

Mr. Shaw, proprietor of this interesting park, informs us that all of the beautiful aquatic plants are now in bloom. The exotic Egyptian and Japanese lotus, the hardy white American water-lily, and the tropical blue water-lily almost choke the ponds. Many species of native frogs cavort on the broad lily pads, dextrously nabbing gnats and flies with their whip-like tongues. Several local species of turtles and snakes have likewise been introduced, all finding these ponds quite to their liking.

Leaving the ponds, the group will return to Kenilworth avenue, which is followed to the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks, just beyond the District Line. A path borders the tracks for about a mile to the far side of the Anacostia River.

Here we follow the river side trail past the Licking Banks, a half-mile of palisade along the river which was famous for its colonies of bank swallows. On the other side of the river and below the banks lies a long, flat marsh, now drained and being filled in. This marsh was once the home of thousands of rice-birds which annually flocked to Washington to feast upon the wild rice which covered these vast acres in the fall. The painted turtle, once so common here, has likewise disappeared before the onslaught of steam dredge.



We cross Hickey Run and follow a dirt road through the woods and then through fields to the old pottery plant and clay pits at Twenty-eighth and M streets northeast. The CCC camp is but a short distance from here, and is located on the site of the National Arboretum an 800-acre tract set aside by the Federal Government. Here will be laid out a gigantic testing station in which will be planted, for experimental purposes, nearly every variety of tree that will thrive in our climate. Within this tract may be found about every type of soil from rich bottoms or clay hillsides to rocky and gravelly eroded areas. The CCC boys are doing the preliminary clearing work and occupy a large barracks which the group will tour under the guidance of Lieut. Hatke.

The Wanderbirds will next visit Poplar Spring, one of the largest and oldest in Northeast. It is located at the foot of the bridge and is hidden by a grove of silvery-barked poplars. From here an excellent trail follows the crest of the Mount Hamilton ridge for nearly a mile to the highest point which is about 250 feet above sea level. A pure stand of chestnut oaks covers this ridge, one of the few stands of this species to be found in Washington. The wild crabapple, the thorn tree and paulownia, as well as many park escapes, have become naturalized in this area. Both the yellow-star grass and the blue-eye grass, miniatures of the amaryllis and iris, respectively, are found in abundance on this ridge.

A rapid descent soon brings us to Bladensburg road, where we await the Fifteenth and H northeast bus, which runs at frequent intervals. After a three-minute ride, one can transfer for the Treasury car at Fifteenth and H streets, reaching downtown in about 12 to 15 minutes.

• • • •

The new summer schedule of Wanderbird tours, to be distributed this Sunday, announces 12 trips, 11 of which include swimming at the end of the trip.

These schedules may be obtained at The Post counter or by writing to the club, care of The Post. A dozen copies of "Forest Trees of the District of Columbia" are still available at 20 cents or 25 cents, postpaid.

Broadway

By Ed Sullivan

The Reviewing Stand.

New York, June 27

Late spots getting the heaviest play on Broadway these sultry nights are the establishments which feature shooting galleries, bagatelle games and the like . . . They get a steady patronage, night after night, because of their prize system . . . In a night's diversion, you can probably total from 8 to 20 points at the various games, so you return the next night to amass additional coupons entitling you to a better prize . . . I know one couple who attend three nights a week . . . Last night they got enough points to get a seltzer siphon . . . Previously, they had won a clock for 135 points . . . The games are all priced at a nickel . . . They tell me the owners have cleaned up a fortune, and I can quite believe it, for at 2 a. m. you will see 50 or 60 persons still playing, and the steady stream of nickels reaches Woolworthian totals . . . I got up to eight points last night, and felt quite the conquering hero, but the regulars sneered at me.

• • • •

Some time back, in this column, I told you of Charlie Weeghman, the former Chicago multimillionaire, who went broke trying to organize the Federal Baseball League . . . Since that column send-off, Weeghman's restaurant has been doing great business . . . Dempsey's continues to get the big play on fight nights . . . Spotted there after the Louis-Carnera fight: Joe E. Brown, Loretta Young, James J. Braddock, Bert Taylor, Lucius Ordway, Commissioner Bert Stand, Vince Dundee, Walter Howie, Pete Llanuza, Gus Edson, Bill McCaffrey . . . Louis is the first natural fighter to show up on the heavyweight horizon in many years . . . most attractive of the sidewalk dining spots is the Flying Trapeze . . . Chatham Walk, which really inaugurated the Frenchie custom, continues to jam 'em in for lunch, with the St. Moritz sidewalk cafe getting the late play.

• • • •

Whoever decorated the Stork Club rates a bow . . . Sprays of ferns give it a tone of coolness unmatched in town . . . The owner is an Oklahoma boy who made good in the big city, Sherman Billingsley . . . He was born in Enid, Okla . . . The town was named in novel fashion . . . Most distinctive place in town was a restaurant . . . Plastered on the plate glass was a huge sign: "Dine Here" . . . The rugged pioneers just reversed "Dine" and got Enid . . . Best Rhine wine in town is at the Colony . . . Col. Jacob Ruppert and George Perry were sampling some of it when I saw them last night . . . Most gorgeous of the local society beauties: Mrs. Allan Ryan, slim breath-taker . . . Warren Brown is in town . . . With him, the attractive, dark-haired Missus, Mary-Elizabeth and Bill . . . Ruddiest man in town is Joe Ruddy, New York A. C. veteran . . . You generally see him on Broadway with John Curran, water polo star.

• • • •

Hostesses in Broadway's dime-a-dance places, like Roseland, tip each other off in a numerical code . . . For instance, if you have danced there with one girl, and you ask her to introduce you to another of the fair partners, she will include in the introduction a terse description of you . . . If she mentions "one," she is tipping her colleague that you are a good spender and good company . . . If she mentions "two," it means that you are all right socially, but a terrible dancer . . . "Eight" is the signal that you are one of those married pests, whose wife doesn't understand him . . . And if she mentions "thirteen," you'll have a tough time getting a dancing partner . . . Aside to Louis Lipstone, Chicago Theater: Thanks, Lou-Lou! . . . Most stunning view from any night club: The Hudson River uncoiling itself 200 feet below the dining deck of Ben Marden's Riviera.

• • • •

Gus Edwards, besides discovering talent, is a talented rummy player . . . I played with him, Tom Patricola, Anatole Friedland and Buck Buxbaum recently . . . The power-of-the-press wound up behind the eight ball, which is an island on green baize on a billiard table reserved for also rans . . . Best of the card players in the newspaper colony is Gene McHugh . . . I'll have to match him against Edwards some night . . . Incidentally, Gus and Lil Edwards celebrate their thirtieth anniversary shortly . . . Automotive note: Marvin Schenck, Loew tycon, gave his wife a new 12-cylinder car as a present . . . Louis Prima, N'Orleans kid, is still packing them in at the Famous Door with his "hot" band . . . Every celeb in the country goes there, leaving his autograph on the door which gives the place its name.

• • • •

Note to Fred Astaire: Nicholas Brothers tell me you were very nice—thank you, sir! . . . There has arrived at this desk a brochure from Earl Carroll, with pictures of the scantily clad Carroll beauties . . . The foreword is by O. O. McIntyre, who is not scantily attired . . . The most appetizing dish, I think, is a Welsh rarebit, but I can't eat the darn things . . . RKO promotes Arthur Willi to Eastern flicker talent scout, with his vaudeville spot unfilled . . . Max Baer, by keeping still and accepting his Braddock beating nicely, has made more friends since losing his title than he ever had when he was champ . . . He even took a bawling out from Mark Kelly at Dinty Moore's without saying a word . . . There's hope for the young man.
